

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

William Mather Lewis, President of George Washington University, says that "the safety of the Nation depends on the recognition of the need of patriotic education in the schools of the country."

White school teachers in South Carolina receive an average daily wage of $2.75, according to a recent study made by a university class in school administration. Compared to the teachers' wages, statistics presented show that South Carolina plumbers receive an average daily wage of $11.25, steamfitters $11.25, stonecutters $8, bricklayers $7.20, sheet metal workers $6.40 to $8, and carpenters $4 to $6.

While South Carolina's statistics may not be the average for the entire country, they are indicative of a fact which is well recognized—that the teaching profession is badly underpaid.

"But," says the economist, "the law of supply and demand takes care of the situation; teachers are willing to accept little, therefore little is paid." But the economist forgets that teachers are willing to accept little because the country is satisfied with teachers willing to accept little. We are willing to have our children taught by teachers often but little less ignorant than their scholars.

With a full recognition of the wonderful band of devoted men and women who are well trained, able, anxious to serve, who teach because they would rather teach than do anything else, it is nevertheless a fact that, taken as a whole, our schools are taught by those who have not prepared for that vocation, who are not able to teach well, because they know little, who are acceptable because they are cheap, not because they are able.

Can any one teach patriotism? If we are willing to have patriotic ideals inculcated by men and women who could not stand an examination on American history, how can we expect our children to grow up patriots? If Dr. Lewis is right and patriotism taught in the schools is more important than the usual school subjects, is it not high time we looked to our school budgets, to make sure they are large enough to buy the services of those who understand and can teach that love of country, without which all American education is useless?

HIGHEST COURT IN KENTUCKY UPHOLDS

TOBACCO POOL LAW

The Bingham co-operative marketing act, under which the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association and the dark tobacco pool were formed, was declared constitutional and valid by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, the highest judicial tribunal in the state, in a unanimous decision here today, Judge Ernest S. Clarge writing the opinion, which sustains the act at every point.

The Bingham law not only is held constitutional by the decision, which was handed down in the case of Lee Potter, of McCracken county, against the dark pool, but the right of the associations organized under the law to the delivery of crops pledged to them, the right to damages and to injunctions to compel the delivery of crops is sustained.

The Bingham act is regarded as the most far-reaching of any of the state co-operative marketing laws in the protection it gives the co-operative associations, and the fact that it is sustained by the highest court in the state will probably end the practice of some disloyal members in dumping their crops on the auction floors.

The court holds that the Bingham act is not in restraint of trade, that the contract is a mutual one and that the growers must comply with their part of it by turning over their crops to be marketed by the association.

THE LOSS CAUSED BY COLDS

The majority of people in the U. S. are more or less subject to the disagreeable ailment commonly called a "cold." Many folks get this malady a number of times during the year and are rendered very miserable. Some have to go to bed. Others would be better off if they did. By keeping at work they get all tired out, and are not able to resist more serious infections. The working power of the country must be considerably lowered by this ailment.

If people would avoid the causes that lead to colds, they would save a great deal of discomfort and some peril.

The people who live out of doors as much as possible, who take plenty of good fresh air into their sleeping rooms, are in much less danger of getting colds. The human body was not meant to be lived up in closely shut buildings, and people who follow this unnatural course take chances.

Speak gently, smile sweetly, give liberally. That is what Christ would do were he on earth today.

WINNING FOR 1924.

For a multitude of concerns, January 1 begins a new business as well as calendar year. The managers and executives are laying careful plans as to what they will accomplish during the new twelve months. Mr. Mar's are aimed at which their trade is to their expected total, they are likely to have to explain the reason.

"So in every life it is a good idea to lay out definite ends which one hopes to attain in the coming year. People should form plans for improving their mental equipment, their training for their occupation, their savings of money, their physical health."

There is too much tendency to drift along from day to day without planning for the future. January 1 is a good time to take account of stock of life, and decide whether the past year brought all the gains it should, and what can be done to secure greater results in 1924.

THE PASSING YEAR.

Many people, looking back at the year 1923, will say it has been unsatisfactory. They will decide that with Europe in turmoil, little progress has been made toward bringing the world to a better state of mind, which has acted as a drag on the welfare of the United States.

Yet notable results have been achieved. The business and industrial progress of the country has been such that it is generally admitted that the United States can get along with lower taxes. It seems probable, unless Congress is deadlocked, that the burdens resting upon the people will be lightened. Anyway the big war debt is being reduced, which means that better days are in store.

It is also significant, that there have been no very serious labor troubles in this country. The threat of extensive strikes was quickly removed by compromises. Both parties decided that it was better to adjust than to fight. This has been a great assistance in preventing an industrial depression.

In the world field, while the prophets have been predicting wars and more wars, very little disposition for actual fighting has been shown. It has been proved that no matter how much political leaders may brandish their weapons and utter their menaces, the people have no stomach for more fighting. As long as they keep that attitude, there will be no wars.

The world's sorest spot is the Franco-German situation. The year has been devoted by those two countries to a test of their respective strength. Both have acted unwisely, yet sometimes people and nations have to try out such experiences before they can see the light of reason. They have learned about how far they can go as the result of actual fighting has been shown. There are signs that they are now going to make a little step toward co-operation.

SCORE LAW VIOLATIONS.

Declaring that law violations have become appalling, that citizens and officials condone lawlessness, and asserting that self-constituted law enforcers are plunging the nation down the path of destruction, the Georgia Baptist convention at its closing session here called on every member of the denomination in Georgia to exert his influence to rectify a condition which is jeopardizing the well-being of the United States.

Introduced by W. W. Gaines, president of the Atlanta board of education and chairman of the Baptist program committee, who presided a resolution was passed by the convention as its final act. The resolution was ordered printed in the Christian Index, and copies sent to every Baptist minister in the state with the request that it be read to the congregations. Request was also made that the message be given to all county papers for publication.

The prohibition laws are violated with impunity in both high places and low, the resolution declared; it was stated that this disregard of one statute would lead to a general contempt for law and constituted authority.

MORE THAN 96,000

MEMBERS NOW IN

THE BURLEY POOL

Membership in the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association, not counting the contracts of persons not growing tobacco who have signed contracts out of friendship for the Association and not counting employees of the Association, almost all of whom have signed contracts, totaled Friday, 96,267, according to a statement given out by William Collins, chief of the field service division.

Some one asks how the custom of having a holiday on New Year's originated? Possibly because the folks who saw the old year out were too sleepy to accomplish much the next day.

MARY JANE ROBBINS.

Mary Jane Robbins, wife of Addison Robbins, died at her home in Burlington, Tuesday night, Dec. 24, 1923, after a week's illness of pneumonia, in her 87th year.

She was born in East Bend, Sept. 22, 1836, and had been a resident of the county all her life. She was a daughter of Steve Mock.

She was married to Addison Robbins, Dec. 21, 1852, and she and her husband had lived happily together for more than seventy-one years. To this union six children were born, Mrs. Sarah Mitchell, Frank and S. J. Robbins, Mrs. Nancy Batchelor, Mrs. Lizzie Eddins, and Keene Robbins, who preceded her to the grave many years ago.

After a short funeral service at the home the remains were taken to Big Bone, Friday, Dec. 28th, at 11 o'clock, and buried in the cemetery at that place.

She was a member of the Methodist church and the funeral was in charge of her pastor, Rev. Gillespie. She is survived by her husband and five children all residents of this county.

Philip Taliaferro, of Erlanger, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Louisville, Ky. — Prevention and eradication of disease as more important than attempts to cure, with the goal in view of prolonging the lives of Kentuckians by many years, is the program for 1924 just announced by Dr. A. T. McCormack, Secretary of the State Board of Health.

The purpose of the campaign among the Kentucky doctors and laymen, is an examination of every man, woman and child on their birthdays. This would assure an annual physical examination. In notifying the doctor of their plan to move toward longevity, Dr. McCormack says:

"If you are careful, painstaking and conscientious, it will mean more to the health of our people and to the ultimate success of our profession, as its guardian, than any other campaign that ever was started. It is important that all routine examinations should include a careful study of the teeth and throat. It has been definitely demonstrated that a majority of the most severe infections which cause invalidism and death, come from diseases of the teeth and from infected tonsils."

"In this State, every patient suffering from chronic illness should have a routine examination for malaria and the intestinal parasites."

"Conservatism should be the rule in suggesting surgical operations; but this should include the conserving of health. Carefully and skillfully made and sympathetically and delicately explained to the patients, systematic physical examination will do more to promote the public health than any other movement which has ever been undertaken by the medical profession."

GET BEHIND YOUR TEACHER

Now that the holidays are over, the children have had a restful and happy vacation from school work, the parents have dedicated themselves anew to this kind of "peace on earth" which makes for a better world for their children, and we have all settled down to a term of enthusiastic accomplishment, isn't it a good time for parents and school trustees to show their appreciation of the work of the teacher? Next to the parents no one is so interested in the children's welfare, so devoted to their general growth and development as well as their school education as the teacher. Her work will be far more effective if the children know that the parents and trustees believe in her, trust her judgment, and back her up in her ideals and her decisions. She will be happier as well as more effective in doing it if the appreciation that is in the hearts of the people of the community finds expression occasionally in words, in occasional hospitalities extended, and in other small acts of consideration. Get behind your teacher.

A large delegation of citizens from this part of the State will go to Frankfort next Monday to boost Samuel W. Adams, Kenton county Representative, for Speaker of the House of Representatives. The delegation will be accompanied by a band. Mr. Adams is a former Boone county boy, who has made a success at the Kenton county bar, and his many friends in old Boone wish him success in his race, and he feels confident he will win. Mr. Adams has received many letters from Representatives in all sections of the State assuring him of their support.

B. C. Tanner and S. H. Aylor, two of the Recorder's good friends of Florence, were transacting business in the county seat, last Thursday. They called at the Recorder's office and paid their initiation fee for another year.

NEW YEAR'S DAY

The need of getting a convenient division of time into days and years which correspond with the movements of the earth and sun, is not so clear an explanation of the New Year's festival.

We seek constantly a realization of completeness, of a beginning, a middle and the end. Life which is formless, have form given it. It must have its stopping places, where it relaxes by a fire and is genial.

The New Year's festival is an inn which folks reach at the end of a long journey. They sit a while and are merry. They take up their journey again.

As a matter of convenience we call January 1st New Year, whereas a matter of fact every day is a New Year, and a life time is the only period of existence that we need be concerned for, our lives do not ebb and flow like ocean tides nor change with the seasons.

Life is a whole, and will be as perfect as we choose to make it.

The more careful our preparation for taking up the duty of living the more readily can we adapt ourselves to the ways of the world, and greater will be our usefulness as well as our share of comfort and peace.

Custom has designated New Year's as a time for starting over again—as a day for beginning a new effort—a determination to rise above past weaknesses and failures. A long time ago Oliver Goldsmith said: "Our greatest glory is not in never failing, but in rising every time we fall." We are going to stumble and fall—as citizens, as states, and as nations—mistakes will be made.

The need of the hour is good citizenship—and that does not mean following blindly ambitious and defining men with little sympathy in the perpetuation of republican institutions. Men who have no particular interest in the general welfare of the people or the advancement of civilization and Christianity except as it contributes to their personal political power or wealth.

Every man and woman could be made to feel that they are every fiber of their being that they are individual stockholders in this great co-operative government—that no man on earth has more right to his say-so than you have, then, and not till then, will good citizenship be fully recognized and pure democracy rule.

This is a fitting season to discard the selfish attitude of self-depreciation and demand the best there is in self and in the world.

May it be a Happy and Prosperous New Year to all readers and to all peoples. Is the sincere wish of the

RECORDER

The Democratic party is drier than ever—drier by several wringings apparently than it was last summer when glib Democratic states stood out boldly for modification of the Volstead act, and when it was announced that ex-president Wilson was drawing up a platform that would contain such a plank. A recent canvass of the states shows that 29 out of 45 states are opposed to prohibition; 15 are non-committal and 3 make no reply. As the clouds lay to day there will be no wet plank in any platform.

HELP YOURSELF.

Do you expect to see the end of 1924?

You may, and then you may not. But if you are as wise as others give you credit for being, you will take ordinary precautions in your efforts to live out another year of us.

Eat simple food, and don't gorge. Masticate your food thoroughly. Chew it twice as long as you have been in the habit of doing.

Get the habit of deep breathing. Exercise for half an hour each day, and take a brisk walk before breakfast.

Take plenty of sleep, and KEEP A WINDOW OPEN. Fresh air at night is as necessary as food in the day-time.

There's nothing difficult in any of these, but they will make a different person of you if you give them a chance.

Do something for yourself, and don't expect the Lord to do it all. You don't want to loaf, and we don't want to be shedding tears over your remains in 1924.

While Omer Porter, Mrs. Carrie Riddell, Mrs. Pace and daughter, were driving along the road below Petersburg in Mrs. Riddell's auto, last Friday, a team of mules traveling in the same direction behind them, got scared and ran off. Mr. Porter, who was driving the auto saw the mules coming and tried to get out of the way, but before he succeeded the tongue of the wagon had been jammed against the back end of the car. Fortunately, the only damage done was the breaking of the glass and hitting the end of the car considerably.

Merchants having surplus holiday and winter stock would better pay a little for advertising in the RECORDER, rather than take chances on carrying it over to another year.

THE BLACK CLOUD.

Our Country and its constitution have withstood successfully the tremendous strain of readjustment after the World War and during the past year the shocks occasioned by the death of a President, a national coal strike, agitation for ex-service bonus and farmers' bonus, an earthquake calamity in Japan, a financial and industrial collapse in China, not to mention the European situation—all this without serious disturbance in our business, industrial or financial circles. The greatest menace to Our Country is caused by boring from within and undermining the character of the American people by socialistic and communistic experiments. These experiments, undertaken in the name of municipal, state and federal ownership and operation of industries come about as the result of high-brow theorists and political agitators. Once established and fastened upon the people, always with a chain no one is responsible for their successful conduct or maintenance. The theorists and agitators have new fish to fry, new experiments to propose. They are neither executives nor administrators, and not concerned about results. Their only aspiration is to get political power at the hands of the people, but always at the expense of the governed and the consumer who must produce the wealth to pay the bills. Continued agitation for so-called nationalizing of industries, and various forms of government ownership, weakens industry and the entire economic structure by injecting an element of political uncertainty. Investments fall off, enterprises are not undertaken because the legitimate functions of private business are interfered with by political encroachment. Politics and business simply do not mix. Serious minded thinking business men, who plan great industrial undertakings, have to look out for their necks over long periods of years, find their efforts blighted and paralyzed by the uncertainties of political jockeying. The multiplicity of government activities, creation of more regulatory commissions, enactment of more laws shaking and destroying the foundations of individual enterprise, are the black clouds looming up on the national horizon.

One person advanced by the country reason for leaving the farm and jumping into the big cities is that there are no advantages in the country. To our way of thinking this is a wrong idea. A man on the farm, if he is thrifty and industrious, can have an automobile, a phonograph, a radio, electric lights, piano, telephone, play grounds for the children, pure water, milk and fresh vegetables. There are not many "cliff dwellers" in the cities who are enjoying these luxuries. It is true in the cities there are better school facilities, but this is also coming to the country. Some of these days there is going to be a swing to the country, and then land will be too high for the man with ordinary means to buy.

Edwin M. Gaines, a former Boone county boy, but now of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was a winner of a $500 prize offered by the Wisconsin News to the owner of the best home. There were three $500 prizes divided into three classes: A, B and C. Mr. Gaines was first in class C, the qualifications for which called for homes costing over $14,000. A copy of the News carrying a picture of Edwin and his $14,000 mansion was received at this place one day last week. You can't keep a better looking Boone county home. His many friends back in his Old Kentucky Home are glad to hear of his good luck.

The pool tobacco growers all over the Burley district are rightly pleased with the advances being made by the Co-operative Association, as they are higher than last year. The advance the Association is making is very near the independent floor average, and will receive two more payments when the tobacco is sold. The Association has about 36,000,000 pounds of last year's crop unsold, and it is all of the best grades. Poolers all over the district are passing resolutions asking the Association's officials not to be in a hurry to sell the remainder of the 1922 tobacco and to hold a still-price on the weed.

Would you believe that the people of Boone county spent last year for automobiles, accessories and gasoline not less than $1,500 per day—about $500,000 a year? Add to this the tremendous sum that leaves the county for necessities of life and it will be seen that there is a steady drain on our resources. This vast sum of money is being centralized in large manufacturing cities. This is one reason that our young people are going to the cities. They are following our money.

The 1923 Christmas mail was the largest ever passed through the Burlington postoffice.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

With thousands of "fake" physicians and, according to Dr. May, 40,000 "unfit" surgeons, added to several hundred correspondence school prescription clerks, poor, sick and suffering humanity stands about as much show as the "snow ball hell" that an eminent Episcopal clergyman referred to last week. Under the circumstances anti-vivisectionists should withdraw their objections to letting the "students" experiment on dumb animals. They must experiment to obtain experience, and it may save a few thousand lives to let the dog, cat, rabbit or mouse be the goat.

The robbery of stores and homes of goods is growing by leaps and bounds. There are well-known places to sell these goods or the robbers would quit the business. The courts in the large cities should sting the men hard who are buying and dealing in stolen goods, and robbery of the kind would cease. They would not steal goods if there was not a good market for them. Laws should be passed with real teeth in them to handle the man who buys stolen goods.

The Christmas exercises at the Burlington M. E. church, Monday evening, Dec. 24th, was a decided success. Everything went off in "apple pie" order, and the entire program was enjoyed by all those present. Too much praise cannot be given those who had charge of the program. The singers acquitted themselves in fine fashion. Distribution of presents were made from the Christmas tree.

Robert W. Gaines, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gaines, of Erlanger, and Miss Shirley, daughter of S. W. Tolin of Burlington, were married last Friday evening at Latonia, by Rev. H. C. Runyan, of the Christian church. Their many friends in Boone county join with the Recorder in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous journey through life.

Five young ladies of the Petersburg Christian church choir, chaperoned by Rev. R. H. Carter, visited Burlington, last Thursday evening, and entertained a crowd at the B. E. store with several selections in a beautiful manner. These young ladies deserve great praise for their sweet voices. Come again, and stay longer.

W. W. Goodridge, of the Hebron neighborhood, was a visitor to the Recorder office last Friday. He made the Recorder office a pleasant call and renewed Mrs. Fannie Tanner's subscription for another year. Mrs. Tanner has been a loyal friend of the Recorder for many years.

Vigil Gaines, who has been recognized the National Cash Register Co., of Dayton, Ohio, as a salesman at Oakland, Calif., for the past two years has been at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gaines, out on the Petersburg pike, for several days.

Asa Cason has sold his farm of 105 acres on the Burlington and Waterloo pike, about three miles from Burlington, to Samuel Pettit. Possession to be given March 1st. Price not known.

The reason most people go to sleep in church is because the preacher pitches his sermon too high and it is going over their heads, and in trying to grasp it their brains become weary and they want to sleep to rest them up.

Up until January 1st about two hundred automobile owners in Boone county had secured their license for 1924. It is estimated that there are about 1500 autos and trucks together in the county.

H. W. Ryle, of Erlanger, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday. Harry is one of the Boone county colony that has helped to increase the population of that thriving city.

There is only one prisoner in the county jail—he is serving time for violating the prohibition law. Jailor Fowler will be glad when his time is out, as he has had a fine number of boarders for several months.

At a meeting of the Fayette County Union, one day last week, at Lexington, the members voted 18 to 1 against the State bond issue of $900,000.

Congressman Rouse has introduced a bill in Congress asking for an appropriation of $75,000 for the erection of a postoffice building at Falmouth.

Mrs. Emily Berkshire, who has been quite sick for several weeks, is improving slowly.

Edgar Berkshire and wife spent the Christmas holidays with relatives in Cincinnati.

Good-bye 1923. Howdy 1924.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION

WILL MEET HERE.

The Boone County Poultry Association will meet at the Court House Friday, Jan. 4th, at 1 p. m.

Important business will be considered which will determine the policies and the success of the organization for this year. Election of officers will also be held.

All members are urged to attend and those interested in becoming members are invited.

A fiery cross was burned on Gailatin street opposite the Methodist church, about 12 o'clock Christmas night. Also a few sticks of dynamite were exploded to apprise the citizens, we presume, of the whereabouts of the Ku Klux. After hearing the explosions quite a number of people gathered at the scene and watched about fifteen of the Klansmen parading around the burning cross.

According to telephone officials, '23 was the greatest year in the history of the telephone industry in Kentucky in the number of additional investment, new construction work and the number of new telephones installed. It is estimated that the gross additions to telephone plants in Kentucky during the year amounted to more than $839,000.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stephenson, of near Lima, were entertained with a six o'clock dinner, Sunday evening, Dec. 30th, in honor of their daughter, Marie and friend R. C. Ernst, of Hebron. Honor guests were Misses Loretta Hogan, Hilda Houston and Jessie Jones, Messrs. Wilbur Houston, Joseph Hogan and Julius Smith.

The citizens of Burlington and surrounding territory are invited to the Burlington Baptist church Wednesday evening, January 2nd, at 7:30 o'clock, at which time Mr. Harley Smith, Reader and Impersonator, of Lexington, accompanied by the girls' choir of Petersburg Christian church will render an interesting program.

While in the city, last week, we had occasion to go from Covington to Newport, and from the large body of water in the Licking we were lead to believe that Bro. Shonert's dam near Falmouth had broken loose.

L. L. Stephens, wife and son, Oakley, spent Sunday with Lon Clore and mother, out on the Burlington and Waterloo pike.

Bruce Campbell, of Idlewild, was a business visitor to the Hub Tuesday afternoon.

CONSTANCE.

Mrs. Fred Bishop is visiting relatives in Cincinnati.

Julius Bell has sold his farm to Lawrence Michels.

Born on Christmas day to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, a fine baby girl. Mrs. Moore was formerly Miss Dorothy Hyden, of Constance.

The exercises at the church Xmas night proved a great success. The children enjoyed the treat immensely.

Floyd Bolington and Rosie Peeno were married in Covington, Saturday, Dec. 15th. Rev. W. H. Carlisle, of 623 Greenup Street, performed the ceremony.

The funeral of Mary Mund, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Reeve, was held in the church here Wednesday at one o'clock. She died at her home, Foley Road, Delhi Township, Sunday Dec. 23. She leaves to mourn her loss her mother, father, three sisters, one brother, her husband, Fred Mund, and a four weeks old infant. She was a loving wife, daughter and sister, and will be missed by her family, but their loss is her gain.

The services were conducted by Rev. Miller, of Bromley. A large number attended the funeral. The family has the sympathy of this community in their bereavement. Thus our loved ones are crossing over one by one, and we all will meet around the great white throne.

Monday night about 8 o'clock while the wind was blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour and the mercury in the thermometer was descending about as fast as an auto could speed over the Florence pike, and while the citizens of the town were sitting around their fireside reading the evening papers, they were startled by an explosion that shook the windows in the residences, causing them to rush to the front doors in time to see a large fiery cross burning on the hill in Hubert Rouses' field at the foot of Jefferson street. While the crowd was watching the burning cross, they were startled by another explosion in the south end of town where another cross was burning. The person or persons who were brave enough to face that cold, chilly wind long enough to plant bombs and set the medall. At midnight four more loud bombs were touched off warning the people of the going of the Old and the coming of the New Year.

The old custom that had been in vogue for many years, in Burlington, warning the people of the going of the old and the arrival of the New Year, by the ringing of the bells, has been abandoned. In these good old days everybody joined in the sport, but in this day and age every other fellow depends on "George doing it"—but George has gone on a strike.

GOING AND COMING

The old year fades away, and the good old times usher in the infant of 1924.

The years come and they go, and are seen no more, but they leave a heritage that even time itself can not efface.

In 1923 we have had our ups and downs, but they have been principally ups. Business has been reasonably good, employment has been plentiful, and contentment has been close to general in its scope.

In past years the approach of a presidential election has meant uncertainty, unrest, and a considerable degree of commercial and financial apprehension, if not stagnation.

The coming election has produced no jolt or jar. It seems to have had no appreciable effect, except to convince the public that our system of government is so sound it approaches the unshakable—a Rock of Gibraltar among the nations of the earth.

Legislation is required to relieve certain classes of our citizens from apparent injustice, but that is a matter that will undoubtedly be regulated by the new congress.

Everything considered, the outlook is bright—very bright. Be an optimist, and its brightness will not be dimmed.

REQUIREMENTS FOR A RURAL TEACHER

The question is sometimes asked what is the most important point to be considered in selecting a teacher for a rural school. Some people would say that education was the most vital thing, that a teacher must have had a good school course, and if possible a normal training.

Yet country schools are often unable to insist upon the qualifications that would be required in a city school. But there are several qualifications that a teacher surely needs in a rural school. She should like the country life, and believe that the country is a good place for young people to grow up in; she should be ambitious for her children, able to make them want to learn and become efficient in everything, and she should have a high standard of character, which should inspire her pupils with a contempt for mean and low action.

A fellow doesn't have to go to war to smell powder these days.

A Striking Value—at $295

Considering the improved appearance of the new Ford Touring Car, one would naturally expect a proportionate advance in price.

Larger scale production, however, has made it possible to incorporate in this new type touring car a number of decided improvements without increasing its cost to the purchaser.

A comparison extending over a long period of years will reveal the fact that the present price is actually the lowest at which the five-passenger open car has ever been sold.

The Ford Touring Car stands today, as it always has, a most remarkable value in the motor car field.

This car can be obtained through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan 1924, right on the dot!

The days are getting longer.

Don't forget to write it 1924.

Next Monday is county court.

A good January motto: "Step up and pay up."

Begin now to save for next Xmas.

It is only a year away.

Mrs. Lucy Cloud has been quite poorly for several days with gripe.

Mrs. Richard Penn spent the holidays with her parents at Cincinnati.

While setting a standard for others, while not live up to it yourself!

Before spring the road between Burlington and Florence will almost be impassable.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall spent several days the past week with their children in Newport.

Dr. R. E. Cropper and wife, of Winchester, spent the holidays with his mother, Mrs. Lorena Cropper.

The price of a subscription looks just as good to us in 1924 as it did in 1923. Or did we get yours in 1923?

R. Lee Huey, of Big Bone, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. J. E. Gaines and family, the latter part of last week.

Clifford Sutton, of Cincinnati, spent the latter part of last week with his mother, Mrs. Jane Sutton, at Bellevue.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Renaker and daughter, Mary Louise, spent Xmas with Mr. Renaker's mother, at Dry Ridge, Grant county.

Don't forget J. K. Sebre's sale of personal property at his residence on the Union and Hathaway pike, today (Thursday) Jan. 3rd.

Lots of tobacco going to the Burley warehouse at Walton. All seem to be well pleased with the grading and advances being made.

Miss Isabelle Duncan, of Walton, spent part of the holidays with her friends here. She is teaching in the High School at Rose Hill, Va.

J. A. Hempling and son, Shirley, of Constance, were visitors to Burlington, last Thursday. They made the Recorder office a pleasant call.

Miss Mary Bess Cropper, who is teaching in the Rose Hill, Va., High School, spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cropper.

Claud Arrasmith and Owen Portwood, from out on rural route two, were transacting business in Burlington, Friday. They made this office a pleasant call.

Notwithstanding the fact that prohibition has been in effect for several years, Christmas of 1923 will go down in history as one of the wettest in history—rain, rain.

Christmas exercises were held at the Baptist church Saturday evening, Dec. 22. An interesting program had been prepared, and Old Santa came upon the scene in time to distribute the presents to the children.

EDWARDS-AMES MARRIAGE.

One of the prettiest weddings of the autumn season and one of the much interest in Virginia and the middle west, took place at the Pungoteague M. E. church, South, Wednesday, November 28th, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when Miss Lucy Mears Ames, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Ames, became the bride of Captain Ray Omer Edwards United States Army, retired.

The altar of the church was decorated with native pine and cathedral candles, and the aisles were marked by tall standards with bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums and tulles. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. E. Whit.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Milton B. Ames, of Norfolk. She wore white silk chiffon velvet and a veil of illusion and Duchess lace caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of lily of the valley showered with white violets. She was attended by Mrs. Harvey S. Givler, of Norfolk, as matron of honor, Miss Nannie Ames, as maid of honor, and Mrs. George A. Woody, of Frankford Arsenal, Pa., Miss Thelma Brown, of Williamsburg, Va.; and Misses Susie and Cora Byrd Ames, as bridesmaids.

The matron of honor wore orange crepe Roma embroidered with crystal beads, and carried an arm bouquet of orange callendula and lavender sweet peas. The maid of honor wore bronze and gold and carried a bouquet of orange callendula. The bridesmaids wore amber velvet and pokes, of brown tulle and crepe and carried arm bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums.

Little Miss Anne Mears Givler, of Norfolk, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a dainty dress of gold organza and carried a basket of Christmas gold chrysanthemums. Master Samuel Ames, of Norfolk, a nephew of the bride, dressed in a suit of white velvet, was ring bearer.

The bridegroom's best man was Captain George A. Woody, United States Army, of Frankford Arsenal, Pa., and the groomsmen were Mr. L. Floyd Nock, Jr., of Accomas; Mr. Harvey S. Givler, of Norfolk; Mr. Austin J. Byrd, of Keller, and Mr. John Drummond, of Nandua.

Mr. James A. Hopkins played Schumann's "Taurerle," and Verdi's "Il Trovatore" before the ceremony and during the ceremony, rendered softly MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose." As a processional, he played the wedding march from Lohengrin, and as a recessional Mendelssohn's wedding march.

The bride is a graduate of Randolph Macon Woman's College, of the class of 1917, of which she was senior President, and she has also done graduate work at Harvard University and the University of California. She is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity. The groom is a graduate of the Civil Engineering Department of Purdue University, LaFayette, Ind., where he was a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity and the Beta Pi, honorary scholastic fraternity. In the World War I served with the 12th Field Artillery. For bravery in action he received the croix de guerre from the French government and a distinguished service certificate, and one other American citation from the United States government. They will be at home at Benton Harbor, Michigan, after December 15th.

Mr. Edwards is a brother of Mrs. Garnett Tolin, of this place.

FORGETTING OLD YEAR GRUDGES.

One beautiful custom is said to prevail in certain parts of Europe at New Year's. Whatever quarrels or differences may have come between friends and relatives, it has become a custom to overlook old feelings, exchange visits and drop the past and make a new start.

Many troubles come because people entertain petty feelings. They make much of fancied slights that may be wholly imaginary. They impute wrong motives, and many quarrels thereby come to embitter family relations and break up old friendships.

In fine cases out of ten there is no good reason for such estrangements. People should be big enough to forget them, and give their old friendships a chance to re-establish themselves. Don't blame other people too sharply for unpleasant things they have done. You may have erred yourself. Let the bright New Year sentiment sweep these petty thoughts out of people's hearts.

NOTICE

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Citizens Deposit Bank, of Grant, Ky., for the election of directors for the ensuing year, or any other business that may come before the meeting, will be held at the office of the bank the 22nd Tuesday, Jan. 8th, 1924, from 12 to 3 o'clock.

Membership in the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association, not counting the contracts of persons not growing tobacco, who have signed contracts out of friendship for the Association and not counting the employees of the Association, almost all of whom have signed contracts, total 96,257, according to a statement given out by William Collins, of the field service division.

THINK, CONGRESS, THINK!

The secretary of war is asking congress to enact a law whereby General Pershing may be retained on the active list of the army after he reaches the retirement age in September, 1924. To do this a special bill would have to be passed in the isolated case of General Pershing or that clause of the existing law requiring retirement at the age of 64 would have to be amended or nullified, thus retaining officers indefinitely who have political influence sufficient to prevent retirement.

The secretary asks this preference for General Pershing on the basis of his services in the world war, and it is far from our desire to cast any reflections on those who served.

But it occurs to us that there are other generals who served in the war with distinction, whose services were of inestimable value to our country, who are physically fit and mentally alert, and who have since the war been retired from the service because they have reached the age of 64.

If it is right to retain General Pershing in the service after he reaches the age of retirement, for the good of our country as the secretary says, then it is equally vital that these other valorous and distinguished officers who have been retired be restored to the active list of the army and retained in the service—for the good of our country.

Many major generals who commanded fighting divisions in the great war have since reached the age limit and been promptly retired, as the law requires. No estimate can be placed upon the tremendous value of the experience and lessons learned by them at the cannon's mouth. They are too immeasurably great to be sacrificed, too precious to be cast aside, too vitally necessary to our future security to be sent into the discard.

If we need the continued services of General Pershing we are equally in need of the services of these other distinguished and efficient leaders, who performed so nobly in wrestling victory from certain defeat.

It is a cardinal principle of the army to be fair and just in all things, and General Pershing, as its head, would we think, be the last to ask discriminatory legislation in his own behalf.

Congress should be just to these other gallant officers or leave the law as it stands.

Organization in Louisville of 119 Home Coming county societies is well under way and John R. Downing, chairman of state organization, expects the task to be completed by Christmas, according to an announcement just made by Huxton Quin, mayor of Louisville and general chairman of the Kentucky Home Coming Association.

According to the association's plans the 119 societies to be formed in Louisville will be composed of natives and former residents—or descendants of former residents—of all counties in Kentucky other than Jefferson. It is estimated that more than one half of the population of Louisville is eligible to membership in these societies, having come to Louisville or being descendants of people whose homes formerly were in one or more of the Kentucky counties.

There will be for instance the Boone County Society of Louisville, composed of natives of Boone county, former residents of Boone county or people who trace back to Boone county through one or more ancestors. The Boone County Society of Louisville will then get in touch with people in Boone county, and request them to form a local organization which will be asked to cooperate with Home Coming headquarters at Louisville.

"The celebration," said General Chairman Quin, is designed as an all-Kentucky affair and its success depends upon the co-operation of all Kentuckians. Being the largest city in the state it is Louisville's duty to start the ball rolling and this we are doing with no selfish motive whatever in mind."

EDUCATED CRIMINALS

There are 7,000 college educated men in this country's jails, according to statistics collected by John Hopkins university. Forgery, confidence schemes, frauds and swindles of various kinds, were the offenses most commonly charged against these educated criminals.

This is a rather small proportion of the college graduates of the country. Still these figures demonstrate that book knowledge and mental training are not enough. Schools and colleges must give training in character as well as in knowledge. A course of study that does not make young folks want to live clean and straight has failed to meet their deepest needs.

W. D. Sutton, who has been the Farm Agent for Boone county for the past five years, with his wife and daughter, Marjorie, left on Thursday of last week for their new home at Madisonville, Hopkins county. The citizens of Burlington and Boone county are sorry to lose Mr. Sutton and family, but what is Boone county's loss is Hopkins county's gain.

From Germany came 100,000 soldiers last week. They were too soldiers for the Christmas trade.

Dr. K. W. Ryle and wife entertained relatives at dinner, Sunday.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The wet weather the past month has been very hard on the roads.

The season for killing rabbits and quail expired Monday night.

The weather man says you can expect some real winter weather for the next few days.

Frank Wingate, who has been working in Cincinnati for the past two months, is at home.

Monday being the last day of the year, there was quite a rush at the County Clerk's office for auto licenses.

Stanley Bonta, of Cincinnati, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Bonta, out on the Petersburg pike.

County Attorney B. H. Riley spent two or three days in Louisville, last week, attending the Association of Circuit Judges and Commonwealth Attorneys.

It is reported that moonshine is being manufactured not many miles from the temple of justice—those who have good smellers say they can smell corn cooking.

Denzil Carpenter, who is teaching in the High School, at Parsons, West Virginia, spent the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Carpenter, in Locust Grove neighborhood.

Mrs. Eugenia Blythe, who has been quite sick for the past three weeks, is not improving very fast. Mrs. Eliza Arrasmith, of the Waterloo neighborhood, is nursing her.

W. A. Waters, of Erlanger rural route four, was transacting business in Burlington, Monday. He called at this office and renewed the subscription of our old friend W. E. Popham.

The year 1923 passed out very wet—in fact the last two weeks of the year was very warm and rainy, and there are people who will say they never saw such weather before for the time of year.

DON'T MISS IT.

You will miss a big treat if you fail to go to the Burlington Baptist church Wednesday evening, January 2nd. Don't ask what it is, go and see. You won't be sorry you went.

Walter Evans, 81 Judge of the U. S. Court of the Western District of Kentucky, died at his home in Louisville, Monday morning, Dec. 31. He was appointed judge of the United States court in 1899.

The electrical men were in Burlington one day last week, making estimates on wiring some of the residences for the electric lights. A survey is being made for the poles between Florence and Burlington.

Mrs. Emma Brown, of Covington, spent Saturday and Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Susan Brady, at Bellevue, and Monday and New Year's day with her daughter, Mrs. Carroll Cropper, of Bullittville neighborhood.

The number on the auto license for Boone county this year begins with 17,000 and run up to 20,000 although there will not be over 1500 issued. This is the first time the figures on the tags run over four figures.

In sending us $1.50 to renew his subscription, Mr. G. W. Brunner, of Erlanger R. D. 4, says: "I enclose find $1.50 to renew my subscription to the old Boone County Record—it is always a welcome visitor to our home. A happy New Year."

During the closing days of the year 1923, quite a number of our loyal friends called in and renewed their subscription for the year 1924, for which all have our thanks and we wish them health, happiness and prosperity during the New Year.

Rev. G. N. Smith, who has been visiting relatives and friends in the county, for several weeks, left last Friday morning for Praise, Ky., where he will take charge of a church. He called at this office and had the Recorder sent to him at that place.

Kentucky now has a State director of music. The creation of this office by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction is the result of the action of the 1922 legislature, which passed a bill giving music a place in the course of study for all Kentucky schools.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Furnish and son, Harvey Winn, of Golden Pond, Trigg county, spent the Christmas holidays with their daughter, Miss Dorothy Nell, who is spending the winter with her grandmother, Mrs. Laura Martin, and attending school at the Boone County High school.

Sheriff Hume has given owners of automobiles and dogs until January 10th to get their licenses. All who are caught without same after that date will be dealt with according to law. Let's get your license and avoid extra expense, as the law requires the officer to do his duty, and you can't blame him.

THE IDEALS OF THE CROWD

People who are trying to influence human life toward higher ideals sometimes get discouraged by the things the crowd seems mostly interested in. Ministers and teachers seeing the tens of thousands of people at the football games, may wish that more of the enthusiasm felt for sports could be put into serious efforts for self improvement and human betterment.

Yet the American people admire athletic success, because it is a form of skill. A people that can bring the playing games to such a high point of perfection, are likely always to be successful in the more serious efforts. So it has proved true that the American people who give more time to athletic sports than any other nation, have yet also achieved more for human progress than others. The two things seem to go together.

Many people devote too much attention to games and too little to serious effort. Yet a country where there is not energy enough to make a successful athletic sports, is likely to fall down in more serious aspects of its life.

There are to be no pardons of men guilty of violating the prohibition laws, Gov. Fields told the Association of Circuit Judges in session at Louisville, last week. The Governor pledged the Circuit Judges that he would respect the judgment of the courts, and would cooperate with them in the enforcement of the law.

Cows kept in box stalls produce more milk and slightly more butter fat than those kept in stanchions, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, but the slight increase in product does not balance the added expense for space, bedding, and labor. Box stalls are to be recommended only when maximum production is desired regardless of expense, as in testing for records.

Henry Payne, one of the good colored citizens of the north end of the county, was a visitor to Burlington, last Friday. He called at the Recorder office and had his subscription moved up another year. He is a tenant on Geo. McGlasson's farm.

Rue Wingate, Stanley and Marvin Bonta and Kenneth Rue, attended a party in Cincinnati, Monday night at the home of an aunt of the Bonta boys.

Tuesday being a legal holiday the local banks, all officers at the Court House and rural mail carriers took a day off.

New Year's day was cold and bright. The old year went out like a lion.

As the Editor Sees It.

Smith gets there—Jones stands still.
Which are you going to be in 1924—a Smith or a Jones?

Some people live from hand to mouth because the mouth is always reaching out for what the hand contains. That is the reason they will never have anything tomorrow that is left over from today.

We hope you are not in that class, but if you are the beginning of the new year is an opportune time to do some serious thinking.

People who do not cultivate the habit of saving have no legitimate reason to complain because they have nothing. Yet much of the complaining is done by those who make no effort whatever to save. They are never quite satisfied until the dollars in their hands are transferred to some other person's pocket.

As an example, take the case of Mr. Jones, a purely mythical person whom we advance for purposes of illustration.

Jones has a family. He is brainy and draws a salary of, say, $300 per month. But one essential to success is missing—he is minus the balance wheel which should induce him to save something each week from his earnings.

He couldn't tell you how his money goes. It simply disappears. He never knows what his household expenses are, he has no idea how much he spends on clothing for himself and family, his benefactions are liberal but he is at sea as to the amount and all of his other expenditures are conducted in the same manner—totally without system. The money comes in regularly each month and goes out as it comes.

Now consider the case of Mr. Smith, another mythical gentleman. He is on a par with Jones in every way, except that he has a balance wheel, and it functions perfectly.

He knows exactly how much he will receive each month, therefore he knows exactly how much he can afford to spend.

Being a married man also, his first thought is for clothing and the monthly household expenses. He carefully estimates the cost of each for the year. In like manner he carefully estimates the cost of all other expenditures for the year, itemizing them as he goes along. Then he strikes a total.

If he finds that his expenditures, as estimated, will consume all of his salary, he revises his list, reducing the estimate where it can be best reduced. When he pairs them down to 75 per cent of his earnings he feels safe—and the family lives within that estimate. Twenty-five per cent goes into the bank each month.

Smith, you will observe, prepares an annual budget of expenditures at the beginning of each year. He never touches his savings, and he always has money. He is getting there.

Jones doesn't bother his head about a budget, has no check on his expenses, and has no bank account. He is standing still.

The beginning of the year is an ideal time to compare the records of Smith and Jones.

One of their examples you will follow.

But which will it be?

The presidential campaign is in full swing, with politicians scurrying in every direction in the interest of their respective favorites.

In the republican camp the open arena fight seems to be between President Coolidge and Senator Hiram Johnson of California.

In the midst of the background stands a towering sphinx in the person of former Governor Lowden of Illinois, silent as the grave, but with malicious watching intently his every move.

As openly waving a banner to the president—He is a potent political figure.

Others have ambitions, some are possible, but few have achieved any degree of prominence in the present race.

This is a merry fight in the republican camp, with the victor yet to be named.

Democratically speaking, the two outstanding personages are former Secretary of the Treasury William Gibbs McAdoo and Senator Oscar W. Underwood.

Both are so strong in their party that it is difficult to predict who will be the democratic standard bearer.

(One thing however, seems morally certain in this presidential campaign. The mantle of leadership in both parties will fall upon politicians who are known by their deeds and not merely through the praise of campaign orators and spellbinders.

We have nothing to fear, which ever way it goes.

As you begin the new year speak a good word for our schools, and our churches, and our business and professional men, and our neighbors and friends, and for humanity in general.

Speak a good word for the community, and keep on speaking, until others get the habit and begin speaking with you.

It is a good thing for the town, and in time it will begin to speak well of you.

Good times are prophesied for 1924 and if every person in this community begins now to lay up a store in anticipation of the next period of business stagnation we will live in plenty while others do the yelping.

If you like your home town, tell everybody about it. It must be worth liking or you wouldn't like it. And if it is worth liking it is worth talking about.

But if you don't like it let it stop at that. Go to work and do something to convert it into a town that you can like.

Perhaps the one thing the town most needs may take root in your own brain.

Why kick about the amount of booze that is floating around the country in these days of prohibition? What have you done to eliminate it?

What have you done to aid the officers in enforcing the law?

Kick when you have a right to kick, but don't kick until you have it. If you see a bat in the street, kick it. If it has a brick under its foot, kick it again. Then you will know the kicker injures himself most of all.

The association of railroads maintain in the Capital City of the Nation what is known as the Bureau of Railway Economics, paying each their proportionate share towards its maintenance.

Its activities include the gathering of a large and valuable library, bearing upon all phases of railroad transportation, and the issuing of bulletins and statistical summaries, designed to present a national picture of railroads, their operation, and costs.

The railroads contributing to the support of this institution, through it enabled to understand what all railroads are doing, and get a complete vision of national railroad operation, find it a most valuable adjunct to their business.

Such an organization is needed in that other growing and vitally important transportation field, the highway world. For highways are rapidly becoming much more than mere connecting links between farm and town, city and country, over which the farmer drives his grain and pigs, and hauls his household supplies. With the increasing use of the automobile as a passenger carrier and the truck as a means of freight transportation, the highway is coming to take its place in the Nation, not as a secondary system, but as a primary or arterial transport system, which will, in a few short years, rival the railroads in tonnage, if not in speed.

A Bureau of Highway Traffic Economics will enable all road makers, road planners, and road organizations to function more perfectly, make more progress, save more money, and use roads more efficiently.

"But who will do it?" The Nation must do it. Its needs are but one more argument for the establishment of a policy of national highway building, and of national road using, by which the National Government will not only build, pay for, and forever maintain a system of national roads, but will, through some organization laid down along similar lines to the Bureau of Railway Economics make it possible for all highway users to employ these roads with the greatest economy and efficiency.

It is high time the legislative and judicial authorities began to consider the crime (the word is used advisedly) of drunkenness when driving a motor car as something infinitely more serious than is drunkenness under ordinary circumstances.

Prohibition is as yet too new for the world old opinion of the drunken man, as one to be laughed at, pitied, perhaps, but to be sober up, if, in a small sum as a public nuisance, to change, at least overnight.

But drunkenness which can harm no one but the inebriated man is one thing; drunkenness which is menace to all who use the streets and roads, and which via the car, converts the otherwise innocuous victim of his appetite to a potentially wholesale murderer, is entirely something else.

Sentiment is swinging over regarding the drunken driver as one who commits more than a misdemeanor; but it should swing faster and go further. The man who, drunk, drives a car or truck, is a madman; a man without sense, without reason, without judgment.

He puts in jeopardy the lives of men, women, and children. He endangers property. He may cause frightful, life, hideous maimings, terrible accidents. No maniac with a gun is allowed upon the streets; the man who deliberately makes himself a maniac and fits himself out with a car loaded with potential death for many, should be dealt with with the utmost severity. A few dollars' fine a few days in jail, the loss of a license, are not enough. The man who runs amuck with a gun, killing and maiming, gets years behind the bars. The man who runs amuck with a car while drunk is even more culpable.

Let judges once get it thru their precedent bound legal minds that the drunken driving which is the crime, and our already crowded hard roads will be safer for us all; our children, our sober citizens protected, as well as a right to be, from a menace which has no excuse, legal or social, for existing.

"But life, being weary of these worldly bars, Never lacks power to diasias itself." —Julius Caesar.

"Why is suicide held not to be right?" was one of the questions put to Socrates during that last long talk he had with his friends while he waited for his feller to bring him the cup of poison.

According to Plato's account, Socrates answered: "I suppose you wonder why . . . when a man is better dead he is not permitted to be his own benefactor, but must wait for the hand of another. . . I admit the appearance of inconsistency, but there may not be any real inconsistency, after all, in this. There is a doctrine uttered in secret that man is a prisoner who has no right to open the door of his prison and run away; this is a great mystery which I do not quite understand."

Our western laws and churches hold suicide to be wrong, and there is a general feeling that when a man commits suicide, he breaks the rules by which the game of life is played. We know that in a race, for example, a man is expected to finish the course, even though all the other runners have crossed the line an hour before him. To the bystanders there seems no sense in this. To them it seems that after enough men have crossed the line to score all the points that can be scored, the other runners should be allowed to step over the side lines and quit the race. They cannot see any reason for making a man run after all chances of scoring seem over; but the trainer sees reason in the proceedings. Life is frequently likened to a race.

Some people hold that the two cases are not analogous because the player enters a race voluntarily and we human beings are born into life without our consent. Others hold that we do enter life voluntarily. The latter believe, with Socrates and the Buddhists, in the transmigration of the soul. They insist that the soul that does not wish for life is not reincarnated.

This is, of course, a subject about which nobody knows, though many men speculate, trying to twist texts this way and that to suit their own beliefs.

Hang up another record for radio. Radio audience tuned in Monday evening, Dec. 10th, at 9 o'clock and heard the W. L. W. broadcasting station of the Crosley Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, announce the beginning of a record-breaking experiment. A microphone was placed in the studio of the Vocalstyle Music Company, Cincinnati, and connected by special line to the broadcasting station, for use in letting the world listen to the making of a music roll of the original radio song, "Somebody Else." The recording was done in less than an hour, and the selection reproduced and broadcast within that time. This establishes a world record for it usually takes about a week in the making of a reproduction piano roll.

Proceeding the recording of the song, the Elmer Aichele Orchestra played it. Mr. Aichele, in association with William Schmidt, composed "Somebody Else." Then, Mr. H. G. Miller of the Vocalstyle Music Co., explained how the piece would be played for recording. During the time it took to complete the making of the music roll until it was reproduced, a program of music given, interspersed with explanatory talks of what was taking place in the recording laboratory.

This is the first time that the recording of a piano selection and the making of a music roll was broadcast, and it proved that many forms of hitherto little known subjects were adaptable to radio broadcasting. Thus, does radio again move forward as an important force in the broadcasting of subjects, both interesting and educational. Many of the radio listeners were thus enabled to gain a knowledge of the mechanical procedure experienced in the recording of a piano selection.

THE HOME BOOKSHELVES

City people may imagine that the country homes are not well provided with reading matter. If they would look at the tables loaded with newspapers and magazines, and the well filled bookshelves in many of our homes, they would change their minds.

A survey of Orange township, Iowa, made several years ago by the Iowa state college of agriculture, showed that 60 homes had a total of 7355 books, or an average of 106 volumes each. No doubt these homes have still more books now. It is a rather vital matter to select volumes well for home ownership, as the young people get many ideas from them. It makes a big difference whether such literature consists largely of trashy novels, or of standard works on literature and history. Usually the country family's library is a very choice selection.

Our tears for the departed year. Our smiles for the one that has come. But remember the poor and needy at this holiday time, as God in His mercy has remembered you.

The fact that the business of farming has usually been conducted in certain ways, does not surely prove that it should always be done just the same.

FLIPNESS AND FLAPNESS

A writer in a current publication desires the tendency toward flipness in the young people of today. He considers it demoralizing to true manhood and womanhood.

True, every word of it—lamentably true.

But he might have gone further and equally deplored the tendency of many parents to encourage flipness and flapness in their offspring.

There are some parents who exercise exceeding care in the training of their children, and such children invariably mature into real men and women.

There are others who calmly watch their sons develop into shies and their daughters into flippers and flappers without an apparent effort to prevent this deformity of mind and perversion of intellect.

The parent who has no thought of tomorrow can hardly expect the child to heed the dangers of today.

Place the responsibility where it belongs, drive it home and perhaps some good may come of it. No other course will avail.

In time of peace, prepare to lick the other fellow if you don't want to get licked.

COOLIDGE HAD DIFFICULT TASK

It is doubtful if any president since Lincoln has had a more difficult task to perform than that which fell to President Coolidge in presenting his first message to Congress. In addition to the fact that his own candidacy and political future was involved, r. Coolidge was confronted with divided opinions by experienced party leaders on the most important subjects, and he was literally compelled to make a stand with the full knowledge that his desires would be ignored in the scramble of individual fence-building on the Congressional floor. His attitude regarding most questions was pretty generally understood before the message was presented, and that may account, in some measure, for the lack of enthusiasm expressed in public sentiment. A tried and trained observer from Massachusetts states that the President's reference to the League of Nations was applauded by many Republicans, but no Democrats. His views against cancellation of war debts evoked general applause; only one Democrat expressed approval of the Mellon tax reduction plan; only Republicans applauded his proposal to eliminate tax-exempt securities; his opposition to a soldier's bonus fell on an almost silent house; favoring a constitutional amendment prohibiting child labor was greeted with ominous silence, and his declaration for a strict enforcement of the prohibition amendment evoked but little applause. In one particular, however, President Coolidge's message deserves and receives unanimous acclaim. He made no attempt to camouflage or side-step any question. He left no doubts as to his meaning. In this respect his message finds a ready welcome, even in the hearts of his political opponents.

THE FARM BOYS AND GIRLS

President Coolidge has accepted the office of honorary president of the Boys and Girls Farm Clubs. Perhaps none of the honors that he has received comes any closer to his heart than this. And a recent sent a message to these clubs, that he hopes to see their membership doubled and tripled.

There was a time when the farm boys and girls were mostly isolated units. They had little organized life of their own. The old motto that "children should be seen and not heard" applied to their life. They helped around the home, but they were an inconspicuous factor, whose desires were not considered much. Many a boy's heart was hurt when Father made him work on July 4th or circus day when the town kids were having high jinks.

Today the farm boys and girls are joining a conscious movement with purposes of their own. About 700,000 of them have joined the clubs the aim of which is better agricultural production and home usefulness. This gives them a chance to make use of their own powers, and develop their own initiative.

A multitude of boys and girls are not satisfied with the old fashioned ways. They may have some extravagant notions, yet no doubt many of their ideas gained in school and elsewhere are good.

The club work gives them a chance to try out their new ideas. In many cases they have convinced the old folks that modern plans pay better than the old time methods did. These clubs take young people who are keenly anxious for a chance to work out their own projects and manifest their own initiative, and give them a chance to see what they can do. The result is a great change in their lives and ambitions. It means that instead of getting discontented, they are becoming enthusiastic about country life.

GIVE THE BOY THE CHANCE OF THE CHICKENS

At the recent Country Life Conference in St. Louis, a moving picture film was shown of a farm boy and his prize flock of chickens. The film demonstrated that the "birds" were fine because the boy had a scientific knowledge of chicken culture, and that he had applied his knowledge to the care of his flock. But the boy was a mouth breather and showed further effects of malnutrition. The tragic thing about the picture was that the chickens were having a better chance than the boy.

The idea of encouraging farm children to raise thoroughbred poultry and live stock is wholesome. It should be promoted to a greater degree than it is at present. On the other hand, it must be borne in mind that the greatest asset of the farm is neither its live stock nor its poultry, but its boys and girls. They themselves are entitled to as scientific care as they are taught to give the animals that they raise. In order to develop into a strong man or woman every child must have a well-balanced diet which is eaten at regular periods; long hours of sleep in a well ventilated room; activity as expressed in wholesome work, study and play; instruction concerning the care of the body; and periodic physical examinations by a reliable physician.

While the city folks are pitying the loneliness of the country towns in winter, the country people may be worrying how to find any evenings free from engagements.

In 21 states of the Union there is "taxation chaos" and it is almost impossible to entangle the mass. Throughout the United States more than 20 per cent of all wealth escapes its just burden, while federal, state and local taxes take nearly 20 per cent of the total income of the nation. It is a heavy burden, and will be heavier unless some method of preventing an enormous waste be adopted.

Few people get what they want until they first earn what they get.

REDUCTION of TAXATION
IS NOT A MATTER OF PARTISAN POLITICS

Copyright, 1923, by National Budget Committee

SOMEWHERE along the line in the current discussion of tax reduction there has been interjected the solemn asseveration that Secretary Mellon's proposal is a Republican policy and as such ought to be opposed by the Democratic Party. It was apparently inevitable that an attempt would be made to bring this consideration before the people, and that not a few Senators and Representatives who had been paralyzed by the straightforwardness and persuasiveness of the letter to Mr. Green would regain their tongues at the mention of party policy, and this despite the fact that of all things in the world that are ill-defined, obscure and debatable the respective policies of the two great political parties in this country are the most poorly defined, the most obscure and the most debatable.

JOHN T. PRATT
Chairman
National Budget Committee

If tax reduction could be denominated as a Republican policy, then it would follow that tax reduction was not a Democratic policy. Tax reduction not being a Democratic policy we should naturally expect that any favorable mention of it would be rigorously excluded from Democratic platforms and that Democrats standing for election would boldly proclaim their opposition to it—in asking for the suffrage of their constituents. An examination of party platforms during recent years and our best recollection as to the addresses of Democratic candidates for office discloses no such opposition to tax reduction. If opposition to tax reduction is a Democratic policy, Democrats have been supremely successful in keeping that fact to themselves. The truth is, of course, that tax reduction has nothing whatever to do with partisan politics. Scientific tax reduction, such as that which is now proposed, is based upon the fact that prospective revenues exceed proposed expenditures. The essential factor is that not more should be taken from the people in taxes than is required for the efficient conduct of the Government. If the tax reduction program goes through during the present session of Congress, it will not be because the Republicans put it through. At the present moment its opponents number as many Republicans as they do Democrats. President Coolidge may urge the Mellon plan upon Congress, but his appeal must be to Congress as a whole and not to his Republican adherents. Those who support it will go into the next campaign on their personal record as conservers of the public welfare, as the supporters of a measure that has no more to do with the respective policies of the Republican and Democratic parties than has voting the salaries of ambassadors. Tax reduction is not a party matter and he who tries to make anyone believe it is, shows himself neither a good partisan nor a worthy public representative.

TOMORROW IS NOT YOURS

Tomorrow is not yours. The future does not belong to you.

Man has the crumbling moment in which to dream or do and the record of a year is only the aggregate of all of them.

There is none worthy of the name of man who does not wish to make a better record in the year whose gate way has just been passed than he did in the one which ended when the clock struck twelve.

No woman but wishes to achieve more; in the majority of instances not in her own person—but in that of a husband or one who may become her husband, or of a son or a brother or a father.

Business success may be the goal in view, but whether the gain sought be material advantage, or if it be moral growth or spiritual enrichment—whether it be the gathering together in barns or laying up in heaven—the task of today must be done today; it cannot be done tomorrow.

Opportunity is of the moment, not of the future, it is the duty immediately at hand no matter how humble. Opportunity is not the mysterious opening of a hitherto concealed door, but is the thing that needs to be done now, the doing of which is progress.

More men fail of success because of neglect of the duty which confronts them than for any other reason. The task is esteemed beneath their talent; too mean with which to soil the hands; or the good to come from it is not deemed sufficient recompense for the effort. Thus one opportunity after another is neglected.

Dreams of large tasks with larger rewards take the place of strengthening performance, and when the record of another year is made up it is as unsubstantial as the preceding one—or less so, for as purpose weakens from day to day from lack of exercise, so it does from year to year.

The man who would crown his life with success must strive earnestly. Each day must be the epitome of a life of effort, and each hour and moment the epitome of the day. He can build for the future only with today's material. He cannot use it when it has become yesterday's; for then it will have departed from him. He must "act, act in the living present."—There is no other time for it.

The man who would do better in the coming year than in the last one must begin today and do what is before him as though it were the last work of his life and he had but this day in which to do it. He must do his best with it, for only by doing each task well is perfection reached or approximated. If each day's work is done in this way, and in this spirit the record of the year will be satisfying—perhaps better than satisfying, an incentive to higher things in the one to follow.

SOLDIERS BONUS AND TAXES.

Notwithstanding the attitude of leading Democratic journals, the leaders of that party have pledged the party representatives in Congress to support a soldier's bonus bill, as against Mr. Mellon's insistent warning that taxes cannot be reduced if the bonus bill becomes a law.

Democratic statisticians and leaders have produced estimates to show that Mr. Mellon's plan of tax reduction really means a reduction for those best able to pay a tax, and indications now point to a measure that will relieve the small salaried and business man, and perhaps increase the surtax or restore the surplus profits tax to help pay the bonus. It is held that the marvelous increase in dividends, extra dividends and stock dividends during the past year among industrial corporations, together with the fact that most of these dividends are invested in tax-exempt bonds, indicates that the present surtax cannot be held as a burden on business.

Mr. Mellon asserts that the bonus will require an average of $225,000,000 per year during the first four years, and a total in the long run of about $5,000,000,000. Several Congressmen and Senators propose to insist on some of the foreign nations paying their debts, the interest on which will pay this bonus.

Congress has adjourned until January 3. Meanwhile the various "interests" will bring every pressure to bear to force their desires to the front.

CARRY A LANTERN

The stingy farmer was scoring the hired man for carrying a lighted lantern to call on his best girl. "The idea," he exclaimed, "When I was courtin' I never carried no lantern; I went in the dark." "Yes," said the hired man, sadly, "and look what you got."

Before going to war, the Germans drank toasts to "Der tap." The general opinion is that they got tagged all right.

Claimed the American boy has no power of concentration, but many of them seem able to concentrate their minds on their best girls.

RESTRICT IMMIGRATION

One of the most important measures to be decided by Congress before June next, is that restricting immigration. It is the most important question before America today. Debs can be said, even though a generation must be starved to do it; frontiers can be corrected, even though ars must be fought for the purpose; but the racial composition of a given country and the complications arising therefrom are there for all time.

The two most important considerations are first, the well-founded belief that an immigrant population does not so much augment as replace an existing population where the incoming type has a lower standard of living. The birth rate of native Americans has fallen steadily in those portions of the country where immigrants are most numerous, and immigrants have replaced native American workmen.

The second consideration is a popular belief that the population in a country like the United States can expand indefinitely. This is true up to the limit of food supply at a given state of development. Based on past experience the population of the United States will be 200,000,000 within the next hundred years.

There are now some 35,000,000 foreign born and their children in this country, nearly 8,000,000 of whom have taken no steps to become a part and parcel of the American people, and several millions of others who belong to that class designated by General Pershing as those who "attempt to decide American questions for a foreign reasons."

In this country are printed some 1,200 newspapers and periodicals in 42 different languages, with a tremendous combined circulation. Our work of assimilation will not be complete until these conditions are remedied. The man who attempts to shape American questions to foreign standards, and to settle them upon the basis of beneficial results to some foreign country, cannot be a good American citizen.

Whoever comes from abroad to degrade the American level of intelligence of physical, mental or moral life degrades every honest, naturalized citizen and every native born citizen as well.

Secretary of Labor Davis insists that every immigrant should be examined at the port of embarkation, and the Commission of Immigration insists that steamship companies must be curbed in their reckless disregard of law.

DESPISING THE COUNTRY

A lady was speaking the other day of a certain family of her relatives living in one of the larger cities, who years ago were contemptuous of country towns. These cousins used to come out to visit this lady in her country home, and they had a supercilious air in regard to her surroundings. They made fun of the villagers, and appeared to feel that people who lived in country towns were very much behind the times. They seemed to think that to keep in touch with modern life it was necessary to live in or near large centers.

It is an interesting fact that of the younger members of this family, one has just married a country girl, and another is about to do so. This shows the changed point of view.

This change resulted after this family began to go out in the country, first as summer visitors. Then they became attached to country scenes, and lived more or less of the time in country towns for a period of years.

This closer contact with country life led them to alter their view of country people. They discovered the solid worth of the rural elements, their earnest devotion to work, their intelligence gained from much study and thought and discussion in clubs and other organizations.

A lot of the society people in cities fritter time away in meaningless and aimless social life. Meanwhile the country folks are as a rule earnest, industrious, and anxious for self-improvement. There are of course plenty of country people who are not progressive; and just spend their life in rats. But the idea that people have to live in large cities to get in touch with modern life is entirely exploded, and the country towns are just as wide awake today as any place and probably more so.

The trend of design in radio apparatus is toward the elimination of away from the box design toward the completely enclosing not only the mechanical and electrical parts of a radio receiving set, but the accessories, such as batteries, wires, and loud speaker, so that the whole unit can be self-contained rather than spread out over the table, or in various parts of the room.

In the early days of radio, the sockets, rheostats, condensers, coils and other parts were spread out over a table, or attached to a bread board. The next development was the panel idea, wherein the various parts were assembled on a movable panel. Later this panel was assembled in a box, but in each instance the batteries and other accessories were not housed completely within the receiving set.

The men have no doubt of the value of the women's secretaries when they serve one of their glorious superiors.

WOOD OR STUCCO EXTERIOR

This Type Can Be Built on Wide or Narrow Lot—Curving Portico Over Entrance Gives Pleasing Touch to the Whole.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The charm of the Dutch Colonial style of architecture is undeniable, and while in this case some liberties have been taken with the accepted form of door and window treatment, the result these serve are practically as large as though the walls had been curved straight up.

Downstairs the entrance lets us into the reception hall, with the staircase leading itself to decorative handling. One can secure authentic Colonial staircases, fitted for the carpenter's putting together, that permit a good choice of patterns, and one of these would make the reception hall a place of real distinction, with no unreasonable outlay.

To the right of the reception hall is the living room, with fireplace and good blank wall space for the placing of larger articles of furniture effectively, and for the proper hanging of pictures. Off the living room is a small room which could be used for den, office, library or sewing room. There is a downstairs lavatory adjoining its partition wall, and in the rear of a large family a door could be opened into the lavatory from the den, permitting the latter to serve as an extra bedroom.

There is a rear entry, reached from the reception hall, through the house, and opening on a rear pergola porch. On the right side of the first floor the dining room and the kitchen are located, and we want you to note the fine, large pantry, with its provision for work-table right under the window, which will save the housewife many steps.

Upstairs we have three bedrooms and a bath. One could arrange the paris not disastrous to the good effect of the whole, as well might have happened without intelligent discrimination on the part of the designer. The curving portico over the entrance helps to justify an architectural handling which might otherwise be questioned on the score of fitness, and gives a pleasing modern touch to the whole.

Observe how this style of architecture adapts itself to the varying size of lots. You could use the Dutch Colonial style in the wide lot site shown; or it could be used on a narrow lot, and letting the narrow face the street.

The exterior is stucco; wood siding could be used, if desired. The finish should be preferably white. Red cedar shingles or prepared shingles or roofing, in any of the popular stains and colors, would make a combined exterior effect very pleasing.

Observe how the design while leaving the cubic footage of the house, still lends itself to ample spacing for the second floor rooms. We get a door arrangement of windows for the second story, but the rooms which

A great deal of caustic comment is printed regarding the proposed restrictions of immigration, registration of aliens and the attempt to secure equality of status for the new immigrants. The old world, usually read, "America should hold out a welcome to all; the country is big enough for all; we are all sons and daughters of immigrants; immigrants made this country; we need immigrants for labor; to restrict or register is Chazarist, not American."

It is true we are all "sons and daughters" of immigrants; it is true that the immigrants we have had have done much to develop this country. But as times change, so must methods. When we needed pioneers farmers, laborers, tillers of the soil, we received the best Europe had to offer. Not often does such an opportunity come; a new country, a new freedom, land for the asking. Of course the yeomanry of Europe seized the chance and the land, came west, grew up with the country, helped make America, America.

But today good land cannot be had for the asking. The pioneer days are over. American civilization has grown complicated. It takes more than willing hands and a stout heart to succeed here now. There must be a measure of education as well. Meanwhile, Europe is an impossible place for the diseased, the ignorant, the uneducated, the vicious, to live. The best equipped have none too easy a time; the worst equipped want to get out—anywhere—but especially "out to America."

We still need, want and welcome good men and women, who can and do become good Americans. But the time has passed when we can get them only by opening wide the door. The door must be shut, to keep out those who hurt, not help, the nation, and only put a little more of the thinning stream of the best kind of men and women, who are able to take advantage of the modern opportunities of modern America, as their forebears were able to take advantage of the opportunities of American pioneer.

EDUCATION IN LIMELIGHT

Proposed Abolition of War, Removal of Unemployment.

John Adams, professor in the University of London, believes that education alone can eliminate the unemployment problem so pressing in England, and which periodically affects the United States. He says: "Education must stress the development of intelligence, not more intellect. That is why we are successful in our new beginning in vocational education. Six trades taught to the carpenter; trade are taught the boy for two years; then two trades least congenial to him are dropped. Gradual elimination and concentration on one trade for the last two years really give the boy not only for work with his hands but intelligence to go out and build business for himself."

"It is my earnest conviction that education will undergo a great change to meet our difficulties, and in doing so will bring a utility and a blessing to mankind unguessed at in our present procedure."

Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, Commissioner of Education in Maine, and President of the World Federation of Education Associations, believes that education alone can make war impossible. He says of this idea:

"With the spread of education, the fact that the people are able to accept the impact of the public press and understand and interpret it with a greater world consciousness makes it desirable and necessary that governments have a definite foreign policy which the people who make up the state and are themselves the governing body must know. Public officials today must take the people into their confidence in everything but those things that are for the time being not for other nations to know."

"International relations must be on the justice of the cause. Open diplomacy and no juggling with among people must be the accepted rule."

"This is the plan of the National Federation of Education Associations for peace through education. Education can make war impossible. Education, peace, carried forward by all the countries of the world, is the only thing which can definitely, and that in some third of a century at the very quickest, make war an utter impossibility."

The cost of living shows a small but steady increase, and the purchasing power of the dollar a corresponding decrease. As compared with 1914 the dollar is now worth 90.8 cents—about 40 per cent below normal. At the rate the people of the United States are better off than the people of any other nation in the world, because most of them have the dollar.

THIS CHANGING COUNTRY

The remark, is often made, that this country is sure to go through a great change in ideas, owing to the change in character of the population. It is pointed out that a large part of the native Americans have very small families, many having either only one child or none at all. Meanwhile recent immigrants who can't speak English and have not become Americanized, are apt to have families of five or six or more children.

The result was seen at the army camps during the war, when about one fourth of the young men were more or less illiterate.

Yet it has to be remembered that many of the newcomers are so glad to benefit by its advantages, that they seem to enter into the spirit of the new world better than many of the old native stock. But the natives of this country must be very generous to the newcomers and give them the chance to learn and adapt themselves to their new surroundings which most of them eagerly seek.

COUNTRY OPPORTUNITIES

Some young men rush off to the cities claiming there is no satisfactory business opportunity in the country towns. If they are not interested in farming, they may say that the chances offered them in rural business are not big enough to satisfy them.

Young men who take that attitude must be ignorant of the fact that many men are making a large success in country town enterprises today. Many country stores by liberal advertising, have built up a trade extending far beyond their own towns and county. They draw automobile visitors from a radius of many miles. The country town store can do business at less expense relatively than stores in large cities, hence it is in a position to make low prices. If it will tell the public about those low prices, it will find that it can draw a trade a long distance.

The young man who is anxious to succeed in business should not lightly pass over the chances offered in such enterprises. A good many men, after making a success in one store, have bought out others in the same line in other towns, and have built up groups and chains of such enterprises.

Probably in the future there will be more manufacturing in country districts than there has been in the past. Labor costs are high in the cities, owing to high cost of living conditions. Many firms have made a success by closing their city factories, and where they could live less expensively, and hence be better off with over wages than is paid under the expensive conditions of large city life.

The young man who keeps his eyes wide open can find plenty of business opportunities in the rural districts. He must expect to work hard, but he will have to do that anywhere to make good.

FORMING NEW HABITS.

Making New Year resolutions was once a matter taken seriously by many people. It was considered a very favorable time for people to swear off from indulgence in both great and little vices.

While the majority of folks who tried to abandon bad habits there always have been some through such resolves have been able to attain mastery of their own lives.

It is a great thing when a man's mind and conscience are the complete rulers of his life, and he is able to make his habits take their place as the servants of his spirit. The folks whose habits rule their mentality are like a team of runaway horses. They may be able to tear along the road without smashing anything, but a man's brain and will power are unhappy passengers behind such unruly beasts.

HOME READING CLUBS

The fact that people may be located a long distance from great public libraries that supply all the new books, does not prove that they can not have access to the best new literature.

If 20 families will join and pay in from $1 to $5 each a year, they can get the cream of the current literature, and probably they will have time to read it. It is a very easy matter to pass the books and magazines along each week from one member of the club to another. Some of the best informed and most up-to-date people in Kentucky are folks who live in small country towns, but who have formed reading clubs to unite in purchase and distribution of good literature.

During the past 17 years the federal meat inspectors have destroyed more than 5,700,000 whole carcasses and more than 12,000,000 parts of carcasses. This does not include the animals and carcasses destroyed by state authorities.

OUTSIDE GROWERS GIVEN MORE TIME

Directors Leave Book Open Until Further Notice, After Learning That Between 2,500 And 3,000 Have Come In Since Re-opening

Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, in regular session at Lexington January 2, adopted a resolution keeping the books of the Association open for new members until further action by the board, when they learned that since the books were re-opened between 2,500 and 3,000 members had been added to the Association, bringing an average of an acre and a half of tobacco each to the organization.

The field service reported that some good sized crops had been signed up, one in Fayette county, of 30 acres, many others of five to ten acres, but most of those who have joined the Association have signed up 3 or 4 acres of an acre and a half and the average throughout the association is close to three acres to the grower, it was said.

A committee from Scott county, Ky., which represented the county local there, appeared before the board. A. L. Ferguson, Anderson Brown and Everett Marshall were the members of the committee and spoke briefly, declared their confidence in the officials of the association and their ability successfully to conduct the business of the association.

Perry Minor, of Owen county, representing the growers of his county, made practically the same statement, recalling his experience in selling some tobacco in Lexington in 1920 and advances now being paid to the growers on the delivery of their crops. The total membership in the association, as reported by the field service, was 97,754, with between 1,000 and 1,500 contracts still out which have been signed but not delivered and therefore are not counted in the total.

The financing and grading and other problems of the association were discussed fully by the members of the board and approval given to steps taken in the detail work of preparing for the marketing of the crop, including the closing of the plants until January 7 because of the wet weather, which is estimated to have saved the growers thousands of dollars damage that otherwise would have been caused to their crops.

Director of Warehouses Ralph M. Barker reported receipts capacity until the close December 21 and the grading was declared more uniform than at any previous time in the history of the association.

Resignation of Director Reuben F. Offutt, of Georgetown, and the election of Clarence C. Graves, of Scott county, as his successor until the next election of members of the board marked the final session of the Board. Mr. Offutt has been employed by the association in the warehouse department.

Reports on a roll call of the directors indicated that the growers generally are satisfied with the advances being paid them and with the general situation, save in two or three counties of the district.

The "dumping" situation was reported as well in hand, since the decision of the court of appeals of Kentucky, upholding the Bingham law, and no further trouble is expected from that source.

Discussion of the prices paid for the 1921 crop and of the probable return for the 1922 crop pledged to the association revealed the fact that the actual return to association growers was larger than that paid to the outside planters.

Raymond W. Hall, of Kansas City, Mo., was present and reported the situation in that state in which the growers are marketing co-operatively this year for the first time as satisfactory.

A GOOD PLACE TO BUY

Selman Wach, 605 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky., is offering his stock of fine clothing, suits, overcoats, at extremely low prices. Now is the time to buy your clothing, and you will find that Mr. Wach's stock is composed of nothing but the best, and you will find that his prices are the lowest. Satisfaction is guaranteed. Mr. Wach has a large trade in Boone county, and his customers should take advantage of the low prices he is now offering.

A WORD TO THE WISE

Merchants should remember that the buying public look through the advertising columns of newspapers to learn where bargains may be had. If your name and business fails to appear in your local paper, naturally the "other fellow" gets the business that you otherwise would enjoy. Had you but told the people of the bargains you had to offer. A word to the wise is sufficient.

THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY TOWN

In the social structure of our great nation, the country towns are the most influential element and deciding factor. They are the very foundation of its life.

They perform certain services, quite as vital relatively as those which the heart performs for the human body.

Some people have said that great cities are the heart of a country. It would be more appropriate to call them the stomach, consuming something produced somewhere else. The country towns are the heart or the origin to which all energy proceeds. When the heart stops, the body stops. So when the country towns stop functioning properly, the country stops. This truth is not always appreciated.

The country towns must be kept running efficiently, just as a man must see to it that his heart action is good. If there is a decline in country life, the whole nation must suffer. Rural institutions must be maintained in all the effectiveness they ever had, and in many respects they need greater vigor.

VALUE AND TAX

Practically every engineering magazine and highway bulletin has recently contained some comment or a statement given out by John E. Walker, former tax adviser of the United States Treasury, which indicates that in 1921 the general tax payer's dollar in America contributed only 1.3 cent to the cost of building highways.

Details of the method employed by Mr. Walker, in arriving at this conclusion were not made public. It is supposed, however, that they were on a correct basis, since his former position as tax adviser to the United States Treasury would give him access to data not available to others. His announcement, however, comes as a surprise to even many of those actually engaged in road building.

In Kentucky the funds derived from the three mill tax, or the single source of general taxation, are approximately 12 per cent of the total amount expended on roads annually. This is really a small contribution from general taxation, when it is taken into consideration that at least 40 per cent of the cost of constructing modern highways goes for what has been termed "permanent construction," or building that portion of the road that does not deteriorate rapidly under actual traffic.

This permanent part of the road building is really what adds the larger portion of increase in valuation to abutting property, and that located within reasonable distance from the new road.

Conclusions reached from sound economic reasoning indicate that general taxation should bear the burden of constructing the more permanent part of the roads, and leave the cost of constructing and maintaining the surface to taxes derived from those who use the road. Probably the most equitable method of doing this is through a gasoline tax, and a reasonable license tax on automobiles and trucks, fixed after taking into account the relatively destructive effect of the two.

From what was stated above, the general tax applied to road building in Kentucky falls far short of paying for constructing the permanent features of a road. In the November 1922, issue of the Road Builder, it was shown that during the next year ending June 1923, the following sources contributed to the State Road Fund in the percentages indicated:

Motor license tax	36.14
Federal aid	28.98
Donations from cities, counties, etc.	14.72
3 mill tax (general tax)	11.58
Gasoline tax	7.91
All other sources	0.67

Thus it is seen that the general tax is contributing a relatively small percentage to road building when the benefits accruing to him through the permanent features of highway construction are evaluated.

HOME TOWN TALKS

What does your home town mean to you?

It is just a place where you earn your bread and butter, and which you could give up without a qualm of regret if you could make more of that bread and butter somewhere else?

Are your townpeople just casual acquaintances, whom you are interested in because they may be able to help you in a money way?

Or are they friends, associated with you in the common aim of building up a home town, tied to you by common relation to a community life which has been a help to you?

Do you feel ties of loyalty to this community and its enterprises? Do you do your best to promote its business and civic interests, or would you be equally well pleased to see some other community go ahead?

MRS. EUGANIA BLYTHE.

The citizens of Burlington were grieved when the announcement was made last Saturday morning, Jan. 5, 1924, that the spirit of Mrs. Eugenia Blythe had passed to the God who gave it. Her death occurred at her home, the Boone Hotel, after being confined to her bed for the past four weeks with cancer of the stomach, although she had been in failing health for the past two years or more. She was able to be up and about until about one month ago.

She was born in Burlington February 21, 1852, and was one of eleven children born to Edward and Susan Fowler, all of whom have passed away excepting one brother, C. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Mrs. Martha Hawes, of Burlington, and Mrs. S. P. Tilley, of Clearwater, Fla. Eugenia S. Fowler was married to Jerry F. Blythe Dec. 16, 1879, who passed to the great beyond about eight years ago. There were no children born to this union. Mrs. Blythe was not a member of any church, although she was a kind hearted Christian woman and a most charitable neighbor.

Funeral services were conducted at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon at the home by Rev. W. W. Adams, of the Baptist church, after which her remains were taken to Odd-Fellows cemetery, just east of town, where they were laid to rest by the side of her husband.

Besides her brother and sisters she is survived by two nephews and nieces, all of whom have the sympathy of a host of friends in their sorrow and grief.

Undertaker C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

WEATHER BUREAU SAYS THERE ARE NO EQUINOXIAL STORMS.

In both Europe and America there is an old belief that a severe storm—the so-called "equinoctial"—"equinoctial gale"—is due about the date of either equinox, that is, March 21 or September 22; or, more particularly, about the date of the autumnal or vernal equinox. The fallacy of this idea consists in identifying any storm that occurs within a week, or several weeks, of the equinox as the equinoctial storm. Statistics show that there is no maximum of storm frequency, either in this country or in Europe, close to the date of either equinox. Of course, in the long run storms do occur about these dates, just as they occur at all other times of the year. No reason why storms should be especially frequent at the equinoxes is known to meteorologists.

In the United States the belief in the equinoctial storm as an event of regular recurrence has perhaps been fostered by the fact that West Indian hurricanes are most common during the late summer and early autumn. Occasionally a severe storm of this character sweeps up our Atlantic seaboard, doing a great deal of damage and attracting general attention. If it happens anywhere near September 22, the event is sure to be heralded as "the equinoctial storm."

Uncle Add Robbins, 95, who has been quite poorly since the death of his wife, which occurred week before last, was moved from his home in Burlington to the home of his son-in-law, John Bachelor's, out on the Burlington and Florence pike, last Thursday.

BOTH ARE BEST

Two men were once asked what financial investment paid them the best dividends.

One, without hesitation, stated that the most profitable investment he had ever made was the price he paid for his license to wed.

The other, a single man, with equal promptness insisted that his best investment was the price he paid for his home paper.

Both are right, and both are best, but with profound homage to womanhood we yield the prize to the wife whose loyalty and devotion remain with a man to the end of his days.

The man who is happily married is rich beyond comparison. Wealth, pleasures, everything is secondary to the wife of his heart.

If she is a good woman (and most of them are) she will make a better man of him, for it is impossible for any normal man to live amidst the refining influence of womanhood without finding in some degree to its attraction.

He even furnishes her the home paper, which she prizes so much. When she has finished her tasks of the day she finds pleasure in reading its columns. It is there she learns of what other women of the community are doing, of how the children are progressing in the schools, of the good work the churches are doing to keep their children safe from the temptations of the world, and of the thousand other things that are of interest to every feminine heart.

It is this that the home paper comes into its own.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Members of the Boone County Farm Bureau met in mass convention at their headquarters in Burlington, last Monday and wound up last year's business and elected officers for the ensuing year.

At the noon hour a nice lunch consisting of hot coffee, sandwiches, pickles, chow, apples, etc., was served and greatly enjoyed by all present.

The lack of interest shown by the farmers in their organization during the past year is to be regretted, and if they hope for the organization to grow it will be necessary for them to meet regularly and get their heads together and spend a little time in making plans to sell and buy what they need.

The only hope for the farmer is through co-operation. There is no reason why the farmer should not be the most independent people in the world, as the world depends upon them for a living, but instead they allow a few middle men to come between them in both buying and selling. This should not be and the only way to avoid it is for them to stand together in one great brotherhood and protect themselves.

There is a demand for dwelling houses in Burlington. If some of our enterprising citizens would get together and build a few cottages, we think they would have but little trouble in finding tenants for them, due to the actions of some of the young men and old bachelors who have been keeping the reader warm with their autos going and coming. And, as this is the year, we expect the County Clerk to be kept busy issuing marriage licenses. The next 12 months, there will be in great demand for the newly weds, "his said and her said" in "keeping house" and "boss" the whole business. We heard an old maid say a few days ago, "this is lean year, and you may look for something doing before the year rolls by."

Notwithstanding the short time in which it was advertised and the bad weather, a fair sized crowd attended the musical and reading at the Burlington Baptist church, last Wednesday night, given by the young ladies of the Petersburg Christian church, and Mr. Harley Smith, of Lexington, and everybody present was delighted with the entire program. These handsome young ladies, of which there were eleven, are sweet singers and the Burlington people will be glad to have them, make another call. Mrs. Albert Stephens at the piano furnished music for the occasion. Rev. R. H. Carter was instrumental in presenting this program given here, and he also assisted with the program.

The Burley Tobacco Association last week announced a one cent raise per pound of tobacco which took effect Monday, when the warehouses re-opened after the holidays. The growers who have delivered their tobacco will get the benefit of this raise. The farmers have the right to plan to mark their tobacco, and should stick to the pool. If there are any weak places, they can be remedied as the pool grows older. The Burley Association can not but succeed, because it is based on fairness and justice, and eliminates the middle man's profit. Under the old way of selling tobacco on the open market, the market fluctuated, and if a grower sold on a low market, he lost his year's profit.

The average persons pays but little thought as to what the new year may bring to them. True, we can look very far into the future, but no harm can come of planning some things worth while. If we made mistakes during the year just past, perhaps we can make amends for them during the year 1924. Briefly speaking, let us give to the world the best there is in us, and be thankful for the many blessings we have had given to us.

Mr. Wm. Vokoleke, of Ft. Pleasant neighborhood, a member of the American Association of Variable Star Observers, Harvard University Observatory, was registered as a associate member of the American Association for advancement of science at the University of Cincinnati, where the annual association held its annual meeting from Dec. 27, 1923 to Jan. 1924.

Boone county is hatching some enthusiastic radio bugs, who are sitting up late at night listening in on what is going on in different parts of the United States, besides getting other valuable information being broadcasted from all sections of the country.

So far, we have had a very open and mild winter. Very little frost has been so far by the farmers. The first few days of the new year were a little dry and caused pedestrians in traveling about to get in to high speed.

Not much coming and going at the Hub the past few days—too slick.

GUNPOWDER

H. F. Utz went to Burlington on business last Friday afternoon.

A cold wave struck our ridge last Friday night, and the thermometers registered four below at some places.

Mrs. J. W. Rouse, whom we reported on the sick list has not improved any since our last report, and her condition has become rather serious.

A Mr. Schwartz, who is driving a truck for the Latonia Dairy Company, stopped with this writer to warn one morning last week and discovered one of his ears were frozen. We have one consoling feature we can all have ice water to drink.

John Edger, the little son of B. J. Rouse and wife took sick very suddenly at the home of his grandfather and is still there, and his illness developed into a case of pneumonia. He is getting along very nicely at the time of this writing, but is not able to be removed to his home.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Everett Judge and wife are the proud parents of a baby boy.

Several children in this neighborhood had the whooping cough.

Oth Hubbard and wife gave the young folks a dance Tuesday night.

Ketaran Shinkie has returned from the Good Samaritan hospital greatly improved.

Clyde Clements wife and children were visiting Lennie Hubbard and family last week.

Mrs. Maud Satchell broke thru the floor of a porch and bruised her ankle considerably, recently.

It would be rather difficult for one to determine just where the Ohio river bed is now, owing to high water.

Miss Mary Hodges, of East Bond, entertained Hamilton Hi School last Tuesday evening with a social, which everyone greatly enjoyed.

Dr. Ryle on his last visit found Miss Sherry Rife of East Bend somewhat improved and now allows her to sit up a few minutes each day. We hope she may soon be entirely well.

Manly Aylor while trying to murder a rabbit broke his nose, which together with the backwater which at its present stage will not permit one to cross Gunpowder bridge, is causing him considerable trouble.

THE PEOPLE ARE TO BLAME

Responsibility for high taxes was placed squarely upon the people by a writer in a current publication. This is a fact that has long been recognized by students of taxation, but one which too many taxpayers are not willing to admit.

The great trouble with so many who pay the taxes is that they regard them as a penalty. They take the attitude that they are being penalized for living.

Anyone who has ever made even the most superficial study of the question knows that the taxpayer himself can control the situation; he will join forces with others of like opinion.

After all, taxes are the cheapest thing on the market in this day of high prices. In most communities approximately three-fourths of the money expended from the public coffers is for roads and schools.

It's about time that the people who do most of the complaining should take stock of what they are receiving in return for the taxes they pay.

We wonder if the average man can send his son or daughter to college or one-fourth of what he pays in taxes for the support of his family in the taxing up where he lives. How many have ever stopped to think of this?

We wonder if Mr. Average Citizen could go out and build himself a system of roads such as we have today for his riding and business, with the money he pays in taxes for roads and for the maintenance of the old ones.

True there may be cases of incompetency in office and unwise expenditure of public funds, but in the long run, taxes are about what the taxpayers make them.

A chapter of the Eastern Star was organized Saturday evening, last. The organization was under the supervision of the Walton chapter, and about thirty members from that chapter were present and instructed the seventeen members of Burlington chapter. Mrs. Jno. L. Vest, of Walton, was the representative of the State Chapter and she was assisted by a number of other members of the Walton chapter.

The Walton members deserve great credit for their nerve in venturing out on a 32 mile drive with the mercury hovering around 10 degrees below zero, and their efforts were greatly appreciated by the Burlington members. Those being initiated into the order were:

F. H. Rouse.
Thomas Hensley.

Miss Elizabeth Kelly and Mr. F. H. Rouse had previously been elected by the local organization as Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron respectively.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS
Drunkness is bad enough under any circumstances.

But drunken automobile drivers should never be tolerated.

Drunkness that can harm no one but the man himself is one thing and drunkenness that is a menace to all who use the streets and roads is another wholly another thing.

That is a problem that we do not often confront here, but it is one to be considered and one which should be dealt with summarily by officials charged with the responsibility of upholding the law.

Sentiment against drunken automobile drivers, who are nothing short of potential murderers, is rapidly growing and it needs to flourish in order that lives may be saved.

People who are beginning to regard the man who drives an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants as a dangerous enemy of society and one who should not be tolerated. There is no other view that may be taken of him.

He is as dangerous as a mania freed on the streets of any community with a loaded revolver in his hand.

Maniacs are not allowed on the streets under any condition; yet men who make of themselves maniacs for the time being become even more dangerous.

The time has passed when they should be permitted to escape with a light fine or a small jail sentence. Because they are fortunate enough to escape killing anyone does not make the offense against law and order any less.

This type of criminal must be dealt with harshly, just as the law intends the man who makes and sells liquor should be dealt with.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

What's everybody's business is nobody's business.

That has been the rule of life ever since the well known Heek was a pup.

And as long as everybody pays no attention to nobody's business, and nobody pays attention to everybody's business, there will continue to be high tax rates, inequity in government and all of the lesser attendant evils.

The fellow who kicks the loudest about the way things are being run is always the last to volunteer to help, or even offer a constructive suggestion.

Then there is the type of citizen who is so engrossed with his own affairs—which consists of the gentle art of making money—that he never has time to think of his own community or the welfare of others.

Other types we see daily, engaged in this or that hobby, wholly oblivious to what is going on about them. They never give a thought to the betterment of things about them.

The beginning of the new year is a time for being optimistic. If there is any trace of pessimism left in our systems, we should throw it off before stepping on the 1924 platform.

While we are turning over our new leaves, we should all resolve to make the new year better by devoting a little less time to our own affairs and a little more in the service of others.

The public good deserves consideration from every individual. Let's make a resolution to render a little time for that duty during the new year and never refuse when we are called upon to do something that we don't have to do, but which will be for the betterment of the whole community.

Homer Gordon, a former well known citizen of Hebron neighborhood, but who has been making his home in San Francisco, Calif., for several years, sends a money order for past and future subscription. He says, "I am always glad to see the RECORDER. It is just like a letter from home."

POULTRY ASSOCIATION WILL PROSPER THIS YEAR

At the Annual Meeting of the Boone County Poultry Association held last week, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Leonard Kite President; E. G. Stephenson Vice-President; Mrs. B. E. Ayler Secretary and Mrs. Kirby Tanner Treasurer. The following Vice-Presidents were elected from the different districts of Boone County in an endeavor to better distribute the work of the Association over the county as a whole: Scott Smith, Verona; L. L. Weaver, Union; Mrs. O. C. Hafer, Hebron; and Miss Flora Arnold, Petersburg. The Executive Committee for the next year will be as follows: Roy Lutes, Teat Tanner, B. T. Kelly, Chester Tanner, H. L. Tanner, Mrs. E. K. Witham and Mrs. B. C. Graddy.

It is the hopes of the management that this year the State Poultry Club will become the largest Poultry Club in the State of Kentucky. Last year the largest organization had 100 members. Another organization sold $2,500 worth of eggs and chickens. If the people of this county can do that well and more, last year 13,000 eggs were sold and 300 chickens were put out on the Pullet Return Plan. This year the Pullet Return will be handled in a little different manner not yet definitely decided upon. Orders for 20,000 eggs are already in the hands of the Secretary.

If there is anyone in the county with Purebred poultry who has not joined the organization this is the time to do so. Send in your name to the Secretary or to the Farm Bureau Office, Burlington and help put Boone County at the top of the ladder.

County Agricultural Agent

Father Bill's Homecoming

By CLARA DELAFIELD

(C. 1912, Western Newspaper Union)

"Well, I'm sure I hope you'll be happy with Tom," sighed Mrs. Maginnis to her daughter, Clara. "My experience of married life wasn't a happy one, but there may be men better than your father, though I have my doubts of it."

"For five years I couldn't call my soul my own. Roaring and rampaging about the house, he was like a bull in a china shop. No, he never laid a hand on me. I'd be glad I'd have killed him, and he knew it."

"Short of that there wasn't anything too bad for him. Shouting and swearing at me day and night—"

"Why did you stand for it, mother?" "Stand for it? Because I knew my duty as his wife. I remembered the vows I'd taken at the altar. Then he left me. Who'd he leave me for? You don't suppose I'd demean myself by finding out, do you? I was thankful to be rid of him. That was 15 years ago. You don't remember your father, do you, Clara?"

"Hardly at all," said Clara. "But Tom isn't like that."

"All men are like that if you give them their head, Clara. But, thank Heaven, I've learned my lesson. I'd never be the slave of any man again. There was Dennis Simpson, wanted me to get a divorce and—"

"Mm, but I wasn't taking any. No, Clara, and that's why I say I hope you'll be happy with Tom, but I have my doubts of it."

"Poor Mother!" sighed Clara, kissing her.

And yet the faint memories that she had of her father were happy ones. He had never been unkind to her. He had ridden her on his knee, he had bought her toys, even when he was in liquor he had never laid violent hands on her. She wondered secretly whether her mother mightn't have been a little bit to blame.

Poor mother! And poor father too! Anyway, there was no use crying over it now. Fifteen years had elapsed since the day when the old man of the parlor floor off his feet, and there was no likelihood that he would ever be seen again.

"What's that?" cried Mrs. Maginnis, starting up.

"Somebody at the door, mother."

A man, muffled up to the ears, was standing outside. He came in sleepily.

"Bill!" cried Mrs. Maginnis.

"Hello!" responded Maginnis. "Why, this must be Clara. Well, well, how you've grown!"

He took off his overcoat and sat down on a stool. Mrs. Maginnis mechanically went through the performance of making him a cup of tea.

"Well, old woman, I've come back," said Maginnis mildly. "I've decided to settle down now I'm growing old. I'm going to work tomorrow at the factory."

Mrs. Maginnis turned upon him with savage fierceness. "And do you think you can leave me? You can't leave me and then come back that way!" she cried.

"Fifteen years I've sweated and slaved to keep myself and daughter, and never a penny out of you all this time! You can take yourself out of my house—my house, bought and paid for!"

"Oh, mother!" cried Clara.

"Be silent, child. I'll be no man's slave again. You got out of here, Bill Maginnis!"

Bill Maginnis rose up weakly. "Oh, very well, mother," he said. "I'll go, yes, I'll go for sure. I guess you're right. I only thought you might be willing to let bygones be bygones."

His meekness infuriated her the more. "Bygones?" she cried. "Yes, they have been bygones, haven't they? Fifteen years, and never cared whether we lived or starved. Oh, you monster! Get out of here, I tell you!"

Bill swung around, the light of battle in his eyes. "Ah, it's the cold-hearted woman you are!" he cried.

"If you don't ever loved me I'd never have left you. It was because you didn't have any love for me that I couldn't stay. You think you're acting so fine and proud, but I tell you you're the meanest specimen of a woman that ever crawled on God's footstool!"

"Oh, father!" cried Clara, afraid that he would strike her mother, who had shrunk back under the fury of her father's denunciation.

"And if it wasn't for the gel," shouted Bill Maginnis, "I'd bust your head about your ears before I went."

He swung toward the door. His wife interposed forward.

"Bill!"

"What's that?"

"Bill, darling, can't we let bygones be bygones? Let's forgive and forget."

Ten minutes later, cooling at his side, she said:

"It does one good to hear a man's voice in the house again."

Old Melodies in Demand.

Old-time melodies are beginning to regain at least a part of their former popularity, although the music stores cling to jazz. To supply this demand a group of song "saloonmen" has sprung up. They can be seen all over town on Saturday afternoons. Each "saloonman" has an automobile containing a band organ or a phonograph and does a thriving business with "Mother of Mine" and other old-time favorites. Crowds gather around as the music "hawkers" dispose of many copies in pleased patrons.—New York Sun.

The Presbyterian church is asking all religious and civic organizations to meet in Washington, February 13 and 14, to plan a campaign for national prohibition to bring all motion picture saloons under federal control.

With the new Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineer Trust Company organized labor now has four big banks in New York—some 21 in the United States. Labor is beating the farmer in this important business, though the farmer needs it more than labor does.

During the two weeks preceding Christmas the Federal Bank gold reserve was reduced more than $62,000,000, the coins being employed as Christmas gifts. This is the largest gold withdrawal for this purpose ever recorded. Ninety-nine per cent of it will be back in the vaults before the month is over.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science will submit a new world-wide calendar to the League of Nations. Each month under the plan would consist of 28 days or four weeks, the thirteenth month to be inserted between June and July and to be known as "Sol." There also would be an extra holiday on Dec. 29, not designated as any particular day of the week. Sunday would be the first day of every month.

Prof. Hudson, of Harvard, proposes that part of the allied debts to the United States be repaid to the war-stricken students of European nations. He does not specify the students of Russia and Germany, though it is these two nations that greatest aid is needed. Incidentally it might be mentioned that there are several millions of children in the U. S. who should be provided with proper facilities for a common school education, at least.

President Coolidge asserts that our part in the World War cost the nation $40,000,000,000. We have paid $18,000,000,000, leaving $22,000,000,000 outstanding. Against this debt we have foreign notes of hand for about $11,000,000,000 including the Great Britain settlement. If there were no other debts, it would leave us with $10,000,000,000 more debt than when the war started. Surely America paid both in men and in money but we have yet to realize either material or spiritual benefit to the world.

Who has a prohibition law that makes it unlawful to transport liquor into the state for a personal beverage. Fines up to $1,000 with imprisonment are possible for possession of such private stocks. The state prohibition commissioner announces that he proposes to insure that Cleveland will be bone dry during the Republican National convention next June. But next June is a long way off—and there are ways and means of securing the soft peddle during certain ceremonies. At least, the 1,000 delegates and ten or fifteen thousand prospective shouters are not worrying.

Less than $8,500,000 was appropriated last year for expenses entailed in enforcing the 18th Amendment. During the fiscal year ending June 30, the Bureau turned into the U. S. Treasury more than $5,000,000 collected in fines, penalties, etc. This did not include perhaps as much more collected in local and state courts. Prohibitionists insist that the expense saved by the closing of jails and similar institutions has amounted to considerably more than all the first cost, to say nothing of the many millions of dollars that have found their way to savings banks instead of cash registers behind the bars.

According to all reports some 1,000 or more prominent Washington D. C., citizens and government officials had a very close call for a decidedly blue Christmas when a certain decoded list of bootlegger names, secured in a raid, was passed on and on to some mysterious place where the light of day is not permitted to penetrate. Somebody "on the job" deserves and no doubt will receive a reward more substantial than any Carnegie medal. The District of Columbia is governed by a "council" of Congressmen and is in doubt if Congress can find time during this brief but turbulent session to bother with such trifles.

The shipments of stocker and feeder sheep and lambs into the Corn Belt through markets show an increase of around 300,000 head from August 1 to November 1. This decreased marketing of native stock may indicate either an expansion of the sheep industry in the Corn Belt by holding back ewes and ewe lambs or the possibility of an increased marketing of native stock this winter; in which latter event the Corn Belt marketings will be larger than above indicated.

The movement of feeding stock both into the Corn Belt and into Western areas was earlier this year than last and the movement during November showed a sharp falloff. The weight of feeding lambs was probably about the same in all areas this year as last.

The indications are that the supply of fed sheep and lambs for slaughter coming from areas that usually ship to Corn Belt markets during the next five months will be somewhat larger than last year but that the supply in the areas shipping to the Pacific Coast markets will be smaller. But since there are always considerable numbers of animals on feed after Dec. 1, if this number now shows a marked falling off from total market supply of fed stock to now to June 1, may be no larger than it was last year.

The total farm value of the principal crops in Kentucky, including apples, peaches and pears, was $205,200,000 in 1923 compared to $200,328,000 in 1922, an increase of approximately $4,872,000, or about 2.4 per cent as shown in the annual December summary of acreage, production and farm value of crops, prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture in co-operation with State Commissioner W. C. Hanna. The acreage of the state's twelve principal field crops, not including orchards, was 5,837,000 acres in 1923, or not quite 2 per cent less than the 5,937,000 acres of those crops in 1922. Increased total crop value compared to 1922 is shown by 1923 crops of corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, potatoes, sweet potatoes and sorgho sirup; while decreased total crop value is shown by wheat, rye, tobacco, all hay, clover seed, apples, peaches and pears.

Tobacco was the state's most valuable crop in both years, bringing $82,036,000 in 1923 (on the basis of one acre of tobacco compared to $87,019,000 in 1922).

The state's total tobacco acreage in 1923 was 578,000 acres which produced 34,190,000 pounds. Of this 264,000,000 lbs. was burley, and 230,100,000 lbs. dark types. In 1922 Kentucky's total tobacco acreage was 525,000 acres which produced 34,250,000 lbs., of which 223,600,000 lbs. was burley and 222,650,000 lbs. dark types.

Comparative statements of the cost of public health work in other States indicate that the work in Kentucky is as adequately done as in any other State more so than in most of them and at the lowest per capita cost. This sums up the report of Harry E. James, State inspector and Examiner of the investigation of the State Board of Health covering two years. The report was made public by Mr. James under date of December 28, 1923.

"I can say that no other department of the State shows more efficient management or more economical expenditure of money," he continues. Discussing the work of the Hygienic Laboratory, Mr. James said "the activities of the laboratory alone if charged for at the lowest ordinary rate for similar services would amount to more than the entire appropriation for the State Board of Health."

Kentucky's campaign against tuberculosis which the inspector characterized as very effective, he found to have been conducted at a cost of one per cent of the cost in some states. Mr. James also found that the bureau of Vital Statistics was conducted on a lower salary basis than in any other State.

Outstanding among the achievements of the board according to the report, has been the progress in public health work carried on by the public health schools, conferences, clinics or all-time county health departments.

The Inspector and Examiner suggests to the Governor, to whom he addressed his report, that the Legislature gradually phase its yearly appropriation until every county in the State has an all-time health officer.

A revivalist preacher, at all times forceful in his language, his religion being of the "shirt-sleeve" order, had taken for his text, "Vanity." To point his moral, he said:

"Now, if there is a woman in the congregation this morning who didn't look in the mirror before coming to the meeting this morning, I want to see her; I want her to stand up!"

A single woman arose and stood with her head downcast. To describe her in a kindly way, one would say she was homely. The revivalist rested his earnest eyes upon her.

"Well, Heaven bless you, sister," he said. "It certainly is a pity you didn't."

KEMP'S BALSAM

Friends of Senator Oscar W. Underwood who have undertaken the work of sounding out sentiment in behalf of his Presidential candidacy are elated over recent reports from many quarters and sources, showing an unmistakable increase of strength for Mr. Underwood in the important northern and eastern States. From the West also have come gratifying reports.

With these favorable indications, the feeling which has found expression among some of the political experts to the effect that Mr. Underwood would be "the hardest to nominate and the easiest to elect" of all the Democratic candidates has given way to the conviction that the Alabama statesman now occupies a commanding position with respect to the nomination as well as the election.

The preliminary canvass of the Underwood committee has disclosed no evidence to support any serious apprehension that he will be at a disadvantage in the North because of his southern residence. His nomination a quarter of a century of leadership in public affairs has given him a character and a following that knows no geographical limitations, his friends points out.

THE POWER OF ADVERTISING.

Very interesting illustrations of the power of advertising are given in the sale of certain agricultural products, which previously had been raised in greater quantities than the market demanded. As a result prices had previously fallen to an abnormally low point. But with good advertising campaigns, demand has been brought up even with supply, and the crop marketed at a fair price.

It might be said that the consumer did not benefit, as prices were raised through the advertising. Yet it is profitable in the long run for a consumer to buy staples below the cost of production. In such a case, producers would be driven out of the business, much wealth would be lost, communities would suffer, and eventually prices would be established on a much higher level to make the production pay.

Advertising is equally powerful in stimulating retail trade, but it never works to raise prices even temporarily. The following are some of the motives that lead business men to advertise:

1. A belief, that owing to their special enterprise and study of the market, they have a line of goods a little below average market values.
2. Ability to get hold of special lots or low prices, which can be turned over to the public at similar low figures. Advertising makes it easy to work off such lots promptly.
3. The necessity created by special conditions, to work off goods at a sacrifice so as to get in fresh stock.
4. The conviction that by drawing more people to a store, it can operate at less expense for the business done, and thus can afford to make low prices.

These and other motives lead people to advertise, and they all tend to create conditions favoring low prices.

COST OF A MILE OF ROAD.

People are prone to think of roads as standardized structures which should be produced at a cost of one per cent of the cost in some states. Mr. James also found that the bureau of Vital Statistics was conducted on a lower salary basis than in any other State.

Outstanding among the achievements of the board according to the report, has been the progress in public health work carried on by the public health schools, conferences, clinics or all-time county health departments.

(By Margaret Boyd.)

"... death, a necessary end," —Julius Caesar.

Suppose science could today check all death, then all growth, too, would cease; for all growth is at the expense of life. As Holland expressed it:

Life evermore is fed by death.
In earth and sea and sky;
And that a rose may breathe its breath,
Something must die.

Or suppose death were abolished for man alone. In a century or two there would not be space on the earth's surface to accommodate all that lived. Renan, in welcoming Pasteur to the French academy, said: "Death, according to a thought admired by M. Littré, is but a function, the just and quietest of all." Then he added, of his own belief: "To me it seems odious, hateful, insane, when it lays its cold blind hand on virtue or genius."

Singularly enough, this last sentence implies what has seemed to various men to be one of the chief reasons why death is "a necessary end" of our existence here. If death were not to strike down genius, it might soon become impossible to limit the human race to this sphere. We have an inventor, for example, who has mastered the laws of gravitation, and enabled men to fly; we have another inventor who has enabled men to communicate with each other over long distances without wires; and we have a scientist who seems to be at the threshold of a knowledge of the origin of life. The minds of all these men are filled with knowledge that they cannot communicate to anyone else, cannot communicate to anyone else. Suppose these men were not to die—what might they not reveal to us? What might they not accomplish for us? Similar reflections lead Willis to write, decades ago:

We were not man to die.
We were too mighty for the narrow sphere.
Had not time to brood on knowledge,
Could he not train his eye,
Might he not wait the mystic word
And hour,
Only his slaker would transcend his power.

Earth has no mineral strange.
The limitless air no hidden wings,
Water no quality in covert springs,
And fire no power to change.
Seasons no mystery, and stars no spell.
Which the unwearied soul might not control.

THE HERDING INSTINCT

It is natural for animals of all kinds to flock together. Hence human beings flock together in towns and cities. The lower animals show a kind of instinctive sense in such matters. You do not find the herds of animals gathering in too great numbers in any one place.

But human beings somehow seem to have less intuition. Hundreds of thousands gather in great city centers where there is not food and work enough for all. As a consequence many must live on a very narrow margin of subsistence, and be deprived of many comforts and necessities of modern life that they might have had if they had remained in the country towns that the majority of them came from.

Colorado this year produced 500,000,000 pounds of beet sugar, or enough to supply every man, woman and child in the United States with more than four pounds each.

A Rat That Didn't Smell After Being Dead for Three Months

"I found it was dead three months," writes Mr. J. S. (N. J.). "I saw this rat every day; put some Rat-Snap behind a barrel. Months afterwards, my Rat-Snap was in three holes for $36, 65c, $1.25."

HOW THE EARTH YAWNED

This was a stretch of the excellent motor highway between Tokyo and Yokohama. Then came the earth quake, and the solid ground was broken into deep, deep chasms often many feet deep. In Yokohama and elsewhere the surface of the ground suddenly sank at least three feet; the faces of mountains were split with great cracks; islands, like the beautiful Oshima, sunk below the surface of the water, and other islands were thrust upward from the depths.

ARISTOCRATS WHO MUST WORK

A considerable number of descendants of aristocratic families of Europe, thrown out of lofty position by revolutions, are in this country working at ordinary and some times menial occupations. The man born into nobility or great wealth, but forced to do manual labor, needs philosophy to support him in the experience.

But if American democratic principles are good, the experience will do him good. He will develop sympathies he would never have felt in his old life. And if there is any advantage in an aristocratic descent, as many claim, his heritage of character will show itself in the courage and gentleness with which he will adjust himself to the harder contacts of life.

This and That.

It will be a year of plenty to those who help themselves and keep what they get.

It is one thing to have brains, but quite another thing to know how to use them.

There are a lot of good people in this town, but just how near to the top are you?

The politicians should realize that they can't mend their fences just by sitting on them.

China buys more bibles than any other nation in the world—about two millions annually.

If people want to construct a good home town they must use some tools other than hammers.

Many of the boys can't keep up with the girls in their studies, but they can beat them in base ball.

Start your boy right, and if there is anything in him he will travel the rest of the way on his own merits.

1924 promises to be a bang-up good year for the business men who advertise. But so was 1923 also.

It is a mighty fine idea to turn over a new leaf, but people do not have to wait until January 1 to do it.

Begin right, stay right, and you will end right. Of course the other fellow doesn't do it, but why not you?

Don't begin the new year with a grudge. Smiles will make the time seem shorter, sweeter and more profitable.

If you do it a little better today than you did yesterday by tomorrow you may be doing something worth while.

Some people will spend two dollars worth of gasoline on bad roads just to avoid a dollar's worth of taxes.

Throat trouble is said to be common now, owing to the difficulty people are having in swallowing their taxes.

Many enterprising children now have all their Christmas presents broken, and are ready for their 1924 supply.

One of the most strenuous forms of track athletic activity now witnessed is keeping track of the railroads.

From the way that Congress works it might be judged that they were being paid by the day instead of by the piece.

One test of good January 1 resolutions is found in the question whether people's bills are all paid up by February 1st.

Some people seem to think that the political conventions should nominate the man for whom the galleries hold the loudest.

Some people talk of hanging the red flag over the White House, but there is no room for anything but the stars and stripes.

Some people claim that automobiles are not as safe for driving purposes as horses, but anyway they will stand without hitching.

Some of the city people who come out into the country for winter sports, often make considerable sport for the observant natives.

One profitable New Year resolution that the business man can make, is to use printer's ink a little more liberally than he did last year.

The kid who used to be satisfied with a bright new copper cent for Christmas, was probably expecting a $2.50 gold piece this year.

The people who can't remember where their Christmas gifts came from, are now having trouble writing their letters of acknowledgment.

The girls would consider it perfectly proper to ask the men to marry them during the year, if that was the most efficient way to do the job.

The Leap Year custom recognizes the fact that there are plenty of old bachelors who would be glad to get married if some one had the courage to ask them.

Some people think war will never be abolished, and about 125 years ago a lot of people thought the world would always do its traveling on stage coaches.

The suggestion is respectfully made that the name of the Congress of the United States of America should be changed to the Washington Debating society.

THE RELIGION WE WANT

The prime test of all "osophies," all "ologies" and all "isms" is this: Does their acceptance make the recipient a better man or woman?

Dr. Channing once said: "It does not matter so much what a man believes as how he believes it."

We want a religion not merely of creeds but of conduct; a religion that softens the step and gives gentleness to the voice, that checks the impatient tongue and the hasty return. Strangely it is not, that one should have all his indifference, irritability and ill temper for those nearest and dearest, while he feels himself bound to be perfectly civil, courteous, genial, to a mere stranger?

We want a religion not merely for the church and the Sabbath, a religion that you leave at the church door as you pass from its sacred precincts after the Sunday evening service, a religion for the prayer meeting and public profession.

We want a religion for the home; one that keeps the husband from being cross if dinner is late; one that keeps the wife from being cross if the husband is late to dinner; one that converts the honeymoon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy home like the eastern fig tree, bearing at once the beauty of its tender blossoms and the glory of its ripened fruit.

We want a religion not only for the home but for the workshop, the office, the bank, for legislative assemblies, for courts of justice, for markets of trade. We want a religion which liberates mankind from the curse of selfish greed and false economic systems; one that applies the golden rule to the practical affairs of every day life.

Brotherhood has been preached from the pulpit and platform for ages and yet we are no nearer its practical realization today than when it was proclaimed from the hill slopes of Galilee by the gentle Nazarene two thousand years ago.

If you would serve your brother, eliminate selfish greed and consecrate all your work to the betterment of mankind of your fellow man. To serve God consists in serving mankind. That is your offering and your sacrifice to the Infinite and Eternal God.

We want a religion for the entire life; one that will make the struggle more radiant; one that will glorify the commonplace of everyday life; one that will smooth the rough places and make daily life brighter, better, more joyous.

Russell H. Conwell said: "Try to bring more of heaven into the world. Don't worry about your admittance into heaven, but put your whole soul into the effort to set up Christ's kingdom here."

Be a good man and you will be a good citizen. Be a good citizen and you are preparing yourself for heaven. You will never be saved by creed or by vicarious rites, but by doing well your simplest duty.

From the fourteenth to the eighteenth of January there will be held in Chicago, the greatest exhibition of road machinery, materials and methods ever staged in the history of road making.

It is difficult to estimate the importance of such a great exposition, either from the standpoint of the road builder or the road buyer. The intimate contact thus made possible between maker of machinery and maker of material can not but aid both to do better work. The bringing together of so many different ways of road making must be of incalculable value to the road buyer, the county and State engineer, the road supervisor, and the taxpayer.

But perhaps the greatest benefit from this mutual contact of the forces which are behind the good roads, is in the laying before the country, the magnitude of the effort involved and showing forth to the world that progress has been made in the hard and slow highway idea.

Twenty years ago, before the automobile was such a toy, the road idea was dead. "We didn't need roads. The roads we had were good enough. To spend money on roads was foolish. The railroads gave all the transportation necessary. Roads were merely an expense, a luxury, not an asset!" Such arguments were common. There were no road builders, there was no road building industry. Today there are thousands of engineers, hundreds of firms making hard road building machinery and products for hard road making, and there is not a State uninterested in modern highways, not a county which isn't talking good roads, not a farmer who doesn't realize the value of the wheel.

This great road exposition is a reflection of the times, and the sentiment which is behind roads; hard roads, the sort of roads which minimize the hauling cost and give the maximum of speed and intercommunication.

The road exposition at the Coliseum in Chicago, is more than an exhibit; it is a monument to the modern idea of transportation.

Prof. Cheyney, of the University of Pennsylvania, and president of the American Historical Association, advocates the elimination of all patriotic color or propaganda in our school history text books. Certain patriotic material is determined to eliminate all patriotic sentiment connected with the revolution against England.

The twentieth anniversary of the first airplane flight was fittingly celebrated by the epochal cruise over Cincinnati and Dayton, in an airplane equipped with a Crosley radio receiver and a high-powered amplifier, by means of which music broadcast by W. L. W. was heard on the ground, thousands of feet below. The plane was piloted by Jack Davis, who also operated the radio receiving set.

This successful experiment, conceived by Powell Crosey, Jr., President of the Crosley Manufacturing Company, was carried out most successfully and shows it what extent the airplane and the radio may be used in all kinds of work. The combination of these two great forces of science, makes a sort of modern Paul Revere out of the aviator, but instead of spreading warnings, the radio set with its amplifier, sent forth music to the crowds of interested listeners on the highways below. This it may be used in the future to supply music to marching throngs throughout the city, for with a fleet of airplanes, equipped with radio receiving sets and amplifiers, it will be possible to fly over the heads of the marchers and send forth a flood of martial music that will keep the paraders stepping. Then, too, the Crosley airplane could be used to spread information and directions to people who might be marooned in floods, isolated from the outside world by some calamity and other missions of mercy. Time alone will tell the uses to which such a piece of modern apparatus will be utilized.

The simplicity of the construction of the airplane controls and the tuning of the radio receiver, made it possible for the aviator to perform this modern miracle of the air. The airplane is the JN-4 type and the radio receiving set is the regular Crosley Model X J, with its tuned radio frequency amplification circuit. In this successful experiment, 6-volt tubes were used and the amplifying device, which sent received music to the crowds below from the plane, contained the Crosley Sheltron transformer. The aerial was strung around the tower of the plane and the receiving set was grounded to engine. The large amplifying horn was placed in the exhaust system of the engine, permitted the amplified radio concert to be heard clearly by those listening, thousands of feet below.

REDUCTION of TAXATION EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION PROVIDED FOR

Copyright, 1923, by National Budget Committee

IN proposing a general reduction of Federal taxes Secretary Mellon declares that the people of the country should receive the benefits of the substantial reductions which the revenues of the Government are now sufficient to justify. The President in his message speaks of relief for the people, of giving every home a chance of lifting burdens that weigh most heavily upon the poor. A fair inquiry is, then, the extent to which the reductions proposed do inure to the benefit of the people. How widely will they be distributed and in what proportion are the remissions to the several abilities of the beneficiaries to pay?

An examination of the table prepared by the Government Actuary to show the estimated results of the proposed revision discloses that the income taxes of 13,124,600 individuals with incomes of $1,000 to $6,000 will be reduced by $92,750,000 during the year 1925. The Government will take another loss of $32,100,000 on the income taxes of 558,200 individuals whose incomes range from $6,000 to $10,000 a year. In other words more than 65 per cent of the relief from income taxes which it is proposed to grant will be enjoyed by individuals with incomes of $10,000 or less who will constitute more than 93 per cent of all the individual income tax payers. According to these estimates income taxes to the amount of $72,285,000 will be remitted to the 324,000 individuals whose incomes range from $1,000 to $10,000. That is to say 32 1/2 per cent of the proposed income tax relief will go to something over 23 per cent of the total number of individual income tax payers. The remaining $4,865,000, or a little more than 2 per cent of the proposed relief, will go to the 8,865 individuals having incomes of $10,000 or more.

Income
Income	$3,663,722,078
Outgoing
Outgoing	$3,298,000,444
Balance
Balance	$365,721,634
WHO IS GOING TO GET THIS BALANCE?

When we come to analyze the fairness of these proposed reductions in the light of the ability of the several classes of individuals to pay income taxes, a difficulty arises because there are available no detailed estimates as to what would be paid in 1925 providing no changes were made in the present law. Some illumination may be obtained from the definitive figures for 1921, the last to be fully tabulated, although in those tables the aggregation of classes differs somewhat from that made by the Government Actuary for 1925. These figures for 1921 show that individual taxpayers having incomes of from $1,000 to $5,000 paid only 12 1/2 per cent of the total income taxes for that year. Those receiving incomes from $5,000 to $10,000 paid 9 1/2 per cent of the total, and those receiving incomes of from $10,000 to $100,000 paid 49 1/2 per cent of the total, leaving 28 1/2 per cent to be paid by the 2,352 individuals, or 0 1/2 per cent of the total number of individuals paying income taxes, who received incomes in excess of $100,000. Making due allowance for the different bases of computation, it would seem a fair conclusion that the proportionate distribution of the proposed tax remissions is just and reasonable.

That the Boone County Poultry Association is gaining quite a reputation away from home is shown from the following taken from Farmers Home Journal, Louisville, Ky.

The Boone County Poultry Association is an active organization and has been of inestimable benefit to the poultry industry of that section, as may be seen from the following brief outline of its work in 1923:

Forty-four special breeding pens were established. The association sold 13,000 eggs for cash and put out 3,540 on the Pullet Return Plan. At their poultry show early in December, a total of $800 was given in premiums. A splendid entry of excellent birds resulted. More than 50 culling demonstrations were held in different parts of the county last year.

All the work of the Poultry Association was done under the supervision of their former county agent, W. D. Sutton, who has been employed by Hopkins county for 1924.

Representative Samuel W. Adams, who was unanimously chosen as Speaker of the House at the Democratic caucus at Frankfort, Monday, was born in Boone county 50 years ago. After completing the Boone county schools he attended the Kent College of Law in Ohio, where he graduated in 1898. He was elected Representative from Kenton county in 1902 and 1904. He stayed away from Frankfort until the session of 1922 and was again elected for the 1923 session. Mr. Adams is married and lives at Erlanger, and has quite an extensive law practice at the Kenton county bar.

The fiscal court was in session Tuesday and passed on the delinquent tax list presented by the Sheriff. The court appointed a committee to investigate the feasibility of getting gravel from the river to the roads within a few miles of the Ohio river. All persons who have done road work and have not been paid are requested to present their claims to their magistrate at once.

Coal fell from the grate in the residence of N. E. Riddell last Saturday night and set fire to the carpet and flooring. The smoke filled the room and also the room in which Mr. and Mrs. Riddell were sleeping, and when they awoke at 4 a. m., they found the floor in flames. The fire was extinguished in a few minutes. The damage was small.

The Recorder received, one day last week, the following from Mrs. Betty Snyder, of Radnor, Indiana: "Enclosed find money order for the year, 1924. Many good wishes for you and yours." Mrs. Snyder has been away from her native county many years, but is always anxious to get the news from her "Old Kentucky Home."

H. L. McGlasson, of the Hebron neighborhood, was at court Monday, and he called at the Recorder office and had the paper sent to his son, Henry R. McGlasson at Los Angeles, Calif. Henry has been in the land of sunshine and flowers about two weeks, and reports that he likes it fine.

According to the weather bureau last Saturday was the coldest weather experienced in this part of the country since 1918. In Burlington the thermometer ranged from 2 to 10 below zero. Owners of autos had trouble keeping their radiators from freezing, and many were put out of commission.

The Bureau of Jewish Research reports that the United States now leads the world in Jewish population. New York has more than five times as many Jews as Vienna of Warsaw.

Sheriff B. B. Hume and Attorney G. W. Tolin went to Frankfort on the "Adams Special" to see that the Legislature was properly set to work.

Washington, Oregon and Idaho produce nearly half of the commercial apples of the United States.

FLORENCE.

The members of the Boone County Poultry Association in the Florence precinct will meet at the Farm Bureau Building at 7 o'clock Friday evening, Dec. 11th. All who are interested in pure bred poultry are urged to attend that meeting.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

There was a fair attendance at court Monday.

Get your dog tax and save further trouble with your dog-gone dog.

Bert Berkshire has been laid up for several days with a severe cold.

There was very little business transacted in the county court Monday.

James Bullock, of near Hebron, was a business visitor to Burlington, Tuesday.

This being Leap Year, the young ladies and old maids are rehearsing on the fox-trot.

Seymour Wilson, of near Frankfort, was a business visitor to Burlington, Tuesday.

Albert William, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Weaver, has been quite sick for several days.

R. H. Stephens spent several days last week, with his brother, B. C. Stephens, in Rising Sun, Ind.

W. A. Colson, of near Frankfort, will spend the remainder of the winter of St. Petersburg, Fla., where he will spend the remainder of the winter.

The Ohio river after reaching a 56 foot stage began to recede Monday. The high water caused many of those living along the river to leave their homes.

B. F. Stansifer, one of the young business men of Walton, was among those in attendance at court, Monday, and he made the Recorder office a pleasant call.

The wills of W. B. Norman, of Walton, Thomas Corcoran, of Burlington, and Mrs. Eugenia Blythe, of Burlington, were probated in the county court Monday.

All persons who have War Savings Stamps, series of 1919, should take them to their bank or the Postoffice for redemption as the interest ceased on them January 1, 1924.

Since the first of the year a number of our good friends from all parts of the county have called in and had the date of their subscription moved up another year.

W. E. Snyder, one of the hustling young farmers of Florence precinct, attended court Monday. He called at this office and watched the operator work the ivory keys on the Linotype.

Owing to the bitter cold weather of the past week, there has been very little coming and going. It has been quite a big job for the citizens to get "tuned" in on the zero weather.

James T. Gaines and wife, of Idlewild, and Dr. T. B. Castleman and wife, of Florence, expect to leave today (Thursday) for St. Petersburg, Fla., where they will spend the winter.

Although we are now well along into the new year—1924, there are some who persist in writing it "1923." As long as a check written that way will draw, we don't care.

From estimates made Kentucky's road fund for 1924, on the present basis of revenue and exclusive of Federal aid and contributions from counties on local projects, should be close to $5,000,000.

The Kentucky Legislature convened at Frankfort Monday, and big doings are expected. The tax payers of the State will be kept on the action of every member during their stay at the Capital.

Our old friend, Charles B. Beall, of the Francesville neighborhood, paid us a visit Monday. When Charles comes he always brings a ray of sunshine that makes a fellow feel good when he is down in the mouth.

Mr. Maxie Slinger, of Gunpo, of the neighborhood, formerly of Manchester, Adams county, Ohio, was among those who braved the cold weather and attended court last Monday. He called at this office and enrolled with the Recorder family.

'Twas at the home of Conley's Where friends had gathered in, To watch the old year's closing And see the new begin; The Sleets and all the Taylors, The Delahuntys too, The Bakers and the Griffiths Made up the jolly crew.

The weather cold and cloudy, But this we did not mind, Inside was just like "Dixie," With every thing so fine; Good lights dispelled the darkness, Good fires defied the cold, Good fires filled up the empties As full as they could hold.

The turkey fine and celery, With cranberries, dressing green, And all the other dishes The best one ever ate; And then the good breads, Of candy cream and cake The finest angel feeding 'Put human hands could make.

This put all in fine humor, From supper through the night The hours were spent together, In greatest of delight; Until some one surprised us By saying: "Watch a o'er, For we are passing over To Nineteen-twenty-four."

We got ourselves together, Although the hour was late, We paused to tell how grateful We were to John and Kate; And wished them God's good blessing In basket and in store, All hoping when life's over, To meet on Heaven's shore.

$100,000 PEACE PLAN PRIZE AWARDED

Advocates Entering World Court and Cooperation With League Without Full Membership at Present—Suggests League Membership Be Opened to All Nations and Provides for Development of International Law.

The American Peace Award brought forth 22,165 plans and many thousands of letters. Since many of the plans were the composite work of organizations, universities, etc., a single plan often represented the views of hundreds or thousands of individuals. The content of these plans is therefore an index of the true feeling and judgment of hundreds of thousands of American citizens.

These plans come from every group in American life. Some are obviously from lifelong students of history and international law. Some are from persons who have studied little, but who have themselves seen and felt the horror of war—or who are even now living out its tragedy.

But among them all are these dominant currents: that, if war is honestly to be prevented, there must be a face-about on the part of the nations in their attitude toward it; that by some progressive agreement the manufacture and purchase of the munitions of war must be limited or stopped; that while no political mechanism alone will insure cooperation among the nations, there must be some machinery of cooperation if the will to cooperate is to be made effective; that mutual counsel among the nations is the real hope for bringing about the disavowal of war by the open avowal of its real causes and open discussion of them; and finally that there must be some means of defining, recording, interpreting and developing the law of nations.

Statement of Jury of Award

The Jury of Award realizes that there is no one approach to world peace, and that it is necessary to recognize not merely political but also psychological and economic factors. Committee as follows:

I. ENTER THE PERMANENT COURT

That the United States adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice for the reasons and under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

II. COOPERATE WITH THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, WITHOUT FULL MEMBERSHIP AT PRESENT

That without becoming a member of the League of Nations as at present constituted, the United States Government should extend its present cooperation with the League and propose participation in the work of its Assembly and Council under the following conditions and reservations:

Safeguarding of Monroe Doctrine

1. The United States accepts the League of Nations as an instrument of mutual counsel, but it will assume no obligation to interfere with political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign state.

In uniting its efforts with those of other States for the preservation of peace and the promotion of the common welfare, the United States insists upon the safeguarding of the Monroe Doctrine and does not abandon its traditional attitude concerning American independence of the Old World and does not consent to submit its long established policy concerning questions regarded by it as purely American to the recommendation or decision of other Powers.

No Military or Economic Force

2. That the only kind of compulsion which nations can freely engage to apply to each other in the name of Peace is that which arises from conference, from moral judgment, from full publicity, and from the power of public opinion.

The United States would assume no obligations under Article X in its present form, or under Article XVI in its present form in the Covenant, or in its amended form as now proposed, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

The United States proposes that Articles X and XVI be either dropped altogether or so amended and changed as to eliminate any suggestion of a general agreement to use coercion for obtaining conformity to the pledges of the Covenant.

No Obligations Under Versailles Treaty

3. That the United States will accept no responsibilities under the Treaty of Versailles unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

League Open to All Nations

4. The United States Government proposes that Article I of the Covenant be construed and applied, or, if necessary, rerafted, so that admission to the League shall be assured to any self-governing State that wishes to join and that receives the favorable vote of two-thirds of the Assembly.

Development of International Law

5. As a condition of its participation in the work and councils of the League, the United States asks that the Assembly and Council consent—or obtain authority—to begin collaboration for the revision and development of international law, employing for this purpose the aid of a commission of jurists. This Commission would be directed to formulate new existing rules of the law of nations, to reconcile divergent opinions, to consider points hitherto inadequately provided for but vital to the maintenance of international justice, and in general to define the social rights and duties of States. The recommendations of the Commission would be presented from time to time, in proper form for consideration, to the Assembly as to a recommending if not a law-making body.

Author's Name Not to Be Revealed Until After Referendum

In order that the vote may be taken solely upon the merits of the plan, the Policy Committee, with the assistance of Mr. Bok, has decided not to disclose the authorship of the plan until after the referendum. The identity is known to the members of the Jury of Award and the Policy Committee, except one delegated member.

DEATH ALMOST WON IN THIS RACE

This photograph, caught of an engine and an automobile while both were going at high speed, shows that the auto driver who tries to beat the train to a crossing generally ends up in a hospital or undertaker's. Death was prevented from taking its usual toll when the motorist saw his error just in time. He swung his car up a steep bank, almost overturning it, and was able to a few feet to avoid a crash.

CONCRETE BLOCK FOR NEW GARAGE

Convenient, Economical, Fire-safe and Suitable for All Classes of Structures.

The amount of money invested in even the lowest priced automobile justifies a substantial garage that will give the required protection against weather, theft and fire.

With a garage on the home grounds the owner has his car always within reach and where he can use his spare time in keeping it clean and in good running order. He also has a place to keep oil, spare tires and other car supplies. With the car near the house there will be less danger from fire, tampering and pilfering as it is always under the owner's eye.

Suitable and Practical.
Wherever possible the material used in the walls and roof of the garage should be the same as that of the house. Concrete block are suitable and practical for all classes of garages from the small building, such as is shown in the illustration, to the types with separate rooms for several cars, such as are built for the accommodation of car owners living in apartment houses. The block may be finished in stucco to harmonize with the house by the addition in cement mix of color to produce the desired tint.

An essential feature of garage design is wide eaves or overhang, which serve as a protection to the owner from rain or dripping water when locking the doors during wet weather. A door at the side will be found convenient for use when the car is not to be taken out.

Garages are often heated from the house plant, although there are many small, inexpensive, garage heaters which give perfect satisfaction. A flue for separate heating in one of the floor plans may be easily included in the building.

Special care should be given to the selection of the hardware for supporting and operating the large movable doors. Doors that stick and bind are a nuisance and an extra $10 spent on a nuisance will more than repay good hardware will more than repay the owner in comfort and convenience.

Allow for Working Space.
A garage should be built to allow for plenty of working space about the car, and even though the owner's car be of the smaller type, it is good economy to build a garage to accommodate a large car, thus anticipating future needs.

Built of concrete block, finished in stucco, a garage is practically permanent. Expense from repairs, painting, and insurance is reduced to a minimum and the car owner is assured that his car has maximum protection.

STICKING OF CONE CLUTCH

Usually the Result of Worn Facing—New Leathers—Rapid Remedy the Trouble.

The sticking of a cone clutch may be due to a tendency of the clutch member to fit too snugly in the cone part of the flywheel. This is usually the result of worn facing of the clutch member, caused, in turn, by burning the face through a habit of slipping the clutch. A new leather facing should remedy the trouble and a handy temporary solution is to wedge broken pieces of a back-saw blade between the facing and the clutch member at several points on its circumference. This will often smooth out a rough and sticking cone clutch.

TROLLEY CAR CANNOT CHANGE ITS COURSE

Dangerous Practice to Follow Street Cars Too Closely—Keep Twelve Feet Away.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

Accidents in which automobiles figure with trolley cars are not the most uncommon on the list and there are several little points that if followed by the auto driver will lessen such accidents. One of the principal things to keep in mind is that a trolley car runs on tracks and consequently cannot change its course, so that it is up to the motor car pilot to watch out for trolleys, rather than for the motor car to watch out for automobiles.

Every day we see automobiles closely following street cars on the rails. This is a very dangerous practice, for the auto driver has no means of knowing what instant the motor man may jam on his brakes, and in such a case it is almost impossible to avoid a collision. Then there is the auto driver who fails to take into consideration the fact that trolley cars are likely to turn off at corners where tracks intersect, and thus at times the motorist finds himself jammed between the trolley and the curb. Also the driver often fails to know that when a street car turns away from him on a curve the rear end is bound to swing out several feet beyond the tracks.

To be safe a driver should always stop his auto at least twelve feet behind a standing street car, and in no case should he take dangerous chances crowding in between a trolley and the curb. Also drivers should never attempt to pass a street car moving in the same direction, on the left side, but this is a practice that is common in many cities.

BEWARE OF THE "ROAD LIFT"

Prudence in City or Elsewhere Says That It Shall Neither Be Offered or Accepted.

The lift on the road is an old act of kindness. Decent people in settled orderly places offered it because they were amiable and wanted to help another person along the way; but prudence in a city, or elsewhere for that matter, says that it shall neither be offered nor accepted nowadays.

A good deal of crime is on wheels, says the Chicago Tribune. Criminals are scouting the street and the country roads. The people they pick up are virtually helpless. Contrarywise, the man in a car who yields to a request for a ride may find a gun at his head in short order. The good Samaritan may go to the hospital in a barrel. It is the ugly necessity of city life to regard a stranger as a potential enemy. It need not result in discourtesy, but it says keep your guard up. Credulity often leads to an empty pocketbook and a black eye, or, in the case of a woman, to worse.

TUBE REPAIR KIT ESSENTIAL

One of the Most Important Accessories for Every Motorist to Carry in His Machine.

Probably one of the most important accessories for every motorist to have in his car is a tube repair kit. It is very much like life insurance, in that it is no good at all until needed. When it is needed it is indispensable. This fact is particularly true when tires are punctured many miles from any repair station. Considering the kit's small cost the men say it is the cheapest insurance possible against country road delays and expense.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

A tire with low air pressure creates friction and causes the car to slow up.

A rigid shaft will bind unless the alignment is perfect and provision is made to prevent frame deflection.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

Vol. XXXVIII

Established 1875

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

Most legislation of a revolutionary character; that is, of a kind greatly to change the established order, necessarily goes through three stages. First, it is proposed, and rejected, proposed, and laughed to scorn again, proposed, and again rejected. Next, it goes through the educating stage, when the forces behind it realize that only educating the whole people up to demanding the legislation will serve to make Congress pay attention. Third, comes the stage of waiting for Congressional action, of getting time before the legislative body to have the thing done which every one wants done.

The Education bill is in the third stage. It is not laughed at any more. The people want it. Educators want it. Organizations want it. The states want it. Practically every one wants it, except a few selfish business organizations which see in it the lessening of the possibility for business to exploit schools and the opposition, of course, of those who oppose any extension of the public school idea.

But these are fleabites. The country, as a whole, has overwhelmingly shown that it wants the Education bill made into law, and the Education bill as it was planned, not as some have wanted it amended, to include welfare and the various "odds and ends" of legislation paternalism which the United States has hanging on to various departments in Washington.

The only question now is, when will Congress give it time? Tax revision comes first, doubtless, but there is anything else before the Congress of more importance than this great measure which will so signalize and so vitally affect our schools, revivify them, render them with new purpose and new vitality, and make possible, as never before, the full flowering of the public school idea?

It is possible that history will record the Bok Peace Prize offer as a potent force for peace, even if the winning plan is never adopted.

The donor of the prize has stated that should there be no further results, should no plan fit for use come forth, and the prize be given for no result, the prize would yet have accomplished its purpose, in that it has focused the attention of millions of thinking Americans, and almost as many Europeans, upon the problem of peace. Teach enough people to think steadily about peace and how to have it, and you get it, in other words.

Who will be the philanthropist to come forward with a hundred thousand dollar or half million-dollar offer, for the best practicable plan to eliminate illiteracy from the United States, and bring the subject of education so powerfully, so potentially, so vividly before our national consciousness, that we will have the schools we ought to have, the government aid for education we ought to have, the educational opportunities for all our young people we ought to have?

Mr. Bok has pointed the way. He has shown what a constructive imagination can do with his fortune in a prize, and received perhaps, more fervent adverting for the plan than ten times its total sum could have bought.

DIVISION OF WAR PROFITS

The soldiers' bonus question seems to have developed into a fight between the American Legion and a number of war veterans who do not belong to the Legion. Back of the opposition, however, is the power and influence of Wall Street and men of larger incomes who are anxious to have surtaxes cut as far as Mr. Mellon's proposition. They fear that if the bonus is granted taxes will not be reduced. Will Rogers, the cowboy philosopher, aptly recalls the time when the American people promised the soldier boy everything in the house—even the cook stove if he would save the world for democracy by acting as a target for German bullets. It was admitted on the floor of the Senate that if there had been no profits in the war there would have been no war—and it pulls hard to divide those profits with the boys who were forced to work for $1.25 per day and now claim a small equity in the profits. From their standpoint it is not a question of charity—it is a question of equity in law.

Medical tests are required in France in order to get an automobile driver's license. If they included the head, we'd be for trying it in this country.

THE GOVERNOR WANTS BONDS.

Governor Fields' first message to the Legislature is commendably brief. And a brief characterization of it would be to say that it is an argument in favor of a $75,000,000 bond issue as a block-out by several gentlemen who have undertaken to specify how large the issue should be and how the money is to be expended—or rather for what purposes it shall be expended. How, by what agencies, it is to be expended, is another phase of the problem which these gentlemen have not as yet agreed to solve. And on its solution, it is hardly necessary to say, depends that attitude which many Kentuckians will take on the question.

In developing this argument the Governor marshals a series of facts which are not to be disputed, a series of conditions in the State of remedying the State's educational system should be improved. The Normal Schools, the University, should be better cared for. The penal, corrective and charitable institutions are in a physical state that is a disgrace to the Commonwealth. The public debt should be liquidated. The geological survey should be completed. The roads—everybody knows Kentucky is a "detour State," and that it will take big money, and much besides the money, to get it out of the mud. All of this, the Governor argues, requires the $75,000,000 bond issue.

That this sum is neatly apportioned, according to schedule arranged by the gentlemen who are sponsors for the bond plan—$50,000,000 for roads and the remainder divided between primary and high schools, white and colored normal schools, the Institution for the Blind, the penal, corrective and charitable institutions, and the public debt. To these items have been added $400,000 for a topographic survey and map and $350,000 for tuberculosis sanatoriums. How many and what character of sanatoriums that sum is expected to provide for the entire State, is not explained.

Nor is it explained what safeguards for the proper expenditure of all this money are proposed, beyond the Governor's suggestions of some innovations in the matter of the State Highway Commission. He thinks the Governor should sit with the Commission without a vote, and stress the advantages of creating an Executive Secretary of the Commission, to devote all his time to his work at a salary of not less than $4,000. He also advises that the Commission be given power to remove any official or employee of the Highway Department.

Assuming that these recommendations of the Governor be adopted, there are many who will wait to study the personnel of his completed Highway Commission before making up their minds to intrust to it the expenditure of $50,000,000.

An excellent recommendation, made in accordance with Governor Fields' announcement a few days ago is that for the repeal of the statute creating the office of Oil Inspector. The Governor has declared that he will not go beyond this recommendation and do all he can to obtain its adoption. That, no doubt, will be necessary for its adoption, for there will be strong opposition to the reform.

MARVELOUS RADIO DEVELOPMENT

During 1923 radio development involved an expenditure of more than $50,000,000 for receiving apparatus. Some 18 companies are manufacturing parts and cannot fill their orders. It is predicted that next year the volume of business will exceed the talking machine. Radio, quietly but steadily, is effecting a revolution in American social habits, destined, it is said, to change them as radically as the automobile and the "movies" have done. To just what extent radio is going to affect old-time purveyors of entertainment—theaters, picture houses, lectures and concert givers—is not known. America now has 537 broadcasting stations, and it is estimated that there are more than 35,000,000 listeners. A census taken recently showed that half of these listeners preferred "jazz" and other "popular" music. The commercial uses of the radio is now being developed and it may become as great a factor as the telephone or telegraph.

It doesn't require a bright mind to keep still at the right time.

GONE TO HIS REWARD

J. J. Stephens, Aged 78, Dies at The Home of His Daughter in Lawrenceburg, Ind.

John James Stephens, aged 78 years, one of the county's best known and highly esteemed citizens, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. H. Aylor, in Lawrenceburg, Ind., with whom he had been making his home since 1905, Wednesday Jan. 9th, 1924.

J. J. Stephens was a son of John Q. and Lucy Ann Stephens, was born in East Bend, Sept. 2d, 1845. He was twice married, his first wife was Agnes Ann Scott, to which union was born seven children, four having preceded him to the great beyond. He died July 25th, 1905. He was again married May 4th, 1907, to Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, who died March 5th, 1918, since which time he made his home with his daughter in Lawrenceburg.

Surviving him are three children, Mrs. L. H. Aylor, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., Mrs. J. Everett Ryle, of East Bend, and Lewis L. Stephens, of Burlington, ten grandchildren, two brothers, Zack and Lunsford, of Rabbit Hash, and one half sister, Mrs. Creamer, of Osborn, Mo.

For several years Mr. Stephens was a member of the Fiscal Court of Boone county, from Carlton precinct and was always faithful to every one. He was an industrious farmer, a good citizen and neighbor, honest, upright and respected for his high moral character.

Funeral services were held Friday, Jan. 11th, at K. of P. Hall, Rabbit Hash, with burial in the family grave yard.

THE HOME GIRL

While there is a great glitter about the stage life, yet the girl who remains at home and makes her life a life of service, removed from the glare of the footlights will carve for herself a much happier career than can be possible to one who through theatrical glamour.

There is a great yearning these days, the world seeming to be pleased mad, but the world that sits in the auditorium is prone to shut out the girl who makes music from their circles. The parents of the theatre are willing to listen to the songs or look at the pictures but there the intimacy ends; and the girl of the stage seeks other and very often questionable companionships simply because she has by her own choice of vocation divorced herself from her friends. Even in the higher ranks of acting, the women have no distinction because of their talents and devotion to their art, the woman of the stage is very much alone. She shuns the association of the mere player and in turn is often denied access to the fellowships of circles that look upon her profession with disdain, even though its members sit in the boxes and listen to the plays.

The girl who sticks to the home may never have her name emblazoned upon the billboards, but she will be far happier and useful than the girl who, restive under restraint, seeks the stage to get away from parental direction.

John Stewart, Dead

Our beloved brother John Stewart, of North Bend, Ohio, passed away the 4th of January, aged 66 years and 10 days. He was born in Boone county, Ky., in the year of 1857. He was well known and liked by all who knew him. He was a loving brother, true husband and a kind father. He was married in 1882 to Nancy Loudon. To them were born four children, two girls and two boys, one boy having died in infancy. Willie died in 1918, Mrs. Joe Sprau died in 1921 and Mrs. Lucy Welsh, of North Bend, who still survives and is the only child left to mourn his loss. He also leaves three sisters, four grand sons and other relatives to mourn his loss.

Some 114 persons are still serving prison terms under the war "sedition" laws, sentenced from seven different states. They are in prison because of no criminal act other than their beliefs in the right of free speech. A committee of liberals, composed of both men and women, has made an appeal to the governors of these states, to follow the example set by President Coolidge.

Mrs. Barnhart, president of the Spoken Women's Clubs, insists that every year should be a year, and that women should have the right to propose marriage to the man she loves at any time. According to the testimony of many men, women are becoming more fearless and business-like in this matter and the custom promises to become general within another generation.

The geographical center of foreign-born population is in Allen county, Indiana—twenty miles north west than in the 1910 census.

CONQUERING THE AIR

Has man really conquered the air? That question was in the minds of most of us after the finding of the wreck of the French super-durable, Dixmude, on the coast of Sicily.

Here was the perfected work of man which was heralded as his triumph in the battle with the air, crushed as if it were a toy balloon. Proud officers had boasted of her prowess. She was the queen of the upper regions, undisputed and unexcelled.

But man-made as it was, the Dixmude did not have the strength to combat successfully the elements which no human has ever controlled. Man may conquer on perfecting his masterpieces of his brain. He may continue to display his genius and his resourcefulness in many lines of endeavor, but there is a greater power than his—an unseen power—over which he has no control.

The Titanic, the majestic mistress of the seas, in her day, was splintered by an iceberg.

Vast and impressive buildings have been laid low by tornadoes.

The proud empire of Japan was stripped of her glory and her material accumulations by a shaking of the earth.

And innumerable world disasters crowd themselves upon us to remind man that humbleness is still a virtue.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH

The century mark as the span of man's life will be the rule instead of the exception within the next generation if the rapid strides in prolonging life during the last decade are continued during the next 15 years. This fact is revealed in the report of the State Board of Health showing that the average life in Kentucky has been increased fifteen years since 1909.

Not only were the number of deaths in 1923 fewer by one-third than in 1909, but the number of births increased one-third during the same period, thus insuring an increase in the State's man power. This optimistic condition is attributed by the State Board of Health to the eradication of preventable diseases and to the cooperation of health workers, health agencies, physicians and a receptive public.

The State's most important health problem, according to the State Board of Health, is in the rural districts due to the fact that Kentucky has the huge rural population of 1,884,412.

"The State's older citizens will remember when yellow fever and cholera were expected and necessary plagues," the report continues. In 1886, Louisville had the highest death rate from typhoid fever in the civilized world. In 1923 it had one of the lowest.

"During 1923 more improved water purification plants were installed than in any other five years of the State's history. Tuberculosis clinics were held in one-third of the counties of the State and hundreds of those suffering from this disease were taught how to keep it from spreading to other members of the family, particularly the children who furnish the greatest number of victims of this disease.

"More than 500,000 persons were inoculated against typhoid fever, the vaccine for which was manufactured in the State laboratory and distributed free."

During 1924 the goal of the State Board of Health is an annual physical examination of every man, woman and child in the State for the purpose of detecting disease before its insidious invasions have left their scars. To this end Dr. A. T. McCormac, secretary of the board is urging that every Kentuckian be examined on their birthday and asks the physicians of the State to concentrate their efforts on keeping their patients well instead of limiting their practice to curing ills that already have gripped the human frame.

The physical education act of 1920, which was an accomplishment of the State Board of Health, requires that thirty minutes of each day be devoted to health education in all the schools. Approximately one-third of the children of the State underwent physical examinations in 1923 and more of them were vaccinated against smallpox than in any previous year. This is all public health work done in 1923, has practically disappeared. Thousands of school children also were immunized for life against diphtheria during the last year.

"Notwithstanding Christ's command 'to preach and heal,' the Church of England has finally concluded that 'no sick person must look to a clergyman to do what it is a physician's or surgeon's duty to do.' The report is general in character and admits that the subject is too many-sided and difficult for specific conclusions.

The person who thinks the younger generation is going to the eternal bow works forgets some of the pranks of an earlier day.

J. W. HOWE IS DEAD

End Came Wednesday Night at Residence Here.

LIFE OF SERVICE

Is The Thought Of Those Who Knew And Loved Him.

J. W. Howe, one of Hamilton's oldest and most highly respected citizens, passed away at his home, 122 Eaton Avenue, Jan. 9th, 1924, at the age of eighty-one years.

He was born December 8, 1842, at Covington, Ky., but was left parentless at the age of four years when both his father and mother passed away. J. W. Howe made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Steer, of near Covington who reared and educated him to his own child. He in turn loved them as his own parents.

At the early age of nineteen years he began to teach school, in which profession he continued for eighteen years. He had the distinction of being the highest paid teacher in Boone county, Ky., at that time. Mr. Howe was one of the few residents of that county who will remember how to respect their teacher, "Jim" Howe, who always had a word of commendation for those who did well and who kindly administered reproof to those who erred.

Moved To Hamilton

He retired from the teaching profession at the age of 37 years because of his health, and purchased a farm where he worked and lived for five years. Then, becoming dissatisfied with the educational facilities offered for his children, he sold his farm and moved to the farm on Heitzman's Hill, near Hamilton, which was known as the Wilson place. For fifteen years, until the oldest children were married, he lived and worked there. He then moved to Hamilton and was engaged in the drug business on Central avenue. He later sold the store and became engaged in the real estate business, being a charter member of the Hamilton Real Estate Board.

J. W. Howe was well known and respected by all who had the privilege to meet him. He was a life-long member of the Church of Christ in which congregation he was an active worker, and while in school seldom missed the Lord's Day Communion service.

For nearly sixty years he was a member of the Masons and was past master of Boone Lodge, Florence, Ky., the meetings of which were held in the old school house made famous by Uriah Lloyd's "String-tom On the Pike." At the time of his death he was a member of Washington Lodge No. 17, F. & A. M.

He left to mourn his loss, the beloved widow, Amanda E. Howe, five children, William Howe, Mrs. Anna Lamm, Mrs. Tillie H. Kernahan, of Hamilton; Frank M. Howe of Franklin, S. C.; twelve grand-children, three great-grand children, and one sister, Mattie J. Sutton, of Portland, Ore.

His wife who survives him was Miss Amanda Surface, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Surface, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, who passed to the great beyond many years ago. The wife and children have the sympathy of a host of friends and relatives in this county.

POULTRY MAETING.

The Boone County Poultry Association will meet at the court house, Tuesday, Jan. 22, at 1 o'clock. At that time business will be considered which will be of interest to every poultry raiser in the county. The price of eggs for the different breeds will be discussed and also new methods of handling and Pullet Return Plan, will be considered.

Mr. Leonard Kite, President of the Association, asks that all purebred poultry raisers in Boone county attend this meeting, to help determine its business policies and make it a going profitable organization. He also invites all those who are interested in becoming purebred chicken raisers during the next year.

R. J. Matson, County Agricultural Agent, will discuss the "Value of Purebred Poultry on the Farm."

The lovers of movie picture shows will be delighted next Friday and Saturday nights when Manager Porter will present "The Mark of the Beast" by Thomas Dixon, author of the "Birth of a Nation" at Burlington and Petersburg theatres. This great play will be preceded by the comedy, "Helpful Hogan." This is one of the shows you don't want to miss.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

"gentleman the other day, who had just secured his dog license for the year 1924. 'I can't see why some have to take out license and others get by without doing so.' It is the law abiding citizen who pays his taxes and obeys the laws, that keeps out trouble. If the other fellow wishes to disobey the law, and refrain from securing his license for his dog or on other things which the law requires, it is he who is taking a chance, and if he is taken for failure to comply with the laws of the land, he alone will have to pay the penalty. The same thing might be said about making moonshine—some will try it, while others will not.

J. K. Sebre, of the Hathaway neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Thursday. Mr. Sebre had a sale of his personal property on the 2nd inst. He will move to Florence next week where he has built a handsome new home and where he expects to make his home. A year or two ago Mr. Sebre bought some property at Florence on the Dixie Highway and owing to the advance in real estate over there he has realized a nice profit.

J. O. Bonta from out on the Petersburg pike, was in town early last Thursday morning, Jan. 10th, receiving congratulations over the arrival of a little 11-pound "dish wash" at his home that morning. Out of nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bonta this is the first girl, and the eight boys each has a sister. On the mother's side, out of twenty-four grand-children this is the first girl born. Mr. Bonta was wearing a smile that the yard stick refused to measure. Wahneeda Irene is her name.

In this issue will be found the financial statements of the ten Boone county banks, and the Erlanger banks. All these banks show a healthy growth. These banks from their reports, are in a splendid position to take care of their army of depositors, and besides they pay taxes and four per cent on time deposits, which is safe and very attractive to the people who want to keep their money as good cash, and where they can get it when needed.

Judge J. M. Lassing, who is spending the winter with his family at St. Petersburg, Fla., was in Burlington two or three days last week, making a settlement with the Sheriff for the year 1923. Before he left for his southern home he reported that he found the county in good shape financially. The Judge and wife will be back in old Boone when the "Robbins nest again."

It is claimed that there are plenty of quail and rabbits in the county to bring on another crop next season. This is a no doubt, to the fact that many of the farmers had their lands planted against hunting, or the poor marksmanship of the hunters is responsible for this preservation of the game.

The money derived from the dog tax goes into a fund to pay for sheep killed by dogs. If a man has to pay taxes on a flock of sheep he owns, the fellow who owns a sheep-killing dog ought to be willing to pay a tax of $1.00, even if it has to be killed if caught killing sheep.

This is a fast age, and boys and young men are now spending more money in a day than the old man did in a month when he was a boy. Many of these young men will not work, and just how they get their money is a mystery.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Quick, formerly of the Hebron neighborhood, but for many years residents of Latonia, have gone to Florida, where they will spend the winter among sunshine and flowers.

The load limit law is now in force, and it is almost the law to haul over the roads in Boone county a load exceeding in weight 10,000 pounds. This includes the weight of the truck and driver.

The County Clerk has been keeping busy issuing auto license for the past two weeks, and up to date only about half of the owners have secured their 1924 tags.

Stripping tobacco is progressing very slowly in Boone county, and many growers will be late in getting their crops ready for delivery.

G. W. Burkett, of Union, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday. He called in to see the printers while in town.

Loads exceeding 18,000 pounds must not be hauled over the roads in Boone county, Ky. A heavy fine is the penalty.

Judging from divorces in high places, 1923 must have been a prosperous year.

There has not been much trapping this season.

REVENUE TABLE SUBMITTED

To Kentucky Legislators—Shows Increase For State Purposes.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 14.—Ben Marshall, Secretary of the State Tax Commission completed a lengthy tabulation today, showing the revenue of each county for state purposes from 1917 to 1923. County revenue increased 160.3-10 per cent between 1917 and 1923, state revenue for the same period 58.1-10 per cent. In other words a $1 increase for state purposes and $3 increase of valuation for county purposes are shown, Secretary Marshall said. The tabulation was placed upon desks of members of the General Assembly.

POULTRY INDUSTRY NEEDS EFFICIENCY

That efficiency in production will be the key note of the Poultry Conference of the Farm and Home Convention to be held here January 23 to Feb. 1, is the statement just issued by J. Holmes Martin, Poultry Department, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Our reports show," says Prof. Martin "that in those flocks where records have been kept, where proper feeding has been introduced, and where culling has been used to rid the flock of inferior birds the production has been increased one hundred per cent over that held by the state at large. In other words, the hen in the record flocks lays more than twice as many eggs as the hen in the ordinary flock. That means not only a loss of feed, but also a loss of time spent in caring for poor hens and only poor production at the end of the year. For the latter the cheapest feed is that ration which provides egg materials for the egg producing factory of a good hen; hens will not lay half eggs."

With this idea in view Prof. Martin has helped bring noted speakers in the poultry industry here for the two days of the conference. Dr. O. B. Kent formerly of the Cornell College of Agriculture and who first proposed the present methods of culling poultry will deliver two lectures, The Feeding of Poultry and Growing Stock, and Selection and Breeding for Egg Production; while A. Breeding Program for the Farm Flock and Successful Methods of Turkey Raising are subjects of lectures by Homer W. Jackson, Associate Editor of the Poultry Journal. In addition demonstrations on practical feeding methods of the farm flock, judging for egg production, what the Kentucky Poultry Association can do, and the Possibilities of Cooperative Marketing of Poultry Products, will be given by experts associated with the College of Agriculture.

MONDAY IN FRANKFORT

Advocates of Governor William J. Fields' first recommendations to the Legislature, the $75,000,000 issue, appeared before the General Assembly to appeal for speedy, concerted legislative action. The General Assembly reconvening after a five-day recess, referred two contest cases to committees, and met a joint session to hear advocates of the bond issue. Speaker S. W. Adams named the House Rules Committee of 15, the most important committee in the House, its Representative Frank L. Strange, Chairman. The Efficiency Committee filed a report on revenue and taxation with the Governor. State Auditor Shanks appointed E. J. Hooten, of Franklin, to be head of the Fine and Forfeitures Department. The State Board of Education, composed of McHenry Rhoads, Superintendent of Schools, Attorney General Frank C. Daugherty, and Emma Gray Cromwell, Secretary of State, conducted its first meeting and heard reports from Dr. Charles L. Lewis of Morehead Normal School, and Dr. John Carr, of Murray Normal School.

A report came to friends and relatives here of Mr. Brice Mayhew's poor health at his home near Sayler Park.

Keeping warm has been the biggest job since Christmas. Woodsawings are the order of the day, and beautiful music filled the air last Thursday evening, played on a wood saw by the famous Robert Alter.

Miss Sarah E. Tanner accepted the position to teach the third grade in the Ludlow school and began her work last Thursday. The vacancy was caused by ill health and resignation of the third grade teacher, and Supt. Reynolds knowing Miss Tanner's high standing as a high school student together with her excellent grades from Independence last summer, selected her for the position and wrote her at once. We all wish her good health and the best of success in this noble undertaking.

GUNPOWDER

About two inches of snow fell here last Saturday night.

Quicker Than Corn

Tuxedo Hog Ration, fed in a self feeder with corn, will put weight on your hogs quicker, and more economically, than will corn alone.

Corn is fattening. But a hog has got to produce bone and muscle along with the fat, or he won't grow as fast as he should.

Tuxedo Hog Ration contains those food elements which corn lacks, and which the hog needs.

CONSTANCE.

The river has gone down and people can get to Covington now.

Harry Kiasner, of Welch, Va., was the guest of his parents here New Year's week.

It is reported that Sherman Peemo, son of James Peemo, and Irene Arnold, daughter of Walter Arnold, of near Burlington, are married. We wish them much joy.

The funeral of Charles Kelse was held Saturday morning, Jan. 5th, who died very suddenly of heart failure. He united with the church here during the protracted meeting. The services were conducted by Bro. Latimer. His wife has the sympathy of this community in her hour of sorrow. He was buried in the cemetery here. One by one they cross the silent river to the other shore.

The Ladies Aid was reorganized with fifteen members. Mrs. L. Dolwick is president, Mrs. Fannie Kenyon is vice-president, Mrs. Sophia Zimmer is financial secretary and Mrs. Fred Prable is recording secretary. They are organized at the home of Mrs. Popham, and their first meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Fannie Kenyon. The church is marching on. They have organized a Men's Brotherhood and are going to organize a boys and girls club.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Eliza Fox, wife of Henry Fox, who died Jan. 7th, aged 75 years, was held at the church here Saturday afternoon, Jan. 5th. She died at her home on Patton street Riverside. The services were conducted by the Methodist preacher of Riverside. Mrs. Fox was born and reared and married in Stringtown. She was the daughter of Thomas Hankins and wife. She leaves to mourn her loss her aged husband, several children and many other friends and relatives. Henry Fox is a Civil War veteran and is 83 years of age. So they cross the river one by one.

Several from here attended the shower and dance at W. W. Scott's Monday night.

The many friends here were surprised to hear of the wedding of Miss Dela Brock and Ross Scitt. They were quietly married last Saturday at Warsaw. Many friends here wish them much joy through their married life.

THE BIG FARMERS' AND BUSINESS MEN'S BANQUET

At a recent meeting of the Dearborn County Farmers' Federation, it was decided to hold the Annual Farmers' and Business Men's Banquet at Lawrenceburg this year, if proper arrangements could be made at that place. Consequently a Banquet committee of the organization was appointed to carry out the plans.

This Committee met with the directors of the Lawrenceburg Kiwanis Club Saturday night to present the requirements of the banquet, at which time the directors gladly decided to meet the requirements and to give their hearty co-operation in making it a success.

The Banquet will probably be held at the Liberty Theatre on the 29th of February. The definite date and place will be announced in the near future. We are planning on an excellent program with an address by a speaker of national repute.

Boone county was represented by J. C. Bedinger, Dr. E. L. Glacken, J. G. Renaker, B. C. Gaines, A. B. Renaker, Geo. Penn, B. H. Riley, Chas. Riley, Henry Gault, Frank Hossman, Earl Aylor and Elmer Goodridge at the Good Roads meeting held in Frankfort last Monday.

The sentiment of those present favored the $50,000,000 road bond issue, and that the $25,000,000 recommended by the Governor should not be coupled with nor made a part of the road bond question. The different bond issues should be submitted to the voters in such form that they can intelligently cast their vote in favor of or against any one of the different propositions for which the bonds are to be issued.

O. K. Whitson and wife are spending several weeks with their daughter, Mrs. Blanche Coffman, of Walton.

A man has been lynched in Italy. There's one at least that can't be blamed on the southern states.

There is quite a lot of sickness over the county.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Looking Ahead

LAST Spring a total of 350,000 people were disappointed in not being able to obtain deliveries of Ford Cars and Trucks, as orders were placed faster than cars could be produced.

The demand for Ford Cars and Trucks this Spring will, according to all indications, be far greater than last Spring.

Winter buying has been increasing at a greater rate than ever before.

Actual retail deliveries the past 60 days totaled 308,170 Ford Cars and Trucks, an increase of 1,961 a day over a year ago.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

The above facts are given with the suggestion that you list your order promptly with a Ford dealer if you contemplate the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer and wish to avoid delay in delivery.

Ford Motor Company
Detroit, Michigan

You need not pay cash for your car. You can arrange to make a small deposit down, taking care of the balance in easy payments. Or, you can buy on the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan. This puts you on the preferred order list and insures delivery of your car at a time to be determined by yourself.

HENS FOLLOW SAWMILL

FOR PROFIT

Profitable use of cut-over land is one of the problems of any section in which much lumbering is done. F. M. Harrison, of the Sunset Hill Farms, Lake, Miss., with the advice of the county agricultural extension agent, has tried poultry raising as a solution of the problem both for his own and for his neighbors' information. Starting in 1920 with 1 male bird and 5 hens of high-producing strains, he had by the next spring about 50 pullets. The following year his flock numbered 150 pullets and by January, 1923, it had increased to 400 pullets. For the eight months from January to September, 1923, Mr. Harrison realized from his flock a profit of $400 in addition to the value of the birds, which, by September, numbered 600. The profits were made almost entirely from the sale of eggs, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, the price received averaging about 35 cents per dozen. Many people have visited the farm, some coming a distance of 75 miles, and reports show that nearly a hundred farmers who have studied the methods used on this farm are starting flocks. Mr. Harrison is increasing his flock and expects to devote additional time to his poultry plant.

MORE HONORS COME TO BOONE COUNTY

Boone county received honorable mention again when Kinsey Farm, of opulent Lane, went to the Blue Grass Poultry Show at Lexington, last week, and won best display on their Wyandottes. They were awarded the mammoth silver cup given by the Lexington Bankers' Association, for having the best male bird of this show.

They also won 1st male, 1st hen, 1st pullet, 1st old pen, 4th male, 4th hen, 4th pullet, and ran a very close second for Grand Champion female of the show.

The Blue Grass Show was one of the prettiest of the season and had 1028 birds entered.

Mr. C. F. Kinsey returned from Lexington with a barrel of Henry Clay flour, a wool sweater, a ladies purse, the Grand Champion Ribbon given by the Farmers Home Journal and a large bunch of bananas in addition to the Loving Cup and ribbons.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Neal, of Aurora, Ind., sends us a check for another year's subscription. Mrs. O'Neal likes to get the news from her old Kentucky home.

Get in on the dog tax before it is overhauling too late. Don't be caught napping by letting your dog run without a 1924 tag. A dollar paid is eight saved.

Mrs. B. H. Snyder of Erlanger, is home from Bethesda hospital much improved after a serious head operation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gaines and son Virgil, spent Sunday with Mrs. Fannie Cropper.

OUTLAWING THE POCKET FLASK.

Public sentiment put the open sale out of business.

It is the same thing to the pocket flask. Drinking of intoxicating liquor since the passage of the Volstead Act, confined largely to the large centers of population in the United States, is spreading to the smaller cities and towns and the rural communities at such an alarming rate that some steps will have to be taken to curb the evil.

People were slow to act against the open saloon, they have been equally slow in the case of the pocket flask. But once aroused, a sentiment that stands for right and public decency will not be denied, as was so clearly made manifest by the passage of the prohibition amendment to the constitution, and the enforcement act.

The pocket flask will have to be so treated from decent society. Once it is an article, so many young people will not think it necessary to "take a nip" at the dance or other social functions.

Making sense out of drinking is no easy task. There is no restraint on youth that there once was, and parents do not have them under control as well as they might, but the job ahead is small compared to that which culminated with the passing of the public drinking place.

The time is coming when the very men and women who advocate prohibition will have to take a stand on this question; and when it can be created any longer, they will form a militant front to combat it.

Perhaps taking such an alarming view of the situation is too pessimistic; perhaps the apparent looseness of so many young people of this day is only another aftermath of the period of strain through which the people of the world passed during the war.

It may be true that the alarmists are overdoing it, but there have been so many instances where the alarm has been sounded too late and mother's hearts have been crushed and fathers have been broken in spirit. It is not too late to save the boy or girl who has not been caught in the whirlpool that carries them to ruin.

The temptation can be taken from the paths they will tread if the people who realize the dangers ahead do not postpone definite action.

Outlawing the pocket flask is only one of the things that will be done to curb the evil.

MORE QUALITY IN LIVESTOCK SAYS EXPERT

That one of the biggest problems of the livestock industry in Kentucky is the production of higher quality products with as low a cost of production as possible is the opinion of Prof. E. S. Good of the Kentucky College of Agriculture in discussing the Farm and Home Convention to be held here Jan. 29 to Feb. 1st.

"What agriculture needs generally and especially the livestock industry is economy of production and an especial care that the highest quality of product seeks the market," he continues. "At the present time we have an over-production of pork and beef, and the only phase of animal husbandry where we can afford to increase the production is in larger flocks of sheep, and in greater amounts of dairy products. We can improve the quality of sheep by caring for the lambs; better feeding methods, docking, proper castration and cross breeding all play a part in that direction. Experiments are at this time being conducted to determine whether the chub, medium rangy, or rangy type of hog is the most economical when we consider cost of feeding and eventual price brought on the market; but meanwhile we can apply the principles of economics by using hugging down crops, using supplementary feeds, proper pasturing and better methods of cutting and curing pork."

Prof. Good is one of the speakers at the special Livestock Conference of the Farm and Home Convention but he has here sounded the key note of the meetings which will reconstruct a constructive program of Kentucky agriculture. Other leaders in the conference will be L. D. H. Weld, Manager of the Commercial Research Department of Swift & Co., who will deliver lectures on "Looking Ahead with Reference to Livestock" and "The Outlook in the Sheep Industry."

Italy began the silk industry in the fourteenth century, but in 1750 France surpassed Italy and has since kept the first position. Street railway motormen and conductors of Sheffield, Ala., have received a voluntary wage increase of five cents an hour. The lead deposits in the United States are found chiefly in the Mississippi Valley and the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

The wage scale of St. Louis taxi cab drivers for 1924 calls for $28.50 a week, an increase of $1 over the old rate.

Fifty-eight labor banks have been established in the United States and all are operating successfully.

BUSINESS AND THE NEW YEAR.

There is no need to start the new year with misgivings.

Although business suffered a slump during the latter half of 1923, due to the cautious attitude of business men generally, nothing alarming can be found in the present situation. Last year started off with a rush because supplies of goods in the hands of either the producer or the middleman, had been almost exhausted and buyers began to stock up, when confidence was restored and it began to appear that we were returning to normalcy.

Buying turned into a veritable flood and did not lessen until business men began to recall bitter memories of their experiences in 1920, which were still fresh in their minds. Then the cautious attitude developed and there was an unmistakable cessation of trading activity.

It was revealed by the shrinkage of one-fifth in the iron and steel output and a sixteen per cent average decline on the New York Stock exchange between April and October. The talk that became general about the distressing condition of the farming interests evidently had much to do with the sudden lull in trading activity. Since the rural business man is the biggest of the lot, any direful reports about his ability to buy affects all business adversely.

Although business analysts profess to see an improvement in the agricultural situation, it has been so light that farmers will have to have good substantial proof before they will admit that they see light ahead. Some time their claims that the farming business is better, the economist say that the farmers' buying power improved in 1923 because of the improved condition of the manufacturers of agricultural implements and in the greatly increased sales of the large mail order houses.

This is undoubtedly good evidence but it must be remembered that the increase in the receipts of mail order houses may not come about solely because of the farmer's improved buying power. Some farmers, who never patronized mail order houses before, may have turned to them on the theory that they could buy cheaper. False, as it is, this theory has lured many a farmer away from his home merchant, where he can always buy dependable goods at a fair price, and where he can always rely for redress if the goods are not what they were represented to be.

Even though the experts for 1924 may be over-emphasizing the improvement in the farming business, it may be said that this important branch of the business of the country has not gone backwards. It is better than a year ago.

And it will continue to improve if farmers generally will realize the importance of organization for their mutual benefit and of co-operative marketing of their products to the end that they may receive more for their labor and the price to the consumer may be reduced.

EVERY MAN'S GOLD MINE

Who is there in this broad land who wouldn't like to own a gold mine?

And yet a recent writer tells us that every person on earth is himself a gold mine.

Just think it over quietly and you will be forced to admit that it is true. Your brains, your ability, is the precious one which the world is paying today.

Some people have very little gold in their composition; others it is so mixed with dross that it is almost indistinguishable, and yet in others the mine is so rich that the precious ore is evident at a glance.

Success in life depends upon one's ability to develop his own gold mine. Our life work is to bring out all the gold that is in us, to dig deep to make the most of one's character, one's opportunities, one's self.

We are like gold miners. We work the claim a little while, and failing to strike pay dirt at once, we quit. We undoubtedly know that we have talent and ability in certain directions, that if we work earnestly we will attain our heart's desire, but we weary of the hard toil of removing the rubbish and earth, blasting the boulders and sinking the shaft, and too often give up when we are within a few feet of our goal.

But the gold miner who "gets there," who strikes pay dirt, is the man who keeps everlastingly at it, who never grows heartily, who digs—no matter how many obstacles he encounters.

True it is that we do not all assay alike, but we each have a claim and we will never find the ore by drawing hieroglyphics on the surface with sticks. We must dig, and dig deep, else we might as well not have a single ounce of gold in our mine. It is possible to make something of one's self, if we just work incessantly, persistently, we will strike pay dirt. It is hard work, patience, perseverance, a mighty effort, intelligently directed, that will enable us to strike the gold bearing vein.

The reports of the ten banks in Boone county, published in this issue, show that there was no deposit in these institutions at the close of business on the 31st day of December, 1923, nearly two million five hundred thousand dollars, while the two banks at Erlanger show deposits of $749,339.40.

Franchise for Sale.

Fiscal Court of Boone County, Dec. 4th, 1923.
Hon. N. E. RIDDELL, Judge Presiding.
A Resolution providing for the letting at Public Bidding of the franchise right of entering upon all the public roads and highways of Boone County, Kentucky, necessary for the purpose of erecting, constructing, incorporating, maintaining, replacing and removing poles, wires, brackets, supports, guys and all necessary appendages thereto, and thereon, said poles suitable and proper to conduct a high voltage electric current over and along any and all roads and highways in Boone County, now open or to be opened, for a period of twenty years from the date of acceptance of the bid of the successful bidder.

Be it resolved by the Fiscal Court of Boone County, Kentucky, that the County Clerk and he is hereby appointed a committee of one to advertise, by three insertions in the Boone County Recorder that said Fiscal Court will receive sealed bids up to twelve o'clock Tuesday, Feb. 5th, 1924, for the sale of the Franchise right and the privilege of entering upon and along all the public roads and highways of Boone County, Ky., necessary for the purpose of erecting, constructing, operating, maintaining, replacing and removing poles, wires, brackets, supports, guys and all other necessary appendages thereto and thereon, suitable and proper to conduct a high voltage electric current over and along the roads and highways of Boone County.

All bids shall be sealed and marked "Bid for Electric Light Franchise" and the Fiscal Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids; and no bids will be accepted for an amount less than the cost of advertising, and all bidders may in their discretion, make their bid for the cost of advertising, plus any additional sum they may desire to bid.

Upon the acceptance of the bid of the successful bidder his successors and assigns shall have the right to go upon the roads and highways of Boone County covered by this resolution and there erect, construct, incorporate, maintain, replace a line of poles and wires, brackets, cross-arms and all other appendages thereto or thereon, and do all things necessary for the purpose of constructing, operating, maintaining, replacing or repairing or removing the appliances used by him or it, in a proper employment herein contemplated.

None of the poles, wire, brackets, cross-arms or other fixtures shall be so replaced or maintained as to interfere with the travel on or the drainage of any road in Boone County, and any and all poles, wires and fixtures shall be changed upon the request of the Fiscal Court or the County Road Engineer of Boone County, Kentucky.
N. E. RIDDELL,
County Judge

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of the foregoing order I will, as instructed therein, receive bids for the sale of said franchise until noon Tuesday February 5th, 1924. All bids shall be sealed and marked "BIDS FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT FRANCHISE." No bids will be received or considered unless the amount of the advertising is bid.
Given under my hand as clerk of the Boone Fiscal Court this January 4th, 1923.

M. E. ROGERS,
Boone Fiscal Court

Announcement today of the merging of the Crosley radio interests here has revealed one of the newest developments of this remarkable industry. Moreover it has resulted in Cincinnati becoming one of the centers of the world as the combined companies, which hereafter will be known as The Crosley Radio Corporation, will be, it is said, the largest radio manufacturing organization so far as the actual production of receiving sets is concerned.

For some time past Powell Crosley, Jr., has been President of both the Crosley Manufacturing Co. and the Precision Equipment Co., the latter being one of the original licensees under the famous Armstrong regeneration patents. Production figures of these companies, when operated as separate units, are said to have shown that each manufactured more radio receiving sets than any other company in the world, and so those interested in the radio are out spoken in their assertion that the operation of the combined organizations will exceed, many times, that of any other radio manufacturer.

It has been stated that the Crosley Manufacturing Co., has been producing more than 1,000 sets daily, but the demand has been so great that Mr. Crosley has made preparations for The Crosley Radio Corporation to turn out more than 5,000 every day, by the purchase of a much larger factory.

FAVORITE SONS.

The favorite-son scheme, a method used to head off candidates for president who are leading the field, will be used in the forthcoming campaign according to present indications.

Sometimes it works for good and sometimes for harm, according to the viewpoint of the partisan who may favor the candidate who is out in front.

It begins to look like opponents of William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury and director-general of the railroads during the war, are conspiring to check the early advances he is making towards the nomination. No less than nine different men are being mentioned as favorite-son candidates who could control enough votes, which, together with the votes Senator Underwood rightfully claims, would be enough to prevent McAdoo from obtaining the necessary two-thirds to win the nomination.

There is some talk of favorite sons within the republican ranks, to head off Senator Johnson of California, who is preparing to make an aggressive campaign in all primary states. Senator Watson of Indiana, and former Governor Lowden of Illinois are regarded as possible candidates, but they have withheld announcement of their plans for the present.

President Coolidge seems to have the inside track for the Republican nomination and McAdoo is leading in the democratic field, the political prophets say, but in the case of the republicans, the favorite-son movements seems to be not so much directed at the leader, as at one who may interfere with the plans of the leader.

However, the movement terminates it will be watched with interest to see whether favorite sons are as much favorites as they once were. Still, a favorite son won the Republican nomination in 1920, and there is always a possibility that one may do it in either party.

THE "MISSING LINK"

A speaker at the meeting of the American Association by the Advancement of Science said that the "missing link" is in a fair way of being discovered, in fact, it may be found any day.

He reported that all of America and western Europe have been explored, which is assurance enough, perhaps, that we have escaped the possibility of that phantom of science being found in our midst.

Americans may now well feel secure and Mr. Bryan may continue to undermine the theory of evolution for all we care.

THE CARE OF THE BABY

How soon shall I feed the baby after his birth?

Every four hours until the milk comes in the breast. After that, how often shall he nurse?

Every three hours, during the day 6 9 12 3 6, and at 9 and 2 at night, by the clock. After the fifth month, every four hours.

How long shall I let him nurse? 20 minutes.

Suppose he is asleep at feeding time, shall I wake him?

Yes, so he will form regular habits of feeding. Soon he will wake at the right time.

If the baby cries before feeding time, what shall I do?

Give him warm boiled water, put nothing in it.

Will it not do to feed him a little earlier if he cries?

No, he must be fed regularly by the clock.

Is he not too hungry?

He will not be if you have enough milk.

How will I know if he has enough to eat?

You can weigh him before and after feeding. Look at your feeding chart and see how many ounces of milk he should have for his age. One ounce of milk weighs an ounce. Therefore, if he weighs two ounces more after feeding he has taken two ounces of milk.

Should I give him anything but the breast milk?

No, absolutely nothing, unless the doctor advises it. After the third month give from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of strained orange, or cooked tomato, or prune juice, diluted with equal parts of water. Prune juice is the water the prunes are soaked and boiled in, without sugar.

Be sure to wash your hands before preparing the baby's food.

Keep flies away from the baby and his food at all times.

The $75,000,000 State bond issue proposal, as advanced by Governor William J. Fields was explained in detail to the members of the General Assembly sitting in joint session, on Monday afternoon, January 14, by speakers representing different interests which the bond issue is intended to benefit.

Delegations from many parts of the State assembled in North Frankfort and, attended by several bands, marched in a body to the State Capitol to attend the Legislative session. Special trains were run from Louisville and Lexington.

According to the message of the Governor, the proposed bond issue will be allotted to the following interests:

Roads	$50,000,000
County Schools	$5,000,000
State University	$5,000,000
Penal and Charitable Institutions	$5,000,000
Normal Schools	$2,000,000
Negro Normal and Industrial Schools	$1,000,000
Geological Survey	$400,000
Tuberculosis Sanitaria	$350,000
Ky. School for blind	$150,000
Ky. School for Deaf	$100,000
State Floating Debt	$6,000,000
Total	$75,000,000

The present rate of taxation for motor vehicle licenses, the 3c general property tax for road purposes and a gasoline sales tax raised from 1c, the present rate, to 3c, will produce ample revenue to support the total bonded debt and also to properly maintain the roads. It is estimated these three sources of revenue will yield a total of $5,900,000 in 1925, when the proposed bond issue will become available and will, as result of greater use of motor vehicles, increase to $8,500,000. In 1930, when construction of the roads will have been completed. There would be required each year for the bonded debt a total of $4,250,000 for sinking fund and interest—this interest at 4 1/2 per cent. This would leave $1,650,000 for maintenance of the roads the first year of construction under the bond issue, really about 50 per cent more than would be necessary for that purpose. In 1930 the increase in these sources of revenue would bring to the maintenance fund $4,250,000, or about $1,000,000 more than necessary to maintain the system at the high rate of $300 a mile a year. There would also then be available to the road fund annually an additional $1,000,000 or more from Federal aid.

RED CROSS NEWS.

Election of chapter officers was held at Florence Jan. 8th. Besides representatives from Richmond, Florence, Hebron and Burlington, Mrs. White, the Field Representative, Mrs. Kinzie the Kentucky county secretary and Mrs. Robinson, also of Kentucky county, were present. Last year's officers were re-elected—Mrs. B. F. Bedinger chairman, Galen Kelly, treasurer, Mrs. G. W. Tolin executive secretary. Executive Board—chairman—treasurer Judge Riddick, Mr. W. H. Clayton, Mrs. W. H. Smith, Miss Emily Hughes, Dr. F. L. Sayre, Mr. A. Rogers.

A more extensive program is planned for next year, but the plans will not be perfected before the next meeting to be held in February.

All who have known Mrs. White will regret greatly that she has resigned as Field Representative.

The bluest kicker is invariably the biggest loafer.

To Produce Winter Eggs

Give Pullets Good Care

"Finishing the pullets" means getting the young stock in a condition which will allow them to go through the winter in good health, produce a good number of eggs and develop a resistance against disease, says W. H. Allen, extension poultry specialist, New Jersey agricultural experiment station. The pullet is allowed to reach its maximum growth before it is permitted to lay eggs. In Leghorns this will occur when they are about five months old, and with the dual purpose breeds, such as Rhode Island Red and Plymouth Rock, it will take at least a month longer. The lighter breeds, such as the Leghorns, should weigh at least three pounds at time of conditioning, and the heavier breeds, like the Rhode Island Red, should weigh from four to four and a half pounds.

The ration used in conditioning a flock consists largely of fattening foods, such as corn, wheat, oats and their by-products, with as little animal protein as possible. A good scratch feed consists of equal parts of cracked corn and wheat. This is fed twice a day, approximately six to eight pounds per 100 birds at each feeding.

A good mash for this period is two parts of wheat bran, two parts of corn meal, two parts of ground oats, two parts of fine middlings, and one part of meal scrap. This mash is kept before the pullets at all times. One hundred growing pullets can live on ten pounds of it a day.

The conditioning period takes approximately a month, two weeks on the range and two weeks in the laying quarters. As soon as the pullets show signs of laying on the range, they are housed, and the same feed continued for two weeks before changing to a laying ration.

When the pullets are housed they need just as much green feed and exercise as if still on the range.

Oyster shells are kept where the birds can always get them.

Find Sulphur

Remedy for Poultry Ills

The argument of some poultrymen that sulphur is harmful to fowls in wet weather is declared by N. W. Sanborn, poultry specialist of the Florida college of agriculture, to be a mistaken idea. In fact, the birds that have been given sulphur in their feed for some time are better able to stand long wet periods than they otherwise would be.

The primary purpose for which sulphur is recommended is to modify the attacks of sorehead, according to Dr. Sanborn. Sorehead—a disease of poultry that is similar to measles which affects children, in that it never attacks the same bird more than once—is considered one of the very worst troubles with which the Florida poultryman has to contend. Some states, after conducting experimental tests with a number of remedies, have advocated the inoculation of the poultry with a serum. However, Florida has never conducted any such tests, but its specialists have learned that sulphur is a practical remedy.

Dr. Sanborn recommends that the sulphur equal 1 per cent of the mash, with which it should be mixed. It is particularly recommended for growing chickens, serving not only to modify the disease but also as a food. The sorehead attacks are also mild when sulphur is fed because the chicken's body and system are kept in a strong, healthy condition.

Hopeless Task to Raise

Young and Old Together

Some place it is stated that it is unwise to put new wine in old bottles. A modern version would be that it is unwise to put young chicks in quarters occupied by mature stock. It is almost a hopeless task to raise young and old together. The conditions are not sanitary, the chicks are badly infested with lice, and the hens get first chance at the feed. The chicks get trampled under foot and what few live don't grow because they have little opportunity to eat.

Successful Poultryman

Picks Choicest Fowls

The poultry raiser who does best is almost sure to raise one who carefully picks out each year only his choicest specimens and breeds from these exclusively. As a natural result, his flocks become better and better each year. By the same token the man who is breeding for heavy egg-production should pick out his very best layers to be used as breeders, and in the course of a few generations the habit of prolificacy will become firmly established in this family.

Henhouse Draft Brings

on Many Poultry Diseases

"Foretell a rousp epidemic by stopping up draft-producing openings in the henhouse," suggests G. L. Stevenson, professor of poultry husbandry at the South Dakota State college. "Plenty of fresh air without drafts is highly desirable. Drafts and dampness produce colds, which run into rousp, faster than influenza. The air supply in a henhouse may be more readily controlled by having the south side equipped with ventilators."

OLD-TIMER CALLS AT WHITE HOUSE

A car of 1903 arrived at the White House the other day, after making the trip from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the driver, A. Scherff, carrying a message from the mayor of Philadelphia to the President. Scherff has covered 16 states and hopes to make all the states before the first of the year, carrying messages from the different mayors and governors.

MOTOR TROUBLES DUE TO POOR OIL

"Medium" Lubricator Scorched Under Friction and Permitted Bearings to Go Dry.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

Let's take a typical case of the pace that kills. Your Eighty-Eight rolls out of the salesroom on its first 2,000 miles. Of course you drive pretty slowly on the first five hundred or thousand miles, so as not to burn her up. You watch the oil gauge and when it slides down the scale you stop at an oil station. And here's where you get into trouble.

"Medium or light oil?" asks the oil man. "Medium," you say because "medium" sounds like a good average. And then whatever brand of oil that particular station has is poured into your crankcase.

Then came Musical Tap-Tap.

All right. Let's go! Soon "3,000" clicks into place on the speedometer, so you let her out to discover what the big eight can really do. A rough over-tone sounds over the sweet purr of the motor, but you're hitting forty-five and are too busy to notice it. Then comes a hint of labor into the drone of the motor and then a musical tap-tap. And as you let the accelerator spring up from the floorboard the tap becomes a whack—and then—you have only one to blame but yourself. The $40 bill the garage man hands you is the cost of a lesson in "Don't Just Say Oil."

Here is what happened to the inside of the motor. It was a beautiful job to start with—joints cozy and bearings snug, to start with—but it was new metal, and surface ground against surface. Tiny flurries washed off into the oil and sank to the crankcase. Some of the "medium" oil you purchased was poor stuff that scorched under friction and permitted the bearings to go dry. Your car was designed with broad bearing surfaces of narrow clearance, calling for light oil. Medium oil was the same as a fat man trying to squeeze through an elevated train—neither are built for the work. The bearings got hotter and wore away quickly, dropping still more filings down into the oil below.

Dust came in through the breather tubes and the air intake, carbon began to accumulate, and as the motor was never again given a good cleaning of the mixture of oil, metal and various kinds of grit. And when you let her out the motor sent in an emergency call for more oil and the pump obeying flashed the friction surfaces with a sickly mush until finally a wrist-plate began to shriek.

Use Best Oil and Greases.

If only every motorist would keep his car supplied with best oil and greases adapted to it, 90 per cent of motor troubles would disappear.

Peculiar, too, isn't it, when you come to think about it? Here you go and put half a year's income into a car and then neglect to give it the proper lubrication. Gosh, it's the embodiment of every principle known to mechanics, from high tension to hydraulics; it's the peak of standard perfection. With real care the normal life of a motor car is from fifty to a hundred thousand miles and it may be much longer than that. But at ten thousand miles it has reached the dangerous age and will begin to sew it's wild oats if it is not carefully watched. At twenty thousand it is rapidly sinking into senile debility. Man, you can't break the commandments and stay young, not without a lot of expensive repairs, anyhow.

So use the best oil there is—it's the cheapest in the long run.

CROSSING RAILROAD TRACKS

Speeding Up and Coasting Is Dangerous Even If Clear View Is Had From Road.

Crossing railroad tracks by speeding up and coasting is dangerous, even if a clear view of the track is had from the road. The crossing may be rougher than it looks, or there may be more of an upgrade than appears at first glance and the momentum of the car can be quickly dissipated.

LEGITIMATE USE OF CHAINS

Many Drivers Find Ways of Overdoing Things, and Get in Habit of Driving Too Fast.

Chains have their legitimate use, but as usual drivers find ways of overdoing it. The latest is the habit of driving too fast. Even the chain manufacturers don't advertise that their articles will guarantee motorists against accidents, but drivers seem to have a notion that the chains justify greater speed. As a matter of fact, the chains simply make the normal speed of the car for wet weather safe. If 15 to 20 miles an hour is the limit for wet weather driving the chains will make this speed practically safe. But if the driver clips off 30 miles per hour or over he must remember that in event of need for a quick stop conditions are about the same as though he were caught going 20 miles per hour without chain protection. Too much confidence in chains is like getting careless with the gasoline just because there's a fire extinguisher in the car.

DEVICE TO AVOID SKIDDING

Simple and Inexpensive to Manufacture and Prevents Detachment of Chains.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing anti-skid device, the invention of C. F. A. Neubling of Hewlett, L. L. N. Y., says:

An object of the invention is to provide a construction in which accidental detachment of the cross chains from the side chains will be prevented. Another object is to provide a connection between the side and cross chains by means of which said chains may be readily detached from each other. The device is simple and inexpensive to manufacture.

STEP ON STARTER IF CAUGHT

Few Motorists Realize What a Source of Emergency Power Electric Device Can Be.

Few motorists realize what a source of emergency power an electric starter-motor can be.

When caught on railroad tracks with a stalled motor the thing to do is to place the gears in "second" and step on the starter. The car will move off the tracks slowly but surely, and in half the time that would be required to crank the motor. Some starters make so much noise that a train couldn't be heard approaching while the motor is being cranked.

A practice of relying on the starter-motor, of course, is a good way to get acquainted with the repair shops; but it is assumed that stalling on railroad crossings is not a habit. Many abuses of the car are justifiable in an emergency; the point is to know what ones can be relied upon as lifesavers.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

There are about 12,000,000 automobiles in the world, and about 10,000,000 of them in the United States.

An automobile piloting device has been invented by a former army officer to guide small balloons used to distribute advertising matter as they sail across country.

A New Orleans inventor's gasoline evensizer for low priced automobiles is featured by a bar of copper that is expanded by the engine heat to control the flow of fuel.

Automobile tourist travel across the United States is heavier over the central routes, namely, the Lincoln highway, the National Old Trails road and the Yellowstone trail.

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

The coming to a close of the great exposition of roads and road building apparatus and methods in Chicago, in which good roads everywhere were stressed as the outstanding need of the country for the greatest benefits of education, social intercourse, economics and civilization, turns attention to the many new developments in modern life, all emphasized by shows, conventions, expositions.

The automobile show, a yearly event in all the larger cities, how few are the years since it was a novelty! The pure food show, in which food manufacturers vie with one another in putting emphasis upon the purity of their products, the healthful conditions in which they are made, their sanitary packages, is in sharp contrast to the way in which the early food product factories flung the pure food law! Only in recent years has education entered the exposition field, but now a great school exhibit is yearly held in most cities, and education associations and societies stage so many conventions, exhibitions and public demonstrations of their progress it is hard to keep count of them.

But as yet we have no national education exposition, although the great conventions of the N. E. A. and Education Week do much to focus the public mind upon educational problems. Yet the time seems ripe for an education exposition, which shall be to the education world what the automobile show in New York is to that industry, what the road exposition was to the highway builders what the motor boat and the aeronautical shows, and the just beginning "wireless show" are to those industries.

For all of them—roads, automobiles, food, ireless, boats depend on education; without education there are no buyers no users; without education there can be no U. S.!

WORLD UNIVERSITY FOR UNITED STATES PROPOSED

Possible Initial Endowment One Million Dollars.

Washington, D. C.—The proposal to establish in America a world university which has been discussed in educational circles for years, meets with new interest in the light of the offer of a San Diego financier to donate from three to five hundred acres of land near that California city for its use, and the proffer of a million dollar endowment from a Detroit business man.

Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, President of the World Federation of Education Associations and Commissioner of Education in Maine, is authorized to appoint a committee to investigate the feasibility of the world university idea. Speaking of it he said:

"Final decision of where the university will be established, as well as the question of whether or not it will be established at all, of course, will be made by the commission which I have been asked to appoint. It seems probable, however, that, since American capital will be used if the project is carried through, it will be established in this country.

"Barcelona, The Hague, San Diego, and one other city, which I am not now at liberty to name, have so far put in their bids to be the seat of the university. No other country, however, in my opinion, would be as free from outside influence nor so fair in dealing with an international problem of this character as the United States.

As at present contemplated, the world university would receive between 10 and 15 graduate students from each of the 72 countries of the world, forming a student body of approximately 1,000.

"The university would be non-political, nonprejudiced, and nonsectarian, and should revolutionize the science of education."

THE INCOME TAX GROWLERS.

Some people have never adjusted themselves to the federal income tax. Every year when the blank comes along which they must fill out or submit to severe penalties, they think some kind of an indignity has been done to them.

Such folks should remember what the federal government does for them. It protects us from the assault of national enemies. In the mood in which Germany was before the war, this country would have had to fight her years ago had it not been for our military and naval ability.

Most of our federal taxes go today to pay for the war made necessary by Germany's desire to rule the world. People who dislike to pay taxes to Washington, might otherwise have had to pay them to Berlin.

The federal government promotes our food supply by developing agriculture. It protects the masses of the people against injustice and wrong in a thousand directions. It comes high, but we must have it.

IS THIS OLD WORLD GROWING BETTER?

As my habit has been, I am writing my usual contribution to the young readers of our county paper—the Recorder, hoping in doing so that a few truths of the compulsory laws of nature of "whatsoever you sow, that also you will reap," will be instilled into their minds and hearts for good, to spring up and bear fruit in after life—some thirty, some sixty and some a hundredfold to the honor and glory of perfect manhood and womanhood of the future, that our country, the county of all countries, to us, will be proud to claim as Her children, borned and bred upon her soil; all through the writer's humble efforts for good.

The question used as a subject, I think, is in every intelligent thinking readers mind just now, and, is the "better state of morality" caused by chance. If we were asked to answer these questions, probably the majority of us would answer in the affirmative to the first, "no" to the second, without a moment's hesitation—but, can we prove it? Proof is what it takes to make our statements valid and "Legal Tender" now days. The subject has a world of thought wrapped in its composition for deeper and clearer intellectuality than the writer's, therefore, I cannot expect to do it justice—my aim in selecting such an important subject, is to start the wheels of the brighter, more cultivated intellects revolving, to give the rest of our inferior intellects a chance to recuperate and to bask in the realms of scientific research of the hidden facts of nature's laws, which is not only interesting but instructive.

Shakespeare says in his "Seven Ages of Man," This world is but a stage—the events as a whole, is a drama or play, before the "Footlights" of creation—and we are the actors, who have a part to play, in this great life drama—an infant just born and only living a few days, and to the "Element" from whence it came, we often say, if it were only going to live so short a time, why was it permitted to enter into life, as a full of trials and tribulations, to cause sorrow and heart anguish to the loved ones left behind? The Shakespearean idea uses it, it came to play and fulfill the part in the life drama, it was assigned, that only it could fulfill, before making its final exit from the stage of life, our "footstool" part, a small and insignificant part to us, but none the less important to the alwise author and instigator, of this great drama of life.

Then, we may assume, that the nature, events of life, are not by chance, but by a fixed natural law, ruled and governed by an omnipotent hidden power, which we cannot understand, such events, as has happened around us within four or five years.

Can we understand how such a great universal monopoly of power, as the Liquor Traffic—thought by many, to be such a source of revenue for our government, was put out of commission by the weakest party power in the political field? Can you and I, understand how the "Women's Suffrage Alliance," composed of the weaker sex only, gained such an unanimous and gigantic victory for women to vote in our elections, even to run for and hold such offices under the jurisdiction of our government, to protect their children from the wily politician and office grafter when it was so bitterly opposed by the united forces of manpower in the "Political Field?"

Are these changes for the better, and by the weak and insignificant power of man? I think they are for the better, and by an alwise and omnipotent, unseen power, if so, this old world, is nearing its finality, and fulfilling the Divine Decree, of being purified before being destroyed that is stated in our Bibles, in "Revelations."

KIRKLEY L. RICE,

Burlington, Ky.

The people who feel a keen interest in securing progress and advance in their home town, often inquire what motives shall be appealed to, to make people take a keener interest in the development of their home community.

At the risk of being considered too eager for material progress, perhaps Money Making could be urged as a motive No. 1. It need not be a sordid motive. Money is power to do all good and helpful things.

When a man buys property, he acquires a stake in its place. If it grows, his property becomes more valuable. Even if he does not own the property he occupies as a tenant, his job grows more valuable as a result of the prosperity of the man he works for. The man who is getting ahead can do better for his employees than the unprosperous man can.

And now the telephones of the world are to be combined under one ownership—if plans of big financiers materialize. This will be another opportunity to unload several billions of watered stock on the dear people.

BANKS SHOULD

COOPERATE

Eight Per Cent Dividend to Be Paid to Borrowers of Boone County Who Have Secured Loans Through The Boone County National Farm Association.

Checks are being prepared by A. B. Renaker, Sec-Treasurer of the Boone County National Farm Loan Association of Burlington and will be mailed to all borrowers of said Association within the next ten days for an 8 per cent dividend on stock held by borrowers by reason of their owning stock in said Association, in connection with loans received from the Federal Land Bank.

These dividends received by the borrowers will reduce the interest rate on their loans to approximately 5 per cent for the past year.

Mr. Renaker reports that quite a number of farmers are taking advantage of this plan to receive loans at a low rate of interest and that $153,800.00 in loans have been closed to date and with $90,000.00 in applications for loans now pending will run the total loans made by the Association to an amount considerably over $200,000.00.

This is considerable business done by the Association in so short a time and shows that the farmers of Boone county know a good thing when it is once understood as this is the one plan whereby a farmer can get cheap money in Boone county.

Mr. Thomas Ward of The Federal Land Bank of Louisville was in Boone county several days last week appraising a number of farms for the Boone County National Farm Association, the application having been sent in the first of the year, which shows that the Federal Land Bank is trying to give all applications for loans prompt service thru the local Association of this county.

The banks of this county should cooperate with the Boone County National Farm Loan Association in having their mortgage borrowers place their loans through the Association, thereby enabling their customer to receive cheap money, much less than a bank can accommodate them, and at the same time release frozen mortgage loans from the banks hands and permit the bank to place the funds realized on these frozen loans into a more liquid form of investment at a rate equal to, and in many instances greater than, the rate which the borrower is paying to the local bank. If this plan was adopted by the banks of Boone county it would not be necessary to have bills payable on their books as their liquid investments could be realized on at any time their local demand required it and in so doing all the banks would be rendering, and in position to render a greater service to their customers as in this way the banks would never be short of loanable funds for their customers on temporary accommodations.

Congress has provided this plan for the benefit of the farmers and no one else and they should look into it and place their mortgage loans with the Federal Land Bank.

FEW DEPOSITS

Of the 98 postoffices in Kentucky authorized to receive postal savings deposits, practically half of them have no such deposits. The report of the postmaster general on the operations of the postal savings system shows there are 1,397 depositors with deposits of $314,999 in Kentucky. Of the total number of depositors more than two-thirds are in Louisville and their deposits are more than two-thirds of the total deposits of the state. The figures show 935 depositors in Louisville with deposits of $218,671.

DOINGS IN OLD KENTUCKY

By Observer In Cincinnati Sunday's Enquirer.

Louisville, Ky.—They played the game of the big boy and the little boy at Frankfort this week in the General Assembly; of the little boy who goes up to the big boy and says, "Let me see how strong you are," then starts to wrestle with a lurking idea that perhaps he can throw the big boy. When the big boy has gently, but effectively, planted him on the ground the little boy remarks, "you're a lot stronger than I thought you were," brushes off the dust and departs.

The big boy in the Legislature's game was Governor W. J. Fields and the little boy was the minority, that has an idea of perhaps causing trouble. The wrestler followed the reports of the Rules Committees in the Senate and the House.

It was brought about by a proposal to cut the period at the close of the session when the Rules Committees take charge of all legislation, from fifteen days to ten. Advocates of the ten-day period raised a loud clamor about "leg rule" and protested against too much power being given to the Rules Committees.

When the vote came, Governor Fields and the administration forces scored a victory so decisive that the skirmish could be termed "no contest." The Senate adopted the rules recommended with the fifteen-day period by a vote of 23 to 12; while the house approved its committee report by a vote of 66 to 38, thus giving a two to one result.

A secondary onslaught undertook to make it possible to take a bill from a committee with a vote of the majority of the present, not to fall below two fifths of the elected membership. This failed also.

Rules adopted enable the constitutional majority of the elected membership to take a bill from the committee and put it on passage. It will take 51 of the 100 members in the House to call up a bill and 20 of the 38 in the Senate.

The tilt over the rules between the administration forces and those that might be made into an opposition shows the strength of the administration and indicates that Governor Fields will be able to carry through his program for the state.

Louisville newspapers owned by Judge Robert W. Bingham, the Courier-Journal and the Times, have been given criticism of state administration on a number of points, the principal one of which grows out of the appointment of James B. Brown, of Louisville, President of the National Bank of Kentucky, to be a member of the State Tax Commission.

The situation between Mr. Brown and the Bingham papers added to the interest that was caused Friday morning by the announcement that Mr. Brown had bought the Louisville Herald from John C. Shaffer, of Chicago, who has owned the paper for 14 years.

Aside from his political influence, Mr. Brown is the leading financier of the state. He is President of the National Bank of Kentucky, the largest bank in the South, and is Director in the Standard Oil of Kentucky, the Louisville Gas and Electric Company and the Kentucky Jockey Club, besides having other large interests. He is one of the closest friends of William G. McAdoo and one of the leaders of the movement to nominate Mr. McAdoo for President.

The career of Mr. Brown has been one of remarkable success, won by his own efforts. He is past 50 years of age, came to Louisville from Oldham County at 17 to earn his living as bookkeeper for a news company. In 1897 he was appointed assistant tax receiver and was elected tax receiver in 1901. He left office in 1905 and soon thereafter began his banking career as cashier of the First National Bank.

Mr. Brown demonstrated remarkable financial ability from the first and his career has been one of steady advancement to the presidency of the National Bank of Kentucky. During the war he was a member of the Capital Issues Committees of the War Finance Board, and it was here that he attracted the attention of Secretary McAdoo.

The attitude of the Bingham papers toward Mr. Brown gives peculiar interest to Mr. Brown's acquisition of the Herald. The Courier-Journal and the Times inherited prestige as Democratic newspapers, but since they were acquired by Judge Bingham they have not shown much Democratic enthusiasm and have been for the most part hostile to the Democratic organization and candidates in the state.

Intense dislike of Cantrell and failure to support Fields and Thickett in the last election has been followed by the bitter criticism of Mr. Brown and the Governor in connection with the Tax Commission appointment.

Purchase of the Herald gives Mr. Brown a newspaper of his own in the east, and continued hostility from the Bingham papers and moves the Herald erstwhile Republican organ, to the undoubted Democratic ownership, with the Democracy of the Courier-Journal and the Times seriously questioned by state Democrats.

Mr. Brown and the owner of the Louisville Post will consolidate and the publication will be under the management of a cooperation with Mr. Brown as president.

LIGGETT & MYERS PURCHASER IN BIG BURLEY LEAF SALE

Very Large Quantity," Says President Stone, Of 1922 Crop Included In One of Largest Deals On Record In Tobacco Held by the Pool.

The Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., it became known today, was the purchaser of the approximately six million pounds of tobacco sold last week by the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association. President and General Manager James C. Stone of the Burley Co-operative, made the announcement today in the following statement:

"This was one of the largest single sales of leaf tobacco to a single manufacturer ever made, when the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company purchased sixty million pounds of the tobacco held by the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association. Included in this purchase was a very large quantity of old Burley tobacco of the 1922 crop, which is the best Burley ever grown in Kentucky, possessing an unusual quality and flavor."

According to announcement made by the Liggett & Myers Company, this high-grade leaf will be used in the manufacture of its widely-known brands, especially its Velvet smoking tobacco, insuring a superior quality.

MRS. CYNTHIA MASON, DEAD.

Mrs. Cynthia Mason, widow of James H. Mason, died suddenly at the home of her niece, Mrs. Cynthia White, in Walton, Tuesday, Jan. 15, 1924, aged 83 years, 9 months and 21 days, from pneumonia. She was a good christian woman, was born in Big Bone neighborhood, where she lived the greater portion of her life. Her husband preceded her by the grave many years ago. She is survived by a son, Mrs. Geo. L. Smith, of Big Bone, and two nieces, Mrs. James Aylor of Big Bone, and Mrs. Cynthia White, of Walton.

Funeral services were held at Big Bone Baptist church of which she was a member, Thursday, January 17, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Miller, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at that place. C. Scott Chambers undertaker, Walton, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

COMING TO COVINGTON

There will be a W. M. U. Institute of Central District in Madison Ave. Baptist church, Feb. 1st to 4th. Miss Blanche White, field worker of Southern Baptist convention and Miss Jennie Bright, State Young People's leader, will make addresses each afternoon at 2 and 7:30. Other interesting features will be a story telling hour and conference for workers.

SOME MAZUMA

According to the annual report of the Commissioner of pensions, Washington, D. C., during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, an aggregate of $6,072,647.20 was paid in pensions to 14,160 pensioners.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

LITTLE TOWNS TAKE NOTICE.

Every community should have proper fire fighting apparatus. With improved roads and automobile equipment there is no excuse for any settlement to be without adequate means of preventing fire loss. Too many towns have been relying upon others to do their fighting for them. "The Fire Chief" in commenting on this says:

"Suburbs of certain cities have in large numbers been boating their way" to fire protection by relying on the generosity of large fire departments to save them from destruction by a fire broke out. The money thus saved which should have been spent in providing their own fire apparatus, they put in their pocket. They wanted to get something for nothing. In hundreds of cases they succeeded.

"But the large cities are getting tired of this kind of philanthropy. If any community wants fire protection, it ought to be willing to pay for it."

SOME TIME AGO.

From an issue of the Recorder published Jan. 7th, 1891—thirty-three years ago, we noticed the following: R. S. Crisler made several of his friends a New Year's gift of a nice, little iron wedge to be used as a paper weight. The Recorder was remembered by Colonel. And the same little iron wedge is still on our table.

Thirty-three years ago John Keys and Bert Russ were confined in the Burlington jail for the murder of Billy Fee, near Lawrenceburg Ferry.

NOT IN SYMPATHY WITH IT

Asserting that he is not in sympathy with the endorsement by the State Road Association of the proposed $75,000,000 bond issue in its present form, Attorney Harvey Myers, of Covington, President of the Northern Kentucky Good Roads Association, has forwarded from Clearwater, Fla., his resignation as Vice-President and a member of the Executive Committee of the State organization.

A YEAR OF DEATHS

It may seem at first analysis of the deaths of prominent men and women in the world during 1923, that the demand was unusually high of the toll made by the Grim Reaper. But if you will take the trouble to run back over any preceding year, you will find that each twelve months will strike you in about the same way.

HAND 'EM IN

As the mechanical workings of the Recorder prevents us getting out and mixing with the people, and therefore many items escape us. When you have an item of news, won't you hand them in or call upon over the phone?

JUST THE TRICK

Some claim that when the electric lights are put up between Burlington and Florence the work of putting down the concrete road between these two towns will be an easy job as the contractor can ask a day and night shift.

BOONE'S INHERITANCE TAX

The report of the Tax Commission at Frankfort show that for the month of December, 1923, inheritance tax payments were $36,187.44. Of this amount there was one from Boone county amounting to $154.20.

TO MEET JUNE 24.

The Democratic National Convention will be held at New York City beginning June 24, following the Republican convention at Cleveland, Ohio, June 10th.

LAST SALE

The last registered Poland-China sale of J. F. Cleek will be held Thursday, Jan. 31, at the farm on the Dixie Highway, near Walton.

NOTICE

All members of Burlington Lodge K. of P. No. 109, will please be present next Saturday evening at 7 p. m. Business of importance.

We are beginning to wonder whether 1924 can bear up under the barrels of statistics that have been aimed at it this far.

Tr. T. B. Castleman, who is spending the winter in Florida, expects to be back at his office in Florence about March 1st.

Whooping cough among the children has cut the attendance at Boone County High School considerably.

Several of the residences of Burlington have been wired ready for the electric lights.

The cold weather has quieted the sound of the carpenters hammers around town.

The Legislation Committee of the State Board of Education started its program.

EGG LAYING CONTEST

The winter Egg Laying Contest is booming ahead in spite of the cold nights that have been tickling the bidding combs.

During the month of December E. G. Stephenson's flock 344 White Leghorns laid 2468 eggs or an average of 7.2 eggs per hen.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor's flock of 300 White Leghorns finished in second place, laying 1878 eggs, or an average of 6.3 eggs per hen.

Roy C. Lutes flock finished in 3rd place. His flock of 187 White Leghorns laid 988 eggs or an average of 5.3 eggs per hen.

Mrs. A. G. McMullen with a mixed flock of 184 Barred Rocks and White Leghorns got 580 eggs or an average of 3.1 eggs per hen.

Mrs. O. C. Hafer got 120 eggs from her flock of 55 Buck Rocks making an average of 2.1 eggs per hen.

Considering the cold and changeable weather these are very good averages.

SEEING GHOSTS

Along about 12 o'clock last Friday night some of the citizens in the east end of town, were awakened from their slumbers by the rattling of chains across their porches. W. C. Weaver, who is not used to such noises after night, got up and looking out the window saw what he said appeared to be a large ape or gorilla looking through the window at him. A search failed to disclose any animal, wild or otherwise. Several other people in that end of town were awakened from their sleep by the same noise. Much excitement and considerable alarm was caused by the intruder, when next morning proved to be a large black hood with a chain attached to it, and was found fastened in a neighbor's yard fence. You can't fool Clint all the time.

HALE AND HEARTY AT 83.

L. S. Beemon, who resides about a mile from Burlington, on the Burlington and Florence pike, passed his eighty-third mile post along the journey through life, last Thursday, Jan. 17th, was in town that day looking hale and hearty, and from his looks and actions promises to be here many more years. He walks from his home to Burlington and back and seems to enjoy the walk. He can read the newspapers without glasses. For the last two or three months he has been making his home with his niece, Mrs. J. B. Rouse.

W. B. Arnold and sister, Miss Flora, of Bellevue, and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Huey, of Plymouth, Ill., attended the poultry meeting at the court house, Tuesday afternoon. While in town they made the Recorder office a pleasant call.

We clipped the following from "Just Among Home Folks" column in last Saturday's Courier-Journal:

In Boone county one night when the dogs were running a fox over on Wolpers a fellow told us a yarn about being fair-minded. He said a pack peddler sold a farmer a can of flea powder. The peddler started away and the farmer stopped him. How do you use the stuff, he asked.

Well, said the peddler, you take the flea between your thumb and your middle finger and you prize open his mouth and drop in the powder and the flea dies right away. But says the farmer, if I had half of the flea between my fingers I would crush him to death without needing to put the powder in his mouth.

Well, admitted the peddler, that is a good way, too. It reminded us of a story that the grandpa used to tell about taking a liberal view of things. They was a young fellow put on his Sunday britches and went to see his gal. The gal's folks had painted the front porch and the young fellow histed himself onto the porch and there he set with his legs hanging down and the seat of his britches freezing onto the paint. He set there till time to go home and the gal had to get her menfolks to saw her sweetheart loose from the porch. That evening when the young fellow got home he sidled around the wall and started upstairs backwards. Hey he said, my honey, he and at my honey he was going up stairs that way. "Just as good a way as any," said the young fellow.

There are three kinds of givers, the flint, the sponge and the honeycomb. To get anything out of flint, you must hammer it, and then you get only chips and sparks. To get water out of a sponge you must squeeze it, and the more you squeeze the more you will get. But the honeycomb just overflows with its own sweetness. Some people are stingy and hard, they give nothing away if they can help it; others are good natured and yield to pressure, giving occasionally; a few delight in giving without being asked at all, and of these the Bible says: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." To which class do you belong?—Ex.

About nine hundred auto owners have secured their 1924 license tags.

BIRTHDAY OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN TO BE CELEBRATED BY FREEMASONS

Freemasons of the world celebrated the birthday of Benjamin Franklin that occurred on January 17th, which was the 218th anniversary of his birth. Franklin looms large among the distinguished Masons who took a conspicuous part in the American Revolution.

Benjamin Franklin became a member of St. John's Masonic Lodge, Philadelphia, in the year 1730. In 1734 he was elected Grand Master of Masons of Pennsylvania; from 1735 to 1738 served as Secretary of St. John's Lodge; in 1749 was Provincial Grand Master; in 1776 affiliated with Masonic Lodges in France; in 1777 was elected a member of Lodge des IX Soeurs (Nine Sisters or Muses) of Paris. He assisted at the initiation of Voltaire in the lodge of the Nine Sisters in 1778; in 1782 was elected Venerable Master of Lodge des IX Soeurs; in 1782 became a member of Lodge De Saint Jean de Jerusalem, of which lodge he later was elected Venerable d'Honneur.

He was on the committee which drafted the Declaration of Independence and was one of the signers. Franklin was appointed Postmaster General for the Colonies in 1753 and in the following year he was commissioner from Pennsylvania at the Inter-colonial Congress at Albany which met to consider the impending French and Indian War. He was of much assistance to General Braddock during the war. When the descendants of William Penn refused to allow their private lands to be taxed for the support of the English troops, he was sent to England to influence the Crown against this. His influence helped secure the repeal of the Stamp Act in 1766.

His famous kite experiment was made in 1752. His scientific views won acceptance by both England and France and the degree of L.L.D. was given him by Oxford, Edinburgh and Saint Andrews, as a recognition of his pre-eminence in scientific investigation.

He founded the Philadelphia Public Library, the first American public library, in 1731. Under the pseudonym of Richard Saunders he began the publication of Poor Richard's Almanac and for twenty-five years his witty sayings helped to mold the character of the people of that time.

Franklin's early life was a series of adventures such as could only be expected in the unsettled period of pre-revolutionary times. His parents intended him for the ministry but his deterministic sentiments caused him to turn from the churches and enter business. He secured control of a paper called the Pennsylvania Gazette, winning commendation through the colonies for his printing and the spirit of his writings.

He died April 17, 1790, and was buried in the graveyard of old Christ Church in Philadelphia.

The $75,000,000 bond issue, advocated by Governor Fields, is attracting the attention of the voters of our Commonwealth. This subject should receive the thoughtful consideration of every citizen before he should either condemn or advocate the bond issue. It does not seem proper that a road bond issue should be connected with a bond issue to pay the indebtedness of the state and to improve the State University and other public institutions. The different bond issues should be submitted in such a way that one would not depend on the other for its passage. You may be in favor of issuing bonds for certain purposes and against issuing bonds for another purpose.

The Covington Good Roads Association has gone on record against the increase of two cents on each gallon of gasoline for road purposes. We are not surprised at their action, although we believe that no method of raising revenue for road purposes has been advanced that is as just and fair as a gasoline tax. If you do not use the roads, you use no gasoline and you pay none of this tax, if you do operate your machine, then it takes gasoline to propel it and you pay toll for the use of the highway, and that toll is just in the proportion to the amount you operate your automobile. With a tax of three cents on a gallon of gasoline the average touring car would be paying about one-third of a cent per mile while under the old toll rate you paid two cents per mile for a horse and buggy and four cents per mile for a two-horse wagon. Three cents a gallon tax on gasoline is not excessive and we find a number who advocate a five-cent tax on each gallon of gasoline.

LESSONS FROM THE FARM
A milking contest was held the other day between Senator Magnus Johnson and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. It may not be possible to induce many senators and cabinet secretaries to learn how to milk, but some people feel that it would be a good thing if every boy could spend some time working on a farm.

He would thereby be taught to use his head and hands more, and hired service less. Also such an every day art as milking would teach him something of the way in which to influence the cow that he would give milk freely, might help him later in the art of influencing people, who often show cow like traits.

WINNING BUSINESS CONFIDENCE.

When a person starts out to buy some household or personal article, he does not in the majority of cases know much about the thing he is buying. Even if it is anything as simple as a pair of shoes, he can not always tell by the looks of the thing, as to whether it will give good service or not. There are so many ways by which inferior material can be covered up and camouflaged, that a great deal of poor stuff looks very well.

This the purchaser commonly recognizes and views the stuff handed out to him with a certain degree of skepticism, unless indeed it is offered at such high prices that he feels it must be good. Even then the price may be too high for the actual value.

When a person holding that attitude discovers that the article offered to him is from some make that has been wisely advertised, his point of view changes. The advertising gives him confidence. The stuff must be put out by a successful concern, he thinks, or they would not advertise as they do. And it must have given satisfaction to a multitude of people or people would not dare to send money in pushing it.

If this truth applies specially to lines of stuff that one sees advertised in magazines and newspapers all over the country, it fits equally well in the matter of retail trade. People have to purchase a great deal of stuff of which they do not feel themselves to be competent judges. They feel that they must depend upon the integrity of the stores to give them good value, and must trust to their enterprise and efficiency to get moderately low prices.

The fact that a store advertises freely tends to give them confidence in it. They feel that such a store is doing a good business, it must be pleasing the public, its goods must give satisfaction, or its owners would never push their goods as they do.

HOOVER FAVORS RAILROAD CONTROL.

Senator LaFollette and his political associates in Congress, are determined to make good their promise to the people to change the railroad rate law. Mr. LaFollette has introduced a bill that proposes to fix the rates on "the basis of cost of service." This would mean the actual operating cost, plus interest and a fair dividend for stock that represents actual money invested.

Following the introduction of this bill Secretary Hoover, in an address before the transportation conference at Washington, advocated "optional Federal incorporation" for consolidation purposes. His proposition would take the roads out of state control entirely and put them under Federal organization committees with public representatives.

This was the plan advocated by Senators Newlands and LaFollette, just before we entered the world war and just before Senator Newlands' sudden death, and at that time taken over by the government, offered but little opposition. It seems to be the only plan that will produce the desired results in our transportation problem, but because the Federal Government would have representatives on each Board of Directors of these great consolidated companies, it will be bitterly opposed by the railroad speculators on the ground that it savors of Federal control.

A TIME FOR OPTIMISM

Among the people who feel closely the currents of popular sentiment are the publishers of books. They find that the kind of thing that will sell well at one period, will fall flat at another. The desire for certain types of thought passes over the country like a wave.

The demand for sex novels and plays has been one such wave. Authors of a certain type have been pouring out these stories and dramas. But some people who are closely in touch with the public taste say that is passing.

There was a big call about a year ago for books on practical psychology. The idea of self-control through some form of mental exercise or analysis was tremendously taking, and many people have been and are interested and helped by it. But the public attention can not be focused long on any one point.

Some of the people in the book business say that for 1924, the public demand is going to be for thoughts of optimism. People are sick of the prophets of decadence and those who are constantly shouting that the world is about to break up and civilization is going to the dogs. They want the idea brought out that there is a great deal that is fine and splendid in life after all, even when many conditions seem bad. It seems likely to be a popular note. Stories and plays that dwell on the good side of life, its generosity, its achievement, its possibilities, have always been popular. Probably they will be more so than ever this year.

There are plenty of wrongs that need to be pointed out. But it gives a harmful impression for people to dwell on the dark side. It spreads the idea that evil is so deeply rooted that it is futile to struggle against it. That is all wrong.

There are 14 per cent fewer hogs in the world now than there were before the war.

LEARN TO PICK A 200 EGG HEN

Lexington, Ky.—If you can't tell a slacker hen from a high-producing hen then attend the demonstration on judging for egg production to be given by O. B. Kent, originator of the present system of culling flocks, at the Farm and Home Conference, Kentucky College of Agriculture, January 29 to Feb. 3.

Numerous high and low producing hens will be one feature of the exhibits and opportunity will be given those who attend to select the hens whose egg laying records exceed 200 eggs per year. Culling hens far, according to J. Holmes Martin of the Poultry Department, has been one of the principle means of increasing production in farm flocks, but with better knowledge of poultry it becomes necessary for poultrymen to select breeding stock from the flocks. It has been his purpose in bringing Mr. O. B. Kent to the convention to show just how this selection may be accomplished and how poultrymen throughout the state may make selections for their breeding pens this spring by noting the special characteristics of a high-producing bird without having tramped records.

The Sears Roebuck Co., mail order business added over 1,000,000 new customers to their list last year, and the business increased more than 18 per cent over 1912, with a total of $215,540,000. The little single retailer who fights his competitor down the street, has something here worth thinking about.

Grain traders are of the opinion that wheat prices must drop. Canada, Argentina, Australia and Russia are selling wheat to Europe at nearly 10 cents less per bushel. In November the United States imported more wheat from Canada than it exported to all other countries, selling from 18 to 20 cents below American prices.

Marketing organizations of farmers did more than $2,000,000,000 worth of business last year, reports the Department of Agriculture show. Twenty-six hundred grain organizations show business totaling $490,000,000. The co-operative Livestock Commission of St. Louis, shipped 11,000 cars of live stock, and saved its members over $80,000 in commissions.

From growing practically no sweet clover as late as six years ago, farmers of Grundy County, Ill., under the direction of their county agricultural extension agent, have made sweet clover an important feature of their farming. The first year, 1817, 22 farmers tried the new crop, their neighbors watching the venture with interest. That they found the results good is evidenced by the fact that there are this year, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, some 12,000 acres of his legume growing in the county, in most cases from 20 to 30 acres on a farm.

The great exposition of road building material, methods, and machinery in Chicago which emphasizes as never before the position which highway construction and use is to take in this country. Here, under one roof, are gathered together such an educational exhibit of all that pertains to highway making as the world has never seen. Road builders from all over the country are attending; road buyers have set their representatives to see what progress has been made in the art; road users come to see whether or not their own roads are up to the best standard, and if the money their communities are spending is being wisely spent.

Attracting a major amount of the attention of the visitors are the two exhibits which have nothing to sell, nothing to gain except the spread of an idea. The Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture has a highly educational exhibit, showing the work of the bureau, the administration of the Federal aid roads acts, and the right of way to build roads. The National Highways Association, occupying a great space across the end of the gallery, shows very large and elaborate maps, illustrating the idea back of the association. It shows with literature and other exhibits its educational work looking to the creation of national sentiment for the theory that the National Government should build, own, control, and forever maintain a system of National Highways to which States would build feeder roads, which in turn would be served by county and township roads.

The great throngs of people coming to the Coliseum are but an indication of the interest we, as a people, take in the highway transportation problem, and the absolute necessity this Government taking the next step in its solution, which, is, of course, the creation of a National Highway Commission to locate and build the first of the truly national roads.

Although the battle of the State Board of Health to stamp out trachoma is curbing the spread of this dangerous eye disease and in some sections has eliminated it, the fact that in other sections of the United States it has gained a foothold, may result in the Rockefeller Foundation taking a hand to determine whether germ or contagion causes it to strike uncertain localities.

The Rockefeller Foundation's attention was called to this disease by the Southern Medical Association and Kentucky is expected to reap great benefits from the part this great research institution will probably take, according to Dr. A. T. McCormack, secretary of the State Board of Health. The United States Public Health Service already has entered the fight on the disease.

Dr. McCormack points out that no specific cause of trachoma has ever been demonstrated or isolated although the disease has been declared more or less officially to be infectious and destructive and a menace where prevalent.

"Instances of confusion in diagnosis from time to time due to difference in the conception of the true nature of the disease," he said, "it is of the highest importance that the true nature and cause of trachoma be established beyond preadventure of doubt, therefore the Southern Medical Association urged the attention of the Rockefeller Foundation and the United States Public Health Service to this situation and asked the active cooperation of these institutions in an exhaustive study of the etiologic factors of trachoma."

The idea is sometimes held that the public sentiment of the nation is created largely in great cities. It is that the smaller towns and smaller cities are the places where the real course of the nation is being determined.

In big and medium-sized cities, the mass of the people do not do much thinking and studying of serious matters. There are millions of such people in such environments who never read serious articles in the newspapers, never attend lectures, and very rarely discuss public problems. The men of such types read principally the crime and sporting news, and the women read fashion and society notes. These people get their amusement from attending the shows and watching things going on, and their minds get out of the thinking habit.

In country town life the great majority of the people read and think and discuss. They take good newspapers and periodicals, and read them thoroughly and they pay more attention to the editorials than they do to the sports. When the country people get together in clubs, they discuss the real issues of the nation.

So public sentiment is informed and intelligent in the country towns. When issues come up in Congress and the legislatures, the country people have somewhat definite opinions formed.

"When could they say (I'll now, that talked of Rome, That her wide walls encompassed but one man?" —Julius Caesar.

Caesar dominated Rome to the extent that he seemed the only man in it, and Cassius, in this conversation with Brutus, is trying to arrive at the secret of Caesar's dominant personality.

It is given to few of us to study a personality of the first rank at close hand as Cassius had done. The nearest approach we can make to it is to study the personality of those who can dominate an audience from the after or opera stage.

The secret of personality is as hidden as the secret of the nature of life—volume upon volume has been written on both subjects, but they get us nowhere in our study. When scientists find out whether life itself is a matter of chemicals, of ferments, or of radio-activity, then they will probably be in a position to show why one man has a dominant personality and another is a cipher. If life is proved to be a chemical function, as Lavoisier thought it, then personality will probably be proved to be a matter of excess or lack of certain chemicals in the system.

Just now the best guess as to the secret of personality involves radio-activity. When one goes to the theater and observes such widely different personalities as Caruso, Lauder, Galli-Curci and Mitzel, one is struck with the fact that all these people are alike in the impression they convey of tremendous, overflowing energy.

One instinctively thinks of them when looking into a spirotharoscope. The spirotharoscope is a scientific toy that enables us to see radio-activity. It is a tube a few inches long, containing a tiny particle of a radium compound, mounted in front of a special screen and viewed through a magnifying lens. When one looks into it, one sees a continuous display of sparks—the flashes made as the rays thrown off by the radium hit the fluorescent screen. Radium, of course, was discovered only a few years ago, consequently no spirotharoscope is very old. We are not able, therefore, to say how long one will keep up its sparkling display; but theoretically, one should last indefinitely. —Hour after hour, day after day, year after year, that tiny particle of radium compound in the spirotharoscope gives off rays, and yet never grows less in bulk. Similarly certain people seem able to give off encouragement and inspiration and mental stimulation forever, without losing anything from their own personalities. Those who have this quality dominate their surroundings as Caesar dominated Rome.

Franchise for Sale.

Fiscal Court of Boone County, Dec. 4th, 1923.
Hon. N. E. Ridgell, Judge Presiding.
A Resolution providing for the letting at Public Bidding of the franchise right of entering upon all the public roads and highways of Boone County, Kentucky, necessary for the purpose of erecting, constructing, incorporating, maintaining, replacing and removing poles, wires, brackets, supports, guys and all necessary appendages thereto, and thereon, said poles suitable and proper to conduct a high voltage electric current over and along any and all roads and highways in Boone county, now open or to be opened, for a period of twenty years from the date of acceptance of the bid of the successful bidder.

Be it resolved by the Fiscal Court of Boone County, Kentucky, that the County Clerk and he is hereby appointed a committee of one to advertise, by three insertions in the Boone County Recorder that said Fiscal Court will receive sealed bids up to twelve o'clock Tuesday, Feb. 5th, 1924, for the sale of the Franchise right and the privilege of entering upon and along all the public roads and highways of Boone County, Ky., necessary for the purpose of erecting, constructing, operating, maintaining, replacing and removing poles, wires, brackets, supports, guys and all other necessary appendages thereto and thereon, suitable and proper to conduct a high voltage electric current over and along the roads and highways of Boone County.

All bids shall be sealed and marked "Bid for Electric Light Franchise" and the Fiscal Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids, and no bids will be accepted for an amount less than the cost of advertising, and all bidders may in their discretion, make their bid for the cost of advertising, plus any additional sum they may desire to bid.

Upon the acceptance of the bid of the successful bidder his successors and assigns shall have the right to go upon the roads and highways of Boone County covered by this resolution and there erect, construct, maintain, repair and operate a line of poles and wires, brackets, cross-arms and all other appendages thereto or thereon, and do all things necessary for the purpose of constructing, operating, maintaining, replacing or repairing or removing the appliances used by him or it, in a proper employment herein contemplated.

None of the poles, wire, brackets, cross-arms or other fixtures shall be so replaced or maintained as to interfere with the travel on or the drainage of any road in Boone County, and any and all poles, wires and fixtures shall be changed upon the request of the Fiscal Court or the County Road Engineer of Boone County, Kentucky.

N. E. RIDGELL,
County Judge

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of the foregoing order I will, as instructed therein, receive bids for the sale of said franchise until noon Tuesday February 5th, 1924. All bids shall be sealed marked "BIDS FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT FRANCHISE." No bids will be received or considered unless the amount of the advertising is bid. Given under my hand as clerk of the Boone Fiscal Court this January 4th, 1923.

M. E. ROGERS,
Boone Fiscal Court

WASHINGTON IN POLITICAL FERMENT

Congress seems to be facing several difficult, not to say unsavory situations. On top of the soldiers' bonus and the question of how taxes shall be reduced comes another Shipping Board scandal—the secret sale of seven ships to the government over $30,000,000 to the Robert Dollar Company, of Cal., for $2,850,000. Then General O'Ryan, general counsel of the investigating committee in his report to the Senate Veterans' Committee charges that Charles R. Forbes, as director of the Veterans' Bureau, was a leading actor in an established conspiracy to defraud the government. This report is vigorously denounced by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee, and charges are bandied about Washington that an attempt is being made to apply the white-wash brush. Following all this is the controversy over Russia, led by Senator Lodge on one side, and Senator Borah on the other, with the probabilities that Communist propaganda from Moscow, and the organized propaganda emanating from a colony of old Czarist followers living in Washington, together with charges that American money was used against the Soviets to restore the old conditions, may all be aired.

Political conditions at the national capitol on the eve of the presidential election, are in a ferment that will not be quieted when the railroads are put on the carpet, and the farmers' interests reach a hearing. Verily, the life of a representative is anything but a flowery bed of ease these days, for with the women's vote this year no man can fortell how long his job may last.

Mail order pistols and home made "mule" are a bad combination.

When you finish with this newspaper (after you have taken your little scissors and carefully cut out the recipe below) you can have a "Newspaper Race" with the other boys and girls to get their papers too. Be sure the papers are all of the same size and you'd better play the game outside so that if things get messy nobody will drop the papers and get a line and scold. Everyone starts on a line and when the signal to "go" is given, each drops the paper and tries to get it over it, picks it up, drops it in front again and keeps doing this over until the finish line is reached. The first one over the line wins!

Jelly Cake is Nice to Bake.
Grandma makes such good jelly, doesn't she? You'd just love to dig your little silver spoon right down into the jar and eat it that way. You know you would! But mercy me, that isn't good for little girls and boys! But if grandma really wants you to enjoy her good jelly, ask her to make some jelly cake for you. Just like this:
3 eggs.
1 cup self-rising flour.
1 cup powdered sugar.
3 tablespoons sweet milk.
She must stir the flour three times, then beat the whites and yolks of eggs separately and mix the sugar with the yolks adding the sifted flour gradually. Next come the whites of the eggs and the milk. This is all mixed good and poured into cake tins to bake for 15 minutes. When it is done, spread the layers with jelly and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

BANKS AND POULTRY

* Years ago it would have been said that the banking business and poultry raising are things having but little relation to each other. Many bank men would have laughed at the idea, that they should promote poultry raising in their vicinity. That is the farmer's business, not the banker's, they would have said.

The St. Paul Farmer tells how a bank at Rockford, Minnesota, helped its community by taking steps to promote poultry keeping. The bank distributed hatching eggs to its patrons, taking one pullet in the fall from each setting for payment. It also arranged for a pullet show and worked for correct methods of poultry raising. Their effort aroused great interest in this industry, and it must have worked for the prosperity of the community.

Everybody stayed close to the house last Sunday.

1924 SEEDS

Our experience in seed buying and distributing is at your service. Our record as distributors of quality seeds is your guarantee of quality when you send your order. We do not try to "gate" with low grade seeds as we can not sell high purity and high germinating seed at prices you pay for inferior seed.

"THE BEST IS NONE TOO GOOD FOR THE FARMER."

has been our slogan and we have lived up to it. And yet our prices are oftentimes lower than the poor grade seeds you get elsewhere. A few cents more on a bushel of seed mean dollars more for you at harvest. Send us your orders or inquiries on

Winter's Exquisite Hats

The three smart hats shown above are fair examples of this winter's exquisite millinery, which is superlatively rich, elaborate, flattering. At the top is a turban of metallic brocade, with a tall cascade of brocade at the front, bordered with fur. A velvet hat with sectional crown and scalloped brim, is outlined with plaited ribbon and ribbon forms the bow at the side and flowers posed at the front. A rich turban of shirred black velvet has a flare of lace across the top and two jewel-like pins of rhinestone and onyx at the front.

People often think in a vague way that they would like to see their home towns go ahead, but they do not quite realize what an uplift and push ahead they would get from improved advantages.

When a town provides better school facilities, for instance, the community life reflects the change. Better schools and teachers and courses mean that the pupils come out with brighter minds and better training. Not merely do they know more facts, but they will do better work in any kind of a job. That means that the industries of a city, assisted by more intelligent service, can compete more successfully with their rivals.

They can pay better wages, they will put more money in circulation, which means a higher standard of living. Civic improvement is not merely a vague and distant ideal but the most practical method of getting the things in life that we all desire.

Tax-free securities are about the only free thing left in this country.

REMOUNTS FOR THE UNITED STATES ARMY

More Than Twenty-Two Thousand Mares Bred To Thoroughbred Stallions By The Federal Remount Service. The Kentucky Stallions Are In Great Demand On The Government Breeding Farms.

The American Remount Association is each day growing in usefulness and popularity. It is rendering a useful and invaluable service to the War Department by making it possible for the cavalry branch of the Army to have the best remounts in the world. Hundreds of turkeys, all the racing associations, the United States Government and many private citizens have contributed to the fund for the purchase of thoroughbred stallions to be placed on the government farms throughout the country, there to be bred to suitable cold-blooded mares, the produce to be turned over to the cavalry division of the United States Army. Long experience has shown that the thoroughbred stallion so mated will get in size, speed, quality and comage the ideal mount for the war and needs of the cavalry.

The Federal Remount Service, with a record of more than 22,000 mares bred since the inauguration of the plan, and 380 stallions ready for distribution in various states of the Union next spring, has a right to the gratitude of everybody interested in the improvement of the general purpose horse.

When this organization came into being after the close of the World War, fears were expressed in some quarters that it would meet with hostility on the part of breeders of heavy draft horses, over 90% of the stallions distributed by the remount authorities being thoroughbred; but the contrary has turned out to be the case. Breeders of Percheron, Shire, Clydesdale and other heavy horse types have gone out of their way to show their friendliness to a cause that is not only providing a supply of light horses available for national defense, but is furnishing millions of animals of a type needed for riding.

ACUTE GOUT

Gout is one of the oldest ills to which flesh is heir. The classical literature of Rome is full of allusions to "podagra"; many of the writers refer with feeling to their personal sufferings. Moreover, the mummified skeletons of Egyptians of the predynastic period show signs of gout in the joints. In modern times the English who are the successors and heirs of the Romans, are of all people the most subject to the "scourge of the aristocracy." In America we see less of it; yet it is by no means uncommon; and many physicians believe that it is increasing in frequency. We suffer more often than women from typical acute attacks of gout, but women are by no means immune to the more chronic forms, as is shown in the crippling of some of the joints and in the deposits of chalky nodules in the finger joints.

A typical attack of gout begins with a sudden severe pain in the great toe that comes on in the early morning and weakens the victim. It is not, however, a clap out of a clear sky; for some days there are almost always premonitory symptoms such as indigestion, shooting pains in various parts of the body, headache, a little fever and a villainous temper. The affected joint is red, swollen and exquisitely tender. During the day the pain is quite bearable, but toward evening its intensity increases, and the night is one long torment. The attack lasts a variable period, or perhaps a week, perhaps two or three weeks. It subsides gradually, and after it has gone the patient often feels unusually well for a time, and, forgetting the past, is tempted to indulge himself again in the pleasures of the table. The disease is not always confined to one great toe; both may be attacked, and so may the thumbs or other digits.

The treatment of gout during an attack is not very successful; the most that can be done is to mitigate the pain by local applications of camphor liniment or other liniments or soothing ointments. During the attack a milk diet modified perhaps with an occasional egg or with rice is advisable. During convalescence the patient must learn to practice moderation in eating and drinking and to take up a new mode of life with long hours of sleep, plenty of exercise in the open air and freedom from worry. Remarks on general and medicinal treatment will be considered in a later article.

Forty-five family cows were purchased by or let for their last year to negro farmers in Fayette County, Tenn., who had previously had none on their farms, thru the efforts of the negro extension agent in the county. A purebred dairy bull and 20 purebred cows have been bought by other negro farmers in the county according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, and 18 purebred calves are being raised for dairy purposes. Effort has been made to provide better pastures. As a result, pastures have been increased 120 acres and many of the old pastures have been improved.

THE KINDLY WOMAN

If only a woman could be made to believe that one of the surest passports to success is kindness, she would find her way through life smoothing out astonishingly. It always pays, and it always is a passport that lies right in her own hand and may be had with a wee bit of trouble, an infinitesimal amount of repression. No one can find a woman, get her so any favors, and make her pathway so much easier and more pleasant than from a very selfish viewpoint, if no other, a woman would do well to adopt a platform of kindness.

There are gracious women who court their friends by the score, and who win by the power of kindness. There are cross grained creatures who lower their friendless condition when all the time the trouble is of their own making.

Most of us know saleswomen who act toward customers in such an overbearing and insolent manner that the exasperated purchaser shakes the dust of the establishment off her shoes and never hand there are saleswomen who hold their customers in esteem and endeavor to please. The proprietors know these saleswomen, and other proprietors come to know of them—therefore there is always a place and always a little better salary offered.

Fashionable women should not be expected to be any more kindly than their humbler sisters, but all women ought to be expected to be kind, just to make life worth living and to oil the wheels of things.

It will make things so much more pleasant, and will bring friends and all that makes life worth living. Kindness is always repelling, and there never yet was anybody who was won by an ugly demeanor, nor a snippy manner, nor a grouchy that never wore off.

Scientists at the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science said that the missing link might be found at any time. We'll now have a word from Mr. Bryan on the subject.

THE WEATHER

Nothing is more cursed and discussed than the weather.

It requires a sudden change in temperature, like the recent cold wave that swept over the entire country, to call attention anew to its importance in the daily life of every individual.

To quote from the poet—"For whether it blow or whether it snow. We must have weather, whether or no."

It's a time honored jest that when all other subjects of conversation fail, we may turn to the weather. Whether hot or cold, it assumes first place in more conversations than any other one subject.

We may be interested in our everyday tasks, the latest movie, tax reduction, politics, or whatnot, but let an overnight change in the weather come, we rush to the thermometer to see what the mercury shows.

Icy blasts freeze the marrow of the bone and the sun's hot rays bring human frailty to the melting point. The ability of the body to resist extremes of hot or cold is the thing that really counts, but the human being is only vaguely aware of that fact, because he believes that his comfort depends largely upon what the thermometer shows.

This age-old superstition is no more the evidence of the frailty of human nature than the one that the seasons are changing.

How often have we heard that? Some wise scientist, evidently looking for publicity, averred that by reason of the Japanese earthquake the earth's position with relation to the sun had been changed so that the United States was 500 miles nearer the sun.

His theory held out until a kind providence in the form of a cold wave pushed it into an untimely grave.

Every few years the fishing worms take a winter outing above the ground and the fruit trees obligingly bloom for Christmas, but consult the weather records any place and it will be found that temperatures average up about the same, in cycles of years.

The weather is not such a fickle old fool as most of us imagine.

THE BOK PEACE AWARD

It is a foregone conclusion that the Bok peace award will receive a favorable majority in the referendum that is being conducted through the press and the magazines. The stage is all set for it. All altruistic people who hope to end war by some means or other will vote for it, regardless of whether they are prepared for an intelligent vote on the question through reading and a thorough study of the problems that stand in the way of international peace.

But a referendum in many respects is like an election, only less convincing, because those who are interested vote for the project under discussion, some of their opposition to take the trouble to vote and a large disinterested per cent fail to take any side.

Those who have studied the winning plan in the Bok peace award say that it is a rebash of peace proposals heretofore made, with the single exception of one new thought—that the manufacture and sale of arms be limited during times of peace.

Word comes from Washington that the senate, which is clothed by the constitution with authority to make the winning plan, is not officially recognizing the winning plan.

Perhaps this is as it should be. The farmers of the constitution had the good judgment and foresight to realize that the common people, by talent and disposition, were not learned enough in the important questions of international relations, and delegated to the chief executive and the more deliberative branch of the congress the authority to determine our policy toward other nations.

No one can deny that an effort is being made to find a practical plan for ending war, which the people generally will accept. Many disbelievers on plans that have already been proposed and many believe that the United States should enter the League of Nations, but nothing has been found yet that this country can sponsor, which is free from entangling foreign relations, such as opponents of the League of Nations oppose.

There are now three outstanding plans before the present session of congress in the form of joint resolutions.

One of them provides for the outlawing of war and an international agreement of such judicial character as "would not shake the independence or impair the sovereignty of any nation."

Another would amend the constitution to provide for a referendum of the voters on the question of a declaration of war.

Still another calls for a constitutional amendment providing for the conscription of money, industry and property as well as men in case of war.

This constant seeking for a way to end war indicates an honest effort to find the road to peace and who can say that it may not bear fruit?

PENCILS

Pencils make marks. Some make light marks and some make black marks. The harder you press, the blacker the mark.

John I. Nolan, former national commander of the National Disabled Soldiers League, now realizes this fact, though he probably didn't realize it when he engineered his first pencil campaign.

The district attorney's office of New York county, New York, is trying to find out where the money went. The pencil-selling campaign of the League took thousands of dollars from the public pocket. The district attorney suspects that Nolan knows what became of it, hence the investigation.

Pencil-selling was the cause of Nolan's downfall in the first place, and it may be again. His mark was too black, judging from late developments.

He was ousted as national commander of the organization in last June because he insisted on "giving" pencils as a method of raising money. The bank and file rejected.

George T. Davis, of Indianapolis was elected successor to Nolan, but the former commander is reported to be in possession of the League's files in Washington.

Nolan had Thomas V. Fields, national vice-commander, arrested in Boston on a charge of accepting a fee of $500 from a disabled veteran to handle his case of compensation. Fields didn't like it and now he's telling the government authorities what he knows of Nolan and the League.

It may make interesting reading some day.

STERN REALITY

Dr. Daniel T. MacDougal, director of botanical research at the Carnegie Institute, Washington, takes a startling prediction which appeals strongly to us.

He is of the opinion as the result of experiments, that the time is coming when mankind will receive its sustenance direct from the rays of the sun instead of consuming daily food in the manner of today.

As the food we eat represents only the stored up energy of the sun, Dr. MacDougal proposes the creation of an artificial cell in the human body that will receive this nourishment direct from the sun, instead of thru animal and plant life as at present.

When we read the doctor's prediction in the daily press our first thought was to have an artificial cell installed in our own noble body and that of our family and then rush right off to some clinic of perpetual sun, where we could go to replenish without doing another stroke of work.

And then the third of reality? With such a revolution possible, John D. Henry, and the other billions would promptly "cover" the sun and dole its rays out at price-flooding prices per dole.

No, there's no hope of escape. We'll just have to plug along at the same old grind.

WOOD F. AXTON IS MADE MEMBER OF BURLEY POOL.

Louisville Manufacturer, Who Recently Bought Farm, Declares He Does Not Want To Produce From Self-Denial and Sacrifice Of His Fellows.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 20.—Wood F. Axton, Louisville tobacco manufacturer, has joined the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, signing a contract pledging the tobacco from his farm in Oldham county, Kentucky, to be marketed through the association.

Mr. Axton has been from the very first a believer in co-operative marketing of Burley tobacco. He endorsed the movement in a public address at a meeting of growers during the organization campaign and has been one of the manufacturers who bought their requirements from the association from the very beginning of its business life.

In a letter to President and General Manager James C. Stone, Mr. Axton says he could use the going for only two months, but that he wishes to join the association in the crop of tobacco is planted on his land.

Mr. Axton, in his letter continues, "Mr. Stone, to send him a contract or sign, says he could use the tobacco he might grow in the market for his own brand, but in these days when other men who are engaged in farming are trying to make better marketing conditions for their products, so that they can better educate their sons and daughters and have some of the enjoyments of life as a result of their toil, I certainly do not want to profit by this at their expense, and I realize that the more profit there is in farming the more land in Kentucky will be worth and that when men receive a decent living wage for their labor, whether on a farm, in the mine or factories, the whole community is bound to prosper."

Mr. Axton's letter to President Stone, in full follows:

Louisville, Ky.
January 10th, 1924.
Mr. James C. Stone, President
Burley Tobacco Cooperative Marketing Association, Lexington, Ky.

Dear Sir:
Referring to my last interview with you regarding putting the tobacco raised on my farm in the Burley Tobacco Co-operative Association, I would ask you to send me a contract so that I may sign same.

As President of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company, I would always have a market for my tobacco, as we could use this tobacco in the manufacture of CROWN CIGARETTES and OLD HILL SIDE smoking tobacco and other brands, but in these days, when other men who are engaged in farming and trying to make better marketing conditions for their products, so that they can better educate their sons and daughters and have some of the enjoyments of life as the result of their toil, I certainly do not want to profit by this at their expense, and I realize that the more profit there is in farming the more land in Kentucky will be worth and that when men receive a decent living wage for their labor, whether on a farm, in the mine or factories, the whole community is bound to prosper.

It would be useless for me to assure you of my confidence in the management of your association, as I have known you and Mr. Barker many years and know how business, and my dealings with the Burley Tobacco Co-operative Marketing Association has been a assurance of the same honorable plan you have always followed.

This farm is located in Oldham county, near Skylight, and contains 465 acres, and while I have only half this farm for two months, yet I want to join your organization before any tobacco is grown on it by me.

Thanking you in advance for accepting this application to become a member of your organization, I remain,
Sincerely Yours,
WOOD F. AXTON.

THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY TOWNS

Country towns have a different outlook on problems of conduct and character than the cities do, and the moral standards of the average country town are higher than those of the average city.

People sometimes complain of the spirit of personal criticism and watchfulness that prevails in country towns. If a young man goes wrong, he is the target for general complaint. He may think he would like it better if he were living in some city where his lapses of conduct would pass unnoticed in the crowd.

But really it is a godsend to him that he is living in a place that sets a certain standard of conduct for his life. This is a help to every well meaning fellow. It makes him feel that he has inherited a certain tradition of conduct, and that he must be loyal to it. The result is that he avoids many of the meaner vices, which may seem enticing for the moment, but which bring misery in their train and lead to broken homes and ruined lives. Many people whose lives have been wrecked by dissipation in city surroundings, bitterly regret that they had not remained in the country town where Mrs. Jones, from whom they had known scores of friends and neighbors, churches would have kept them straight.

Some of the country people have more time to read good books and get interested in the real ends of life, and they are not so much diverted into dissipated pursuits.

The consequence of these conditions is, that when any moral issue arises, the country towns are apt to be the strong character force that holds the nation back from some delinquency.

It will be a sad day for the nation if ever the country towns should decline to the point where they would be unable to exert a restraining influence over the follies of the cities.

WARREN HUGH WILSON TO ADDRESS CONFERENCE

The main feature of Rural Community Day program at Farm and Home Convention Week of the Kentucky College of Agriculture will be an address and discussion led by Dr. Warren Hugh Wilson, Superintendent, Department of Church and Country Life, Board of Home Missions Professor of education, Columbia University, President of the International Missionary Agricultural Association, and author of "The Church of the Open Country," "The Evolution of the Country Community," "The Church at the Center," and "The Second Missionary Adventure." Dr. Wilson stands out prominently as a leader in rural church and community activities in America and abroad, and his lectures promise to be a source of inspiration to those who attend the conference.

In addition addresses will be delivered by Mrs. R. E. Tipton, President of the Fayette County Community Council, who will speak on "What Community Organization Can Do for the Country," while Dr. John Chambers will present "A Country Health Program," and Mrs. Francis Miner, recreation expert of the Civic League will speak on "Recreation for the Community." In her address, "The Challenge of the Community to the Home," Miss Mary E. Sweeney, of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, will point out the importance of making life a training in health and citizenship and those high ideals and standards of living which will encourage and that life by which alone the true satisfaction of the country may be attained.

TAX REDUCTION

Congress is very much divided on the subject of Secretary Mellon's tax reduction scheme.

That, however, is nothing new for congress. That august body is made up of many people of many minds, from sections of the country, representing constituents of widely divergent views and interests.

Each senator and congressman is constantly demanding new or revised legislation that will fit in with the wishes of his people "back home" to whom he must render an accounting, and there is no subject of more vital importance just now than that of tax reduction. Hence we will see of tax reduction and demands for certain provisions in the bill favorable to their own people and resisting other provisions to which their people are opposed.

All of the conflicting interests and demands must be harmonized and a working basis agreed upon that will be at least reasonably fair to all classes of people and all sections of the country.

It will be a free show well worth witnessing, with our distinguished representatives in congress as the star performers.

But we send them to Washington for that purpose and we expect them to make good.

THINGS WE ALL LIKE

A salad is always in season and a new one is always welcomed.

Carlton Salad.—Separate French endive, clean, aralia, and chili. Cut cold cooked beets into slices, then into rings and fancy shapes. Arrange pieces of endive through the best rings; arrange on crisp lettuce allowing two rings and five shapes to each portion. Serve with French dressing and sprinkle each with chopped walnut meats.

Apple Salad.—Apples are so good and of such good flavor at this season that apple salad should be served often. Take two cupsful of diced apple, a small slice of finely minced Spanish onion, a half-cupful of finely diced dates and season well with a good rich boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Luncheon Stuffed Eggs.—Cut hard-boiled eggs in halves lengthwise. Remove the yolks and mash them, add half the amount of deviled ham and enough melted butter to make of the consistency to shape. Make into balls the size of the yolks and refill the whites. Form the remainder of the mixture into a nest. Arrange the eggs in the nest, pour over one cupful of seasoned white sauce. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs, and bake until the crumbs are brown.

Apple Dessert.—Wash, core and peel eight large apples, leaving a belt of skin an inch and a half wide around each. This helps to keep them from losing their shape when cooked. Place in a casserole and fill with rice and raisins mixed together, using one-half cupful of cooked rice and one-fourth cupful of seedless raisins. Pour over them two cupfuls of hot maple sirup and bake until the apples are tender. Serve either cold or hot.

Dried Sandwiches.—Cut stale bread into shapely oblongs and dip in to egg, sugar and milk, allowing them to soak until soft. Fry in butter and brown on both sides. Spread with jam and put together sandwich fashion. Serve with a hot fruit sauce.

COLD-WEATHER DISHES.

The chilly days speed up the appetite and we enjoy foods that are heavy and richer than those served during the warm weather. Casserole dishes are especially favored with those who like to put a whole meal into one dish. A casserole is a good one for a ride in the bracing air, coming back with an appetite equal to a good nourishing dish of vegetables and meat. When one lives where chestnuts are to be found at a reasonable price in the market the following dish will not be an expensive luxury:

Casserolet Castelnau.—This is a famous historical dish. Soak a quart of lima beans in a saucepan with water to cover; put over the heat and let them just come to the boiling point and then set them aside for an hour. Drain the beans, add fresh boiling water and set them over the fire and cook until nearly done. Place in casserole two cupfuls of cooked chicken or duck, turkey or any fat fowl, add the drained beans, and onion sliced, half a cupful of strained tomato, a quart of chicken broth and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Bake one hour, uncover, sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs, chopped parsley, brown and serve.

Oyster Cocktail Sauce.—For five oysters use a teaspoonful of tarragon vinegar, a tablespoonful of tomato catsup, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, four drops of tabasco sauce and a pinch of salt. Mix all the seasonings thoroughly, add the oysters and chill before serving. Chili sauce, grapefruit juice or oyster liquor may be added if desired.

Chestnut au Casserole.—Remove shells from three cupfuls of chestnuts, put into a casserole and pour over three cupfuls of highly seasoned chicken stock. Cover and cook in a slow oven for three hours; then thicken with two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of flour, season well with salt, pepper and a little grated onion. Combined with chicken this makes another delightful dish.

POULTRY

Convert Old Buildings Into Houses for Fowls

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Many farms have old-style closed-up poultry houses, with poor light and ventilation, or old sheds and other buildings of little use for other purposes, that can be remodeled or built over with little difficulty into satisfactory poultry houses for the flocks this winter. The size and the shape of the building makes little difference, says the United States Department of Agriculture, but the essential factors are dryness, good ventilation, freedom from drafts, plenty of sunshine, and room enough to allow the birds to move about with freedom and comfort.

If new houses are to be built or old buildings converted into poultry houses, locate them on high or sloping ground if possible, but always on dry and well-drained soil. The amount of floor space to be allowed each fowl varies somewhat with conditions, but on a farm or where the birds can be out of doors nearly every day the department has found that about 2½ square feet of floor space per bird in flocks of 20 is enough. In a village or city or in a climate where there is a good deal of snow, making it necessary to confine the birds closely, 4 or 5 square feet per bird is needed. The interior of the house should be simple, convenient, and easy to clean.

The converted poultry house may or may not have a floor. If the house is on dry, sandy soil a dirt floor is usually quite satisfactory although often more damp than board or cement floors. Fresh gravel and sand must be added from time to time to keep them sanitary. If board floors are used, make them tight and smooth so as to make them dry and easy to clean. If possible, build board floors 8 or 10 inches from the ground to allow a circulation of air and to prevent rats from harboring under them. Cement floors, especially for large houses, are quite satisfactory, as they keep rats out and last much longer than board floors. They must be kept well covered with litter, however, department workers say, to make them warm and comfortable for the flock.

Comfortable Houses for Ducks Quite Important

In cold weather ducks should be kept in the house because their feet are so tender that when they come in contact with the cold ground they suffer greatly and huddle along as if their backs were broken. However, they should not be kept housed more than is really necessary.

If the roof is good the rest is easy. If the weather is bad the rest is not so easy. To keep ducks comfortable in cold weather, cover the outside with tarred paper or strip with lath.

A board floor is better than an earth floor because the ducks will often stir up the ground in a very disagreeable manner when there is the least sign of moisture.

Provide suitable houses if you wish to be successful. The houses need not be very expensive, but they should be substantial so that they may be used for the same purpose several years in succession.

Ducks, both old and young, should have a dry, comfortable place to stay in at night. If forced to sit on the damp ground they are liable to be taken with cramps and colds in the head. The latter are almost certain to turn to croup.

There is usually some shed or building that can be converted into a duck house at small expense. Where only a small flock is kept this plan is advisable.

Corn Fodder as Litter Is Excellent for Hens

Litter is almost indispensable in every henhouse where eggs are desired, as well as healthy and contented fowls. Some farmers complain about using good wheat or oats straw for the hens to scratch in. In this event, cut-corn fodder makes an excellent and lasting litter for the poultry house—and even if one must pay to have the fodder cut, it is cheaper than other litters.

When cut up, ten bundles of corn fodder makes enough litter to cover 400 square feet of floor space. For the same space, when straw is used, at least two bales would be required, and this would cost several times as much as the corn fodder. Fodder is good not only because of its cheapness, but also because the hens like to eat the pieces or leaves, thus obtaining some bulky food, which is often lacking in poultry rations.

Pure Air Is Essential to Health of Laying Hen

It has been estimated that the hen consumes twice as much air as a horse, and three times as much as a cow, and yet we see hen houses with no means of getting any pure air into them except through cracks, which may give a direct draft over some bird. With other conditions favorable to the development of germs, there soon are rot, roup and bronchial disorders of many kinds.

DAIRY HINTS

Dairyman Should Strive to Keep Calves Growing

In raising heifer calves, the dairyman should seek to keep them growing constantly. A setback or slump in growth is costly and difficult to overcome, the New York state agricultural college at Ithaca has found.

Many good calves have been well fed and well grown until weaned, and then when turned out to pasture, have been neglected and stunted. Often this stunting is permanent, and under such a result.

It is usually better not to turn calves out to pasture until after they are weaned, as it is much easier to feed and care for them in the barn. Some farmers never pasture calves born after January 1, during the first summer. By this means they avoid heat and flies, which keep young calves from growing in summer.

Any pasture intended for calves should have plenty of water and plenty of shade. If possible, it should be located near the barn in order to make it convenient to watch over the calves, provide salt and give feed. They should have some grain at least once a day, if normal growth is expected.

In most cases about two pounds is enough for each calf. The following mixture is recommended: Three hundred pounds cornmeal, hominy feed or ground barley, 300 pounds ground oats, 300 pounds wheat bran.

One hundred pounds of linseed oil meal may be added to this with good results, and it is advisable to do so during late summer, when hot weather has dried up the pasture and reduced the protein content of the grass.

After the calves reach an age of nine to ten months, grain feeding depends entirely upon the condition of the pasture. If it is plentiful, green and succulent, good growth can be obtained without grain. But if it is short and dried up, it should be supplemented by the concentrate feeds.

State Averages of Age at Which Cows Are Sold

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The average age of milch cows when slaughtered for beef is ten years, and the price realized for such cows is about one-half the price brought by younger cows sold for milking purposes, according to a nationwide investigation of present conditions made this year by the United States Department of Agriculture.

State averages of the age at which cows are sold for slaughter were remarkably uniform, there being no state with an average under nine years and no state with an average over eleven years. States showing an average of eleven years were Maryland, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Utah and Nevada. States with an average of nine years were New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama.

In the early spring this year, when the survey was made, milch cows showed an average sale price of $32 per head when sold for slaughter, or about 50 per cent of the average price of $63 for cows sold at the same time for milking purposes.

Tell Value of Sire by Production of Progeny

The wisest dairyman in the world cannot tell a prepotent bull by his looks or by his breeding. There is no known way of telling a valuable sire only by his progeny. If his heifers are better producers than their dams he is a good bull—worth his weight in gold, but if his heifers are no improvement over their dams, or if not so good, then he is worthless as a sire.

Who can tell what the result will be when you mate an unknown bull with poor cows? No man can. The most perfect individual, according to standards, might be absolutely worthless, and if his sire was a proved prepotent bull and his dam had a world's record he might not have this unknown, mysterious power of prepotency. He might transmit undesirable qualities instead of desirable ones.

DAIRY NOTES

The time to train cows to eat well of roughage is when they are young. Cow testing eliminates the cow kept at a loss, raises the average production of the herd and increases the profits from dairying.

Several weeks of liberal feeding with good roughage and from six to ten pounds of grain a day while cows are dry is good insurance for efficient production in the next lactation period.

A cold separator will not do good work. It is best to run about a gallon of warm water through the bowl to warm it before turning on the milk.

The main reason why silage is such a good milk feed is because of its succulence. The juices in it stimulate the cow to higher production.

Every dairyman should work out his own feeding ration, using the feeds he can grow most economically, thus buying those he cannot grow in the best and cheapest forms.

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

As was to be expected, there has been much "snap judgment" of the peace plan selected to receive the Bok prize. Those who believe in the League of Nations think it wonderful; those against the League of Nations call it nonsense.

But it would seem that a fair-minded consideration of the plan would not begin with the statement that "it is good" or "it is poor," would not "propagate" or "dispropagate" or "this is the start of the millennium." To many thinking people the substance of the winning plan is of small account. Students of history know that mankind has sought for peace for thousands of years, and never yet found the road; that a plan offered as the result of a prize, should immediately succeed where humanity has failed, would be miraculous. Only the credible expected any marvel to occur.

What the peace plan has done, is doing, and will do, is to focus the thoughts of many people on the problem of peace. No enduring institution is the handiwork of one man; war itself is not the product of one man or group of men, but the result of centuries of experience. Peace is then as difficult to practice as war; as difficult to attain as war is easy to get into; that a fair highway to its permanent adoption by a war-weary world could be found by one man or one group of men in one lifetime is not to be expected.

But the peace plan offers the peace prize, the winning plan itself, make us think easy, talk peace, argue peace. Let the whole world argue peace, instead of war; let all nations question war instead of embracing it when it comes, and we will have peace, just as we have learned how to have and live with liberty, equality, humane justice and civil law, all at one time, things sought as earnestly and as hopelessly as we today seek for permanent and lasting guarantees of peace.

DEALING WITH CRIME

The example that Philadelphia set by driving out its criminals might be followed by other large cities—but it won't be.

Even if it were, it would have its disadvantages. The "clean-up drives" in these cities are sporadic and short-lived, while crime never sleeps.

Another objection is that the city that sets about to wash its skirts inflicts its objectionable citizens on its neighbors. The same is as true of small city as of large.

Vice is seldom if ever corrected by compelling it to change location. While one group of society may be temporarily relieved by the disappearance of the immoral element, another group is made to suffer all the more.

Every community applauds when an official gives an offender his freedom with the proviso that he leave. This a chronic violator of the law is set free to prey upon some other town or city and cause further trouble.

Punishment seems to be the only alternative for wilful and persistent violation of the law. The tendency of the times is to try corrective methods by means of suspended sentences in cases of first or infrequent offenses, but even this method has its limitations.

Crime will always have to be dealt with, but there is some question whether "clean-up" drives get the best results.

Law enforcement that is as alert as crime is the thing that's needed to keep vice on the run—law enforcement not here and there, but everywhere.

No community can afford to allow disregard for law to get the upper hand because it breeds crime. Where a wholesome respect for law exists, there crime does not often loiter.

APPRECIATION FOR EFFORT

There are some folks who admire greatly things located far from their homes, but they have but little appreciation for efforts that may be put forth by their next door neighbor.

The lack of appreciation is something that holds back many communities. People may work hard to carry on public causes and then find that the good things they do are rarely praised. Meanwhile if they make some little slip, it may be generally ridiculed, and they may not hear the last of it for months or years.

When people give honest effort to carry on the organizations of their home town and promote its causes, they should get some very generous recognition. If they make mistakes they should be passed over lightly; if more of this spirit prevailed, it would be easier to carry on community efforts.

There are lots of dangerous corners in these days of fast driving, but none quite as dangerous as the one where father finds his young son pulling on a cigarette.

MASON

Cynthia Ann Mason was born on March 26th, 1840, and departed this life Jan. 15th, 1924. She leaves one sister (a twin) Mrs. G. L. Smith. She was the daughter of B. J. and Conna Mason, and was married to James T. Mason Dec. 16th, 1875. Her husband departed this life Oct. 9th, 1893.

She was 83 years, 9 months and 19 days of age. She has been a very devoted member of the Big Bone Baptist church for 60 years. Her consistent christian character, her generous and hospitable spirit, her unflinching love and kindness to her friends and acquaintances made her a universal favorite. She will be mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives.

Her influence will live to bless the generations to come; as one of her and her husband's greatest ambitions was the wonderful success of her cousin, the Rev. Dr. W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist church of Minneapolis, Minn., for the past 26 years, with a membership of 2,750, which proves that deeds in christianity lives on even after death.

WAR IN THE PEACE CONTEST.

When Edward W. Bok started after the hag of gold at the end of the rainbow, namely peace, he didn't expect to find peace.

When Henry Ford chartered a ship and took a crowd of idealists to Europe to get the soldiers out of the trenches by Christmas, he accomplished about as much as Mr. Bok has with his American Peace Award.

Mr. Ford, in search of peace, encountered nothing but war among his guests.

Mr. Bok, after the same elusive object, started a war among the contestants.

The sum total of the manuscripts submitted was 22,100. Each was limited to 500 words.

The judges returned a decision that was said to be unanimous, which leads to the conclusion that they read all the manuscripts. If they passed upon all submitted, it would require the reading of one every minute during the eight working hours of every day during the time allotted for the contest.

This is one of the very good reasons why some of the 22,099 losing contestants have raised their voices in complaint.

This is also one of the reasons why the contest is investigating Mr. Bok's thorny road to peace.

Whatever the outcome, Mr. Bok must be convinced by this time that finding peace for the world is more hazardous than lifting the soldiers out of the trenches by Christmas.

AGED LAWYER

IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Charles Strother, 71 Years Old, Hit By Automobile on Scott Street, Covington.

Charles Strother, 71 years old, retired lawyer, was seriously injured when he was hit by an automobile as he was crossing Eighteenth street at Scott boulevard, Covington, last Sunday night.

Mr. Strother, who resides in the Willingford Apartments, Twentieth street, Covington, was on the way to attend services at the St. Luke Methodist Episcopal Church, Eighteenth and Greenup streets. He was removed to Booth Memorial Hospital, Covington, where physicians said he had suffered a compound fracture of the left leg, a fracture of his left arm and a severe scalp wound.

Mr. Strother said the accident occurred so suddenly he did not remember what hit him.

Albert Fessler, 20 years old, Decatur, Ky., employee in the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company's shops at Decatur, driver of the automobile, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. He was released on bond supplied by his parents. Fessler told police that he did not see the man step in front of his car until it was too late to avoid him.

Mr. Strother formerly resided at Walton, Ky., where he had practiced law many years, until his removal to Covington a few years ago.

WANTS TO HEAR FROM YOU

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 25, 1924
Editor Boone County Recorder,
Burlington, Ky.,

Dear Sir:

I should like to hear from the people of Boone county upon any matters that would be of help to them, coming before the General Assembly. Also upon any matter they may want brought before the Assembly.

Respectfully,
J. A. LEE.

Marriage license were obtained at the Clerk's office in Covington, last Wednesday by L. Kendall, 21 years old railroad employee, and Pearlina Beach, 21, both of Verona, this county.

THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY

This being leap year, the month of February, 1924, which begins tomorrow, (Friday) has twenty-nine days—the extra day being added every four years in order to give the women who are so inclined, to propose. One second Mr. Ground Hog will venture from his underground home and come forth to tell us the kind of weather we are to have for the next six weeks. On the 12th the birthday of Lincoln will be observed, and on the 22nd Washington's birthday. We look back a few days to the time when February 12 and February 22 received slight consideration as holidays; today there is hardly a community in the country which is not disposed to do full honor to the dates and to what they represent. The 14th is St. Valentine's day. Old people still remember when valentines were as popular as Christmas cards, and the postmaster groaned under his load on the morning of the 13th.

Many curious old charms are said to be potent on St. Valentine's eve—all, like most charms ever invented, connected with the procuring of husbands. Even before surplus manna dawned on the scene, this seems to have been a subject of much anxiety. Five bay leaves, pinned respectively to the four corners and the center of the pillow, are said to bring certain dreams of the future partner, if the sleeper has gone to bed without eating or sleeping. Another infallible spell was to write the names of admirers, on separate pieces of paper, enclose them in clay balls and throw them into water. The one which came to the surface first contained the name of the fated spouse.

It is a sign of great good luck if the swain you favor should be the first man seen on February 14. The modern girl who does not pin her faith entirely to signs and omens, can always practice the rule of a shrewd maiden of long ago, who, knowing where her heart had gone, "lay a-bed and shut my eyes all the morning till 'he' came, for I would not have seen another man before him for all the world."

THE FARMER'S TAXES

The National Industrial Conference board finds that the farmer pays more than his share of the nation's taxes. The figures for 1922 show that the ratio of taxation to income for the agricultural classes was about 17 per cent, while for the remainder of the community it was about 12 per cent.

Taxation has already rested heavily on the farmer. His land and buildings and stock and machinery can not escape the eyes of the authorities, and are sure to be assessed. The country populations need to study carefully the costs of operating their state, county and local governments, to make sure that the work is done in a business like, systematic, and economical way, as such a large part of these costs are paid by the farming and country town population.

ONE CHILD IN CLUB WORK

Two thousand farmers in North Carolina have signed a pledge designed to "improve farming conditions in North Carolina. This pledge included ten points, and one of these ten was "To enroll at least one child in club work."

It would mean a lot to any rural community if a child from every home could be controlled in some kind of production or home economics work. The children in the town centers should be enrolled as well, and most of them could maintain a garden or keep poultry or pigs. With one child in every home in Boone county studying how country life can be made more efficient, conditions in this section could be radically improved in a few years.

FORD OUTPUT FOR YEAR

The Ford Motor Company made 2,200,682 automobiles, trucks and tractors in 1923—775,059 more than in any previous year, according to production figures for the year announced. Of the total 1,915,485; automobiles and trucks were made in this country and 175,474 in foreign plants, including Canada. The total of these are added 101,898 tractors and 7,825 Lincoln cars. The figures were coupled with an announcement that the Ford Company expects to exceed this figure in its 1924 production and that its plans to start early this spring on its program of 10,000 cars daily.

The importance of radio in the production and marketing of agricultural products is brought out in a special survey of about 1,200 representative farmers, just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture. More than 50 per cent of the 1,200 farmers replying reported that they owned tube sets employing three or more tubes, while approximately 60 per cent of the farmers reporting homemade sets ranging from simple crystal detectors to tube sets.

WOMEN KNOW THEIR DESIRES AND GENERALLY GET THEM

Women are the buyers of the nation. Very probably, in a year the average woman makes a thousand or more purchases. She buys many different food products, scores of fabrics and wearing apparel, shoes, millinery, toilet articles and many things for her home.

To be able to judge the quality of each, she would have to be a chemist, a metallurgist, an engineer, and a specialist in every line.

She is none of these. So, if she has the choice, she buys the goods she knows rather than those she does not know.

And she is going to have the choice as long as our present civilization continues for she is boss of the home. She governs the merchandise that enters it and she is jealous of her prerogatives.

The retail merchants who want to win her patronage must make a bid for it; convince her of their intention and ability to give her merchandise of known value; and then live up to the standard they set for themselves.

For she is a just but ruthless boss. She never forgets nor forgives. She rewards loyal service with loyalty, but she severely condemns broken faith.

Her favor is the road to success; her indifference, dismal failure.

M. W. A. NOTES

At a meeting of the members of Patriarch Camp No. 12004, Modern Woodmen of America at Burlington a few nights ago, Lee Craddock, who is a member of this camp, was reported ill with pneumonia. A committee was appointed to look after him and after hearing the report of the committee a collection was taken up among the members of the camp and a good supply of provisions was sent him by Elijah Stephens and a lot and a half of coal was ordered sent to him. Mr. Craddock's dues were paid for three months.

The Woodmen do not pay sick benefits under their bylaws, but, when necessary to help a neighbor in distress or sickness, it is done voluntarily by a "tree" offering among the members.

Mr. E. J. Aylor very kindly offered to haul the coal free of charge for Mr. Craddock.

Patriarch Camp of Burlington is having degree work every Tuesday night and prospects look good to have work every week this winter. A large number of the members are present each meeting night.

Patriarch Camp meets promptly at 7:30 every Tuesday night.

A HOME COMING HINT

With the time for Kentucky's HOME COMING celebration but five months away it would be wise for the citizens of Boone county to commence formulating plans for a reception, reunion or similar event here in Boone county for old friends and relatives who are planning to visit us for a short visit in June.

Many of these Kentuckians who are coming back for the Home Coming celebration have not seen their old friends and relatives in many years and it is our duty to not only make their visit a pleasant one, but to see that they are entertained in such a manner that they will not wait so long to come "home" again.

It has been said that wherever the Kentuckian travels he earnestly and affectionately remembers his native hills and plains; his thoughts turn incessantly toward home as those of the Swiss; he invokes the genius of his country, in trouble, danger and adversity; it is to him the home of plenty, beauty, greatness and respect; his nationality never deserts him, no country will bear a comparison with his country; no people with his own people.

That's a Kentuckian for you! Let's prove to him in June that he is right.

RED CROSS NEWS.

The subscriptions of some Junior Auxiliaries are expiring this and next month. A prompt renewal will keep issues of the Junior news from being missed.

National Headquarters commend the Boone County chapter for this year's increase in membership—gain of 40.

In the feeding of pigs an acre of clover or alfalfa pasture will save 1,140 pounds corn and 468 pounds of tankage as compared with dry-lot feeding, research in the Animal Husbandry Division of the United States Department of Agriculture shows. Pasture feeding is also advantageous because of the fertility added to the soil by the growth of legume hay.

Congress has not passed many bills yet, but a large number have been introduced and pigeonholed.

RICHARD T. GERMAN

Former Well Known Boone County Citizens One to His Reward.

R. T. German, 85 years of age, many years ago, a well known citizen of Florence, died at the home of his son, J. A. German, at Cheviot, Ohio, Thursday, Jan. 24th 1924, after a few weeks' illness from infirmities incident to old age. "Dick" German as he was known by the older people of this county, was born at Birmingham, Alabama, and until about twenty-five years ago made his home at Florence.

His wife, who was Miss Sarah J. Fullilove, preceded him to the great beyond about five years ago. He is survived by four children—two sons and two daughters, as follows: Mrs. William Trautman, of Chicago, Mrs. Jennie Deans, of Cincinnati, J. A. German, of Cheviot, Ohio, and R. L. German, of Cincinnati, and several grandchildren.

In years gone by there never was a county fair in this part of the State that R. T. German was not in the show ring riding or driving a fine horse. In his passing away a long and useful life has ended, and his many friends in the county will be grieved to hear of his death.

The remains were brought to Florence, Monday, Jan. 28th, and at 2 o'clock p. m., were laid to rest beneath the sod in the cemetery at that place in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

FARM AND HOME NEWS FROM OVER KENTUCKY

John R. Spencer, Mercer county agent has placed on ear load of Arkansas calves among his calf clubs and is planning to place another carload of Shorthorns. A committee of 12 prominent cattle men has been assisting in the work and have prepared a set of recommendations to be followed in caring for the calves.

One of the most spectacular activities of the Petersburg Community Club of Boone county, according to county agent W. D. Sutton was the control of the watermelon bug (striped beetle) by the use of free nicotine dust compound. Farmers in the Petersburg bottoms grow hundreds of acres of water-melons and grow them better than in any other place this side of the famous Missouri watermelon region. For many years this bug has been a menace, much of the time destroying the entire field, for countless thousands of the bugs come in a single night from the willows and hedge along the river. But the control was so effective during the past season that in one instance two farmers counted 220 dead bugs on a single hill fifteen minutes after fogging with the poisonous dust.

TO URGE MILITARY ROAD

Representative A. B. Rouse To Introduce Bill in Congress.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Representative Arthur B. Rouse, of Covington, Ky., is to introduce a bill tomorrow to construct and to maintain a military road between Camp Knox Military Reservation, in Hardin county, Kentucky, and the Ft. Thomas Reservation, in Campbell county, Ky.

The route of the road provided in the bill would connect the county seats of the counties of Boone, Gallatin, Carroll, Trimble, Oldham and Jefferson.

The bill authorizes the appropriation of whatever sum is necessary to build the road and directs the Secretary of War to construct it of road material that he deems to be best and most durable.

It looks like that the people hardly become reconciled to one condition of affairs in the matter of a public nature, than something else springs to the surface to again put the "whole machinery" out of gear.

This time it seems to be the question of a State bond issue of $75,000,000. Last week The Reform published a list of the uses to which this large sum of money would be put in the event the issuance of the bonds was voted, as suggested by Governor Fields. If the Legislature authorizes a vote on the question, then the matter will be entirely in the hands of the qualified voters of the State, and there should be a "kick" over the result, no matter which way it is decided.—Reformer

Don't overlook the fact that there are yet 50 more winter days until March 20th, at which time Spring weather is supposed to set in, not the further fact that even warmer weather frequently fails to reach this locality until well up in the month of April. If your coal bin is becoming low, it is the signal for you to call on your local dealers, and replenish your coal house before the cold days catches you asleep on the job.

According to Tax Commissioner Casson's 1923 books, Boone county has 1350 dogs, and the records at the County Clerk's office show that only about 600 owners have secured license for their dogs.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Senator J. A. Lee has introduced in the Legislature a bill to make the road from Florence to Burlington, to Bellevue a part of the State road system, as this road terminates near where the United States Government is building Dam 38 on the Ohio river, it is thought the road will be entitled to aid from the Government. Representative Simmons has introduced a like bill in the House of Representatives.

Another bill is now pending before the House of Representatives. It becomes a law it will make the road from Constance to Hebron, Pittsfield, Idlewild to Petersburg, and from Idlewild to Burlington a part of the State road system. The road from Florence to Union to Warsaw is now a part of the primary road system, and there is a bill pending seeking to extend that route and give Boone county a much needed piece of the state system as possible.

William Sebree, industrious young farmer, of Locust Grove neighborhood, was in town, last Thursday, transacting business and calling on the sick—his old friend and neighbor, Edward Henley who has been confined to the house for a week or more with asthma. He called at the office and renewed his subscription and the subscription of his good mother, Mrs. Rebecca Sebree, of Estabrook. Mrs. Sebree enjoys the weekly visitor as she depends on it to bring the news to her home, and keeps her posted as to what her old friends and neighbors are doing back in the home of her younger days.

The Republicans of the State will hold mass conventions in each county in the State at 1 o'clock Feb. 9th, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State Convention which meets at Louisville, Feb. 12th. On each vote cast in the last presidential election the county of Boone will be entitled to five delegates.

W. E. Walton, well known citizen and farmer of the Point Pleasant neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Thursday. Mr. Walton, who has been a reader of the Recorder many years called in to see the printers for a few minutes. He came enough to say "howdy and goodbye."

When you are brought face to face with any matter that is controlled by the good of the State in which you reside, you can but submit to the law's mandate, no matter whether you disapprove the measure or not. In the matter of public improvements 'twould be a difficult matter to please everybody concerned.

There is a evident desire upon the part of a majority of people to do all the good they can and as little harm as possible. When misfortune or disaster overtakes any of Boone county's people, a ready response to their needs is always given and the weight of their suffering relieved.

In some communities the younger generation are having a swell time; while in other communities they are being made to cough—whoooping cough, and in the next town you will find they are having a measly time with measles.

According to the tax books just compiled by Tax Commissioner Casson, the total assessment of Boone county for the year 1923, is $12,852,485. This is a decrease of $12,940 from the 1922 assessment.

Mr. J. Campbell Cantrell, widow of the late J. C. Cantrell, was elected State Librarian, last Wednesday, by a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives by a vote of 84 to 43.

With the weather hanging around zero a ton of $10.50 coal melts away like ice in summer time, and shows you what becomes of your last summer's savings.

Notwithstanding the fact that this is Leap Year we have not heard of any marriage license being issued by the County Clerk since the first of the year.

The output of motor vehicles in the United States during the year 1923 was 3,636,559 passenger automobiles and 356,257 trucks.

Attorney Furber, of Covington, was in Burlington, last Wednesday, delivering in the Records at the County Clerk's office.

Today (Thursday) is the last day of January 1924, and we know of no one that is grieving over its passing away.

"Two id be a happy world, says the lady shirk, if we could draw our pants, without doing any work."

Atty. H. F. Boughner, of Covington, was transacting business at the court house, last Thursday.

Next Monday is county court.

SELECTING AND TESTING OF RED CLOVER RECOMMENDED

Much of the present difficulty experienced in getting a good stand of red clover may be overcome simply by the use of seed of good quality and germination.

The United States Department of Agriculture. A bright fresh-looking lot of red clover seed will usually germinate pretty well, but it is so easy to test the germination in advance that there is little excuse for sowing poor seed.

If 100 or 200 average seeds are counted out and laid on a plate between pieces of moist cloth or blotting paper and the plate set away in a room where the temperature is 65 degrees to 80 degrees F., the seeds will begin to sprout in three or four days, and in a week the value of the seed so far as germination is concerned can be definitely determined.

The germination of clover seed even when the sample is good, will depend somewhat on the number of hard seeds present. A sample of good seed should test something like 90 per cent, with at least several of the remaining seeds hard at the close of the 10-day test period.

However, even if the germination of seed is good great care should be taken to find out if possible where the seed was grown, since the work of the department has also shown that red clover grown in Italy is not adapted to most of the United States and should not be used in the eastern United States. The only way to prevent getting Italian seed is to buy from a reliable firm or organization and to insist that you do not want Italian seed.

World's Safest and Soundest Security

United States Treasury Savings Certificates For Small Investors.

BY DENIS DONOHUE,
[Business Editor of San Francisco (Cal.) Examiner.]

THIS article is addressed primarily to the small investor—to the man or woman of moderate means who is seeking to improve his or her condition by systematic saving.

In preparing this article, the writer also has in mind the newcomer from overseas Europe, who may be at a loss in this new land how to invest his surplus wages where the principal will be secure beyond peradventure of a doubt, and where his money will earn a liberal interest.

Now Uncle Sam, the father of a family embracing more than 110,000,000 human beings, knit together into one vast economic entity, has provided for each and every member of his great household the soundest, the surest, and the safest investment in the whole wide world. This ideal security is the TREASURY SAVINGS CERTIFICATE.

Behind this piece of paper, engraved with the solemn promise of our government, stands the United States of America, in all its might and majesty, with all the collective wealth of all the inhabitants of this great republic, which, according to the most recent estimate means $300,000,000,000—a sum so inconceivably vast that the human brain reels when contemplating it.

Indeed there is no bond, no security, issued by any other nation today, fit to be mentioned in the same breath with this sacred obligation of the United States, guaranteed by the splendor of our national good faith and honor, backed by wealth incalculably greater than that of any other power on earth.

The United States government makes it very easy for anyone to buy this ideal security. These Treasury Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $100 and $1,000 each, and are sold on a discount basis at $20, $80 and $900, respectively, and they can be purchased at any post-office.

These Certificates mature in five years from the date of issue, and bear 4 1/2 per cent interest compounded semi-annually—that is to say, added to the purchase price of the Certificate.

It is for this reason that for $20 one can buy a Certificate (in itself a United States bond) which is, exchangeable for $25 in cash at the end of five years, without any if, or and, about it, and with all red tape eliminated. The interest at 4 1/2 per cent compounded semi-annually makes it that no one is allowed to hold more than $5,000 maturity value of any one series of these Treasury Savings Certificates. A new series is issued for each calendar year.

This restriction should not preclude a person of moderate means from buying the soundest investment in the world—a Treasury Savings Certificate of the United States of America, and it is the person of moderate means whom Uncle Sam had in view when he thought out this perfect plan for assuring the safety of the little fellow's savings.

To the foreign-born man or woman who has sought this land of freedom for the opportunity it offers to better his or her condition in life, these Treasury Savings Certificates should exercise an irresistible appeal.

In the stern school of the Old World, whence the prospective citizen came, thrifty habits not infrequently were his only heritage. In those lands, where frugality too often has been enforced by rigorous necessity, and the faces of the poor have been ground into the dust of centuries for the support of despotic militarism, government securities have always been a favored investment for savings.

Here in America, where the opportunity is given to every human being to work out his destiny freely and fully, our government has provided for citizens and aliens alike, a form of investment incalculably sounder and safer than any security ever issued by any European government since the world began.

To these future citizens from overseas the writer would say, take your first step in the Americanism by investing your surplus funds earned here in American securities. Of these none is better, none is safer, none is more of income yield, than the TREASURY SAVINGS CERTIFICATE issued by the government of the United States.

DOINGS IN KENTUCKY

Louisville, Ky.—The first conflict between those who are urging Kentucky to move forward with a great stride through issuance of $75,000,000 in bonds to pay for roads and improvements that are needed and those who would mark time and "pay as you go" came this week when Governor W. J. Fields, leader of the "forward looking" element, condemned the action of the State Efficiency in making a supplemental report which is an argument against the bond issue.

"Not a report, but a clever, well-planned deceptive argument against the bond issue bill" were the words in which the Governor expressed his opinion of the Efficiency Commission's work.

The Governor challenged the right of the commission to use their official position to prepare this attack on the bond issue.

The report of the commission took a stand for the "pay as you go" plan and presented arguments to show why bonds should not be issued. One contention was that more roads could be built from current revenues in eight years than in five years with bonds.

The commission is composed of Catesby Spears, of Paris; Thomas O. Turner, of Cadiz; Gabe C. Wharton of Springfield and John Stoll, Lexington. The vote to present this supplemental report to the Governor and the Legislature was over the protest of Turner.

The Governor called attention to the fact that in the campaign both parties pledged themselves to the submission of a bond issue for the roads. He scored the commission as having remained silent until the last hours of the campaign, when the measure is nearing a vote in the Legislature with the apparent hope that the proponents of the bond issue will not have time to combat its arguments.

William Jennings Bryan returned to the scene of his memorable attack on the theory of evolution, made in the Assembly of 1922, when evolution first became a subject for legislation and a bill forbidding its teaching in the schools of the state missed by one vote. Mr. Bryan addressed the Legislature and gave his opinion of those who "link man in blood relationship with animals" with the customary Bryan display of descriptive language. Mr. Bryan also assailed President Harding, whom he described as the "most reactionary" President the nation has ever had.

Governor Fields' long-awaited appointment of the State Highway Commission brought general approval. The names of the four he has selected go to the Senate Democrats for confirmation. The two Democrats were known, the Governor having announced during the campaign that he would name W. C. Montgomery, of Elizabethtown, as Chairman. The appointment of Richard W. Owen, of Owensboro, also has been a certainty. W. C. Hanna, of Shelbyville, former Commissioner of Agriculture, and E. S. Helburn, of Middlesboro, both leading Republicans, represent their party on the commission. The geographical selection is fortunate. Mr. Owen is acquainted with the interests of Western Kentucky, while Mr. Helburn is thoroughly familiar with the road problems of the mountain district. Mr. Hanna, as Commissioner of Agriculture, gained valuable information as to the farmer's requirement. Mr. Montgomery's high qualifications for the position of Chairman were one of the strong arguments.

Establishing a new County is the pleasure of either proposed or carried through at every session of the legislature and the present General Assembly has its new County shaping. It is to be a Democratic County and it is to be named either Fields or Wilson.

Corbin, a railroad center in the mountains, with 11,000 population is to be the county seat and the County is to be made from portions of five present counties in the western part of the Eleventh Congressional District: Whitley, Laurel, Knox, McCreary and Pulaski. McCreary is a recently established county, its history dating back only 15 years. By taking slices from these five, Wilson or Fields county, as the name may prove, will start life with 408 square miles and a population of 22,000, and there are only 29 counties in Kentucky that are larger.

T. B. Culton and Judge John A. Hart, of Corbin, are backing the new county and have been in Frankfort urging its right to existence. One of their strongest claims is that 2,000 Democratic voters could not vote the 1923 election because they were so far distant from the county seat. Corbin came into fame during the railroad strike of 1923 when it developed that it was the neck of the traffic bottle through which passed traffic North and South. When the neck of the bottle became jammed by the strike, the entire country awoke to the importance of Corbin.

Some folks in Burlington claim they have not broken any of their New Year resolutions yet, but they may be among those who never make any.

Republican Convention.

The Republicans of Boone County are requested to meet in mass convention at Burlington, Saturday, February 9th, at one o'clock, for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the District Convention at Covington, and the State Convention at Louisville.

A. R. EDWARDS, Chairman County Committee.

REGULATING BUSINESS

No less an authority than Thomas R. Marshall, former vice-president of the United States, told a convention of insurance men that publicity was the only antidote for middle-class regulatory legislation.

"Recognized the tendency of legislators and the congress to regulate in every possible way, all classes of business."

People are beginning to react unfavorably to it. State and federal governments have meddled in private business so long that they are no longer able to attend to their own.

There are just two kinds of men in the world. One kind is honest and the other kind is dishonest. The latter should be sent to the penitentiary and the former should be permitted to conduct their business unmolested. In this manner, the states and federal government can deal with dishonest business without trying to rule all business regardless of whether it is good or bad.

Mr. Marshall's reference to the insurance business recalls that the state of Wisconsin has gone into the life insurance business on a wholesale scale.

For ten years, the state has had a provision for insuring people, but no one but state employees took it seriously.

"There might not be so much objection, if the State stopped at life insurance. But, if the people don't offer a protest to this kind of state will be peddling milk some day."

It is argued by proponents of the state life insurance scheme that agents' commissions and office rent are saved because the business is done in the state house. Furthermore it is argued, the state's general fund is weakened by the insured.

But did it ever occur to those who are so anxious to put the state and government into business, that the business might be mismanaged? If, such an event, the state's general fund, is made up of money collected as taxes from the people's pockets, whether they hold a state insurance policy, would be drawn on to pay the loss.

THE HOME MARKET

If freight rates are such a big item in the cost of farm produce, it is clearly up to the producers to develop the home market and eliminate the railroad freight charges.

The ideal time for taking the inventory is the latter part of January or the first part of February. Right now is the time to start.

The producer will get better results in the movement to win the support of the people of his own community if he will observe the methods of food concerns that market food products and imitate them.

He will note that cleanliness and attractiveness of the package is one of the salient features, and that every effort is made to please the customer.

He will also note that the large handlers of food products use advertising space freely and bring to the realization of the customer that they have a product that is worth the money.

Although loyalty to the home community should figure in the average buyer's calculations, he is largely governed by like and dislike and his tastes for certain brands of food. The men and women who produce the food that we eat will find a ready market at home if they will take the pains to get it. A little special effort is required, and a study of the needs and wants of the customers.

THE PROBLEMS OF LIVING

A college professor on the Pacific coast told an audience of school teachers that the greatest human problem in the world today is the problem of living together.

But is it such a problem after all? Is it not simple unless we make it complex?

The science of living together, is, after all, not a science at all. It is friendliness. Nothing more.

People who dwell in peace and happiness are friendly people. They make friends by being friends to others.

There is no deep secret about it. Reduced to its simplest terms, living together in peace and harmony is practicing friendliness to everyone, never harboring hatred and never questioning the motives of others.

"Now and then, perhaps, you may find some perverse souls who refuse to permit you to practice the art of friendliness on them."

But in the long run, being friendly will overcome barriers that could not otherwise be scaled.

TAKE FARM INVENTORY NOW.

Lexington, Ky.—Thousands of Ky. farmers will keep complete accounts of their farms for the first time according to a statement made by W. D. Nichols of the Department of Economics, Kentucky College of Agriculture. He believes that more Kentucky farmers are realizing that farming is a business and that it responds to business methods. Keeping of farm records furnishes the only means by which they can study their farm business and find the weak spots in their farming systems.

"A complete farm account," Mr. Nichols continues, "consists of a farm inventory, a record of the acreage and yield of all crops and a record of all farm receipts and expenses. The first step in starting a farm account and the most important record in it is the inventory. This consists of an itemized list of all farm property, opposite each item of which is placed its value. Without the inventory it is impossible for the farmer to determine his profits for the year or what he is actually worth and for the time spent this record will furnish more useful information than any other the farmer can keep."

Detailed inventories should be made of land and buildings, live stock, machinery and equipment and growing crops. Only a few hours, usually two or four on most farms, is required to do this. The figures used in closing one year's account are used in opening the next year's account. It is necessary to take the inventory only once a year. Once started, the inventory should be made at the same time each year.

There are numerous advantages to be gained from the practice of making an annual inventory. It furnishes a time to round up the year's business. If all accounts owed by and due to the farmer are not settled, it is to the interest of all concerned to know the exact amount of each item. It furnishes a good opportunity to call home any tools or equipment loaned to neighbors and gives the farmer a good excuse to ask for payment of overdue accounts or notes. But the greatest advantage is that with this information at hand the farmer can easily find out what he is worth above all indebtedness, and he has something to work with in his efforts to make his business more profitable.

The ideal time for taking the inventory is the latter part of January or the first part of February. Right now is the time to start.

POULTRY MEETING

The Boone County Poultry Association held their second meeting of the year, Tuesday last week and finished plans for the business of the year.

The County Agent gave a short talk on "The Value of Pure Bred Poultry," and discussed methods of handling the poultry work with the Jr. Agriculture Clubs. The Association agreed to abandon the plan used last year and adopt one by which the people supplying the eggs could either pay cash for them or return six pounds of poultry at the fall sale. Under this plan the Club members need not return their goal poultry, but can return other saleable poultry.

Arrangements were made to put out an advertising booklet which will better put the products of the Association before their customers.

Plans were also arranged for the first shipment of 1,000 White Leghorn eggs which went out on Monday Jan. 28th.

WE WERE ALL CREATED ALIKE.

Ray Stannard Baker once asked a question, "what in his opinion, is the greatest problem of the colored man?"

The answer was "Time and opportunity to be educated." But time and opportunity are not the real problem. But time and opportunity are not the real problem. But time and opportunity are not the real problem.

And this is exactly the program of the new southern state-manship. These white southerners are forgetting the discouragement and complexities of the negro problem, forget even their disengagement, and go to work on present problems: the development of education and industry.

Whether we like it or not, the whole nation (indeed the whole world) is tied by unbreakable bonds to its negroes, its Chinamen, its slum-dwellers, its thieves, its murderers, its prostitutes.

We cannot elevate ourselves by driving them back either with hatred or violence or neglect; but only by bringing them forward by service.

The Great Teacher never preached the flat quality of men, social or otherwise. He gave mankind a working principle by means of which, being so different, some white, some black, some yellow, some old, some young, some men, some women, some accomplished, some stupid—mankind could, after all live together in harmony and develop itself to the utmost possibility.

And that principle was the Golden Rule. It is the least sentimental, the most profoundly practical teaching known to men.

We were all created alike and all go to the same end.

As a result of several months of investigation and study by experts of the Post Office Department, Postmaster General New today issued the first definite concise and complete program that has ever been put out by the Department for the mailing, transmission and delivery of newspapers.

This order is most important. It is far-reaching. It gives the same expedition to newspapers as is accorded to first class mail.

The order is the result of painstaking effort on the part of the Post Office inspectors, under the direction of First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett. Carefully worded and minute instructions have been issued to all employees engaged in handling the mails, so that there will be no possibility of misunderstanding the importance of getting newspapers to the reader with a minimum of delay.

The essence of the order is that newspapers shall not be mixed with parcels post at any point on their dispatch from the publishers' offices until their delivery to the addressees. Papers shall be handled by themselves, and kept in constant transit, not being sent to railway terminals to be reworked. In other words, they are to be handled in the same manner as first class mail.

An important feature of the order is that no publication shall be given any less efficient or less expeditious treatment than at present. That means that publications other than newspapers will not suffer one iota from this progressive innovation, made by the Post Office Department.

Another striking feature of the order is the elimination of sacks of mail which are known to the business world as "mixed mail." Sacks of mixed mail some times contain letters, papers, and parcels post, and often times the entire contents were treated as parcels post. This order will prevent a recurrence of that condition.

Another important feature of the order is that postmasters are required to notify publishers in each instance when they do not hit the dispatch which they advertise to; also to notify publishers when they are sending to wrong addresses and to the addresses of deceased persons. Publishers will also be notified when they are putting up their mail in an incorrect manner.

Under the new system, newspapers will be made up in separate sacks plainly labeled with the word "Newspapers." If there are only a few copies of newspapers at the point of dispatch, they will be placed in pouches with first class mail or in separate sacks, even though the sacks are only partially filled.

This order means much to the American public. It is one of the most important and far-reaching steps in postal history. It is for the benefit of those who desire to have their newspapers placed before them at as early a moment as possible. This should keep both the city and rural population in closer and quicker touch with their several fields of activities.

BABY HEALTH TALKS

(By Dr. Juanito McF. Jennings, Assistant Director Bureau of Child Hygiene, State Board of Health of Kentucky.)

One out of every three men who cannot be examined by a board of health are refused admission to army service because of physical defects. Childhood many of these defects could have been prevented or corrected but lack of care resulted in a large number of American boys unfit for war service. In Kentucky 65 out of every 1,000 babies born die during the first year of life. The Bureau of Child Health is endeavoring to lower this high rate and to assist mothers in rearing children who will be physically fit and able to take their places as useful and efficient citizens.

With this object in view Child Health Centers have been permanently established in the following counties: Christian, Webster, Davies, Grayson, Hart, Taylor, Nelson, Shelby, Henry, Mercer, Boyle, Lincoln, Pulaski, Whitley, Knox, Bell, Harlan, Letcher, Pike, Montgomery, Madison, Clark, Woodford, Scott, Kenton, Mason, Fayette, Jefferson, Rockcastle, Muhlenburg, and Fulton.

(Child Health Centers give to mothers the opportunity of a physical examination of children under 6 years. The physician in charge instructs the mothers regarding the health habits of children and the best methods of keeping them well. Children are weighed monthly and mothers are told whether they are growing and gaining as they should. The community nurse advises mothers about the feeding of babies and the preparation of the first foods—if necessary, follow up visits are made to the homes and further instructions are given mothers. After the first visit mothers are anxious to return for the monthly weighing of their children for they soon realize that a steady, progressive gain in weight is the best index they have to good health in a child. Groups of women in each county interest themselves in promoting the establishment of Child Health Centers and give valuable assistance by acting as clerical workers.)

What is YOUR county doing to ward lowering the death rate and helping the mothers rear healthier children?

THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY TOWNS

It has always been said that the country towns produced a more robust type of people physically, and this is true today in the main. Of course, in some of the country towns fail to get all they should have of physical benefit out of the healthful life that is open to them. They may not have suitable sanitation in their homes, they may shut up their dwellings or working places tight in the winter time, they may not have ventilation. Such conditions produce many folks in country towns whose condition is far from good.

Yet if you would take 100 country young people, and line them on one side of the street, and 100 city young folks and place them on the other, there is little doubt that the country crowd would show the better physical condition. They would show better weight, ruddier faces, better muscular development, and they would stand straighter.

Country people spend less time in stuffy rooms, more time out doors. Not so many of them spend their days stooping over desks in offices, but their life is more varied, and calls for more physical activity.

Thus the country towns are a reservoir of health from which the physical vitality of the nation is kept up. If the country towns in any section decline, you would find a decline in the general health of the cities of that section eventually.

Yet the health of country people is not maintained automatically without effort. To some extent the cities are creeping up on them in this respect, partly through the greater effort they are making for playgrounds for young people. The country towns also need playgrounds, so that the young folks shall have abundant opportunity for the healthful out door games through which youth secures its best development.

WHAT GERMANY CAN PAY

The American and other experts appointed by the reparation commission to determine what Germany can pay toward the damage that it did, have now begun work. The possibility of the world in the immediate future depends much on whether there is a willingness to accept the recommendations that these competent experts shall make.

Germany can never possibly pay for the harm it did by starting the war. The buildings and cities and the mines and orchards destroyed are but the mere part of the loss. The harm done was infinite and immeasurable. It extends to crippled and enfeebled soldiers and to the losses by sorrow and death.

But to get money out of a nation they must somehow be given an incentive to pay. If they feel that the more they recover from the war, the more they must pay, they will not do it. Some amount should be fixed that the Germans will really try to pay.

Anyone can get married in ten minutes, but it may take several years to get divorced.

"... those who do not think so deeply, and they were the greater number by a hundred to one."

—Ivanhoe.

Of those who do not think so deeply there are two classes: those who can not think and those who do not want to think.

Not everybody is able to think deeply. We do have mental limitations, though few of us ever study hard enough or think deeply enough to reach them. For some people, however, the mental limits are quickly reached. Such people are variously classified as morons, subnormals and those who cannot "think so deeply."

Those who do not want to think are of two classes: those who are lazy and dislike mental exertion, and those who are afraid to think.

Jonathan Swift expressed the opinion that if people did much thinking they must go mad; and all of us recognize the fact that there are certain ideas that do not bear thinking about. Emerson warned of the risk attendant upon thinking when he wrote: "Be ware when the great God lets loose a thinker on this planet. Then all things are at risk. It is as when a conflagration has broken out in a great city and no man knows what is safe or where it will end. There is not a piece of science but its flank may be turned tomorrow; there is not any literary reputation, not the so-called eternal names of fame, that may not be swayed and condemned. The very hopes of man, the thoughts of his heart, the religion of nations, the manners and morals of mankind are all at the mercy of a new generalization."

And again: "What is the hardest task in the world? To think. I won't put myself in the attitude to look in the eyes an abstract truth, and I cannot. I bleed and wither on this side and that. I seem to know what I meant, what I said, 'No man can see God face to face and live.'"

Before a man can think deeply without danger to his community it is necessary that he should be well informed. Confucius is credited with the statement that thought without learning is perilous, and there is no doubt that much of our present social and economic unrest is due to the thinking of men who were not sufficiently well informed.

When thinking on social and economic problems it is necessary that the thinker should know not only the theoretical truth of his subject, but the psychology of humanity as well.

Flivvers Are All Right, But—

BURLEY POOL HAS 100,285 MEMBERS IN SEVEN STATES

Addition of 5,426 Made Since December 1, With About 12,000 Acres More To Be Marketed Through Co-operation.

Membership in the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association has passed the 100,000 mark set as a goal by the field service some time ago, when the receipt of new contracts since December 1 put the total at 100,285, and an addition of 5,426 members since December 1, from the counties of Kentucky; 403 from Indiana; 556 from Ohio; 183 from Tennessee; 229 from West Virginia; 79 from Missouri; 149 from Virginia; and 11 from other states.

Some of the contracts had no figures in the acreage blank, but the acreage reported on the contracts 5,978 for Kentucky and 2,546 for the other Burley states, a total of 8,524. The field service estimated the number of acres pledged on the contracts in which that item was left blank as sufficient to run the acreage signed considerably above 12,000.

Hardin county, Ky., led in the number of contracts signed, with 309; Adair with second with 270; Breckinridge third with 247; Morgan fourth with 170; Green fifth with 157; Hart sixth with 117; Barren seventh with 118, and Taylor eighth with 103.

Governor W. J. Fields delivered this second message to the General Assembly Monday recommending:

A 30 cents rate on the $100 real estate, a 25 per cent reduction on the present real estate rate of 40 cents. Fines of $100 to $500 and revocation of license for driving motor cars when drunk, first offense, and imprisonment from one to three years for second offense.

Making it a felony to carry a concealed weapon without a license.

Competitive bidding in all purchases of sales by State Departments in excess of $1,000.

Amending statute relating to taxing of gasoline so as to guard against tax dodging.

Employment of consulting engineer and expert accountant to investigate and audit Department of State Roads and Highways, under a $10,000 appropriation for that purpose.

Employment services of experts from the American Prison Association, under the law governing the Board of Charities and Corrections, and the board's administration.

BIG FARMERS AND

BUSINESS MEN'S BANQUET
The Big Farmers and Business Men's banquet will be held at the Liberty Theatre at Lawrenceburg, on February 29th.

Hon. O. E. Bradfute, President of the American Farm Bureau Federation will address this banquet. Mr. Bradfute is a sound, conservative man, who has a national reputation. His address will be of great value to the farmers and business men of the county. Other features and details of the program will be given later.

A charge of seventy-five cents per plate will be made to help pay the expenses of the banquet. Only six hundred can be accommodated. So, it is up to each person who wants a ticket to look after the matter early. Tickets may be secured at the County Agents office at Aurora, and from the officers of the various township Farm Bureaus. Tickets will be on sale by Monday, Feb. 4th.

Ed. Rice still continues quite poor.

BOONE COUNTY BUREAU WILL BECOME ACTIVE.

At a called meeting of the Boone County Farm Bureau, last Monday, plans were discussed for reorganization, that the Bureau might expand and continue its good work.

During the last year, and in the face of many difficulties, the Farm Bureau did $81,939.36 worth of business. This was twice the amount of business transacted in the previous year, and in checking over the books, it was found that comparatively few Boone county farmers are members of the Farm Bureau, and doing business with it. The Farm Bureau has saved thousands of dollars for the farmers of this county and will continue to do so if Boone county people will stick together and fight together, according to Clem Kendall, President of the Farm Bureau.

In a short talk County Agent R. J. Matson explained that the feed problem was only a small one. He spoke of the Farm Bureau part in State Legislation and National Legislation; of how the Farm Bureau has fostered the Burley Tobacco Association, the Cooperative Pure Milk Association, and the Poultry Association. He said, "The Farm Bureau stands for Cooperation."

It saw those local organizations in their infancy, and now they are all successfully under operation. New moves are at hand. Plans are being organized to establish a Cooperative Live Stock Commission Merchant at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards. If the Farm Bureau does not build up a better organization, Boone county will not be represented. It is altogether probable that other cooperative selling moves will come in the near future, among which can be named fruit and poultry products.

Mr. J. L. Kite and Geo. Penn spoke along the same line. Both put special emphasis on Farm Bureau Loyalty, and on the reduction of farm taxes. Mention was made of Union county, Ky., where such a move was successfully put on, resulting in a saving of over 20,000 dollars to their farmers.

After these talks general plans were discussed to make the Farm Bureau serve a greater number of people in the county. The meeting adjourned late to reconvene on Monday, Feb. 4th at 10:30 in the office in Burlington, when plans for the year's business will be decided upon.

Mr. Hays, who for the past two years has been practicing law at Lancaster, has moved to Lexington and is residing in South Broadway Park.

FARM AND HOME MEET ENDS FRIDAY

Lexington, Ky.—The four day sessions of Farm and Home Convention being held here this week at the Kentucky College of Agriculture will be closed Friday with general discussions on the needs for Kentucky agriculture and a rural life.

Talks in the livestock meetings will be given by A. C. Ball, Secretary of the Kentucky Dairy Products Association, Oscar Erf of the Dairy Department of Ohio State University, and J. E. Gibson, U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry. The Farm Building School will consider the location of farm buildings and farm sewage disposal in the morning and in the afternoon tour the Experiment Station farm and the B. F. Wells and E. M. McCullough farms.

Dr. Warren H. Wilson will address the rural life conference for the second time on Friday, dealing with community problems, while Miss Mary E. Sweeney will speak of the challenge of the community to the home, and Mrs. R. E. Tipton, president of the Fayette Community Council, Lexington, will discuss the community organization and its work.

In addition to the speakers mentioned leading experts and scientists of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Experiment Station will deal with some of the principle problems which confront Kentucky farmers at this time, giving demonstrations, lectures and answering questions, livestock, poultry, farm buildings and farm crops.

The Farmer Gets 88 Cents Out of Every Dollar the Packer Receives.

Thomast packing industry ranks first among American industries in value of products sold. The value of the annual production is between four and four and one-half billion dollars.

The Census Bureau report for 1919 shows that $4,246,000,000 worth of packing industry finished products were sold in the year.

Commenting on this fact, Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture says:

"It is worthy of remark that this sum was only 12 1/2 per cent greater than the amount which the packers paid for the live stock."

In other words, $3,775,000,000, or about 88 per cent of the value of the finished products, was paid by the packers for their raw materials, almost wholly live stock.

Competition both in buying live animals and in selling meat products makes it necessary for the national packer to operate on this 12 per cent margin. Out of it he must pay all operating costs, transportation, taxes, interest on borrowed money and a return on the money invested in the business.

There are very few "scofflaws" in Burlington. What is a scofflaw? It is, as we take it, a newly coined word to describe men who drink unlawful liquor. The English language was enriched with the new word to carry a high voice of scorn, for which was awarded a $200 prize, hoping men would give up the habit rather than to bear the name. We say that there are not many "scofflaws" in Burlington. No, it seems that nearly all stills are still and very little "moon" sheds its rays of damnation in these "diggins." But, it may be that the cold weather is not adapted to its distillation.

THE ATTRACTIVE COUNTRY HOME.

Country people can be urged to make their homes more attractive for many reasons. It can be argued that the property thereby becomes more valuable and salable, and the better appearance advertises their business. Much can be said also about the effect upon the owners of possessing an attractive home.

The man who is tired and discouraged by the difficulties of life, is affected by his home conditions. If his home is poorly kept up, he is depressed by this decadent environment. It makes in life, and it takes the heart out of his effort. But if he has taken pains all along to make his home more attractive, outside and in, it has a reenergizing influence over him. He feels that he has accomplished results in the past and will do so again.

As the newspaper man looks over exchanges coming from various parts of the country, he is impressed with the great use that is being made of advertising. The advertising space used in newspapers has greatly increased.

Take the big city dailies, for instance. If you took the newspaper which before the war used to run an average of about 16 pages, the chances are that paper will be running today from 24 pages to 32. The enlargement is not primarily due to the use of more news, though the space given to reading matter has increased. The big share of the increase is due to advertising.

It is interesting also to see how many concerns and individuals there are that are taking big ads of a half page or full page, or two pages, that must be very expensive. The trained eye looks over these notices, and it can guess fairly near what was paid for them. In some papers, of course, it is evident that an unreasonably big discount has been offered to induce some advertiser to make a big spurge. But in the majority of cases, appearances indicate that the newspaper was running its advertisements on a strictly proportionate schedule, in which the interest of both the large and the small advertiser were fairly balanced, and in which cases the big advertiser must pay a high price for his big spurge.

The fact that so many concerns are willing to put up the money for this big display, shows how thoroughly standardized advertising has become, and how it is depended upon for results by those who use it persistently and with judgment. For sales are being made every day through advertising, and by this means a multitude of business men are rising out of small and inferior positions into leadership in the business community.

ONE-FOURTH OF THE FARMER'S ARE BANKRUPT

Senator LaFollette's resolution asking that the Interstate Commerce Commission be directed to reduce freight rates on pre-war basis, sets forth, in concise form, the deplorable condition of farmers in the 15 Western States. The resolution asserts that freight rates on grain and live stock have been increased 47 per cent and rates on grain for export increased 73 per cent. The increased rates apply not only to what the farmer sells but also to what he buys. While the prices of wheat and other grains have decreased to pre-war levels, the freight rate contingency upon levels established when wheat sold at $2.00 per bushel and cotton at 37 cents per pound.

According to the records of the Secretary of Agriculture farm values decreased $13,000,000,000 from Jan. 1, 1920 to March 1, 1922; 108,000 farmers have lost their farms, their foreclosures; 122,000 have lost their property without legal proceedings, and 378,000 retain their property through leniency of creditors only, making a total of 28 per cent of all the farmers of these 15 states who are virtually bankrupt.

The Secretary of Agriculture says that 40 per cent of the farmers of South Dakota are practically bankrupt; 42 per cent of those in Colorado; 50 per cent in North Dakota; 51 per cent in Wyoming and 62 per cent in Montana. During the year 1922 over 2,000,000,000 people moved from farms to cities, and the shortage of adult labor has made child labor necessary.

These are the main points that interest the Western and North-western farmers in national legislation, and may be said to be the real reason for the so-called "radical" political sentiment.

Sheriff Hume and Deputy L. T. Utz were called by telephone Saturday night from Devon where they were informed that a party of negroes had entered the home of H. Midendorf and that they were intoxicated. When they arrived they found one negro man lying on the roadside so drunk that he could not get up and near him was a grip in which was two gallons of moonshine. The two women were also very drunk and it was with difficulty that they were arrested and brought to Burlington where all were lodged in jail, charged with being drunk and driving an automobile.

Peru and the coal men to sell us winter fuel at old-time prices; Invent a tire that can be changed without stopping the flivver; Discover a rug that will soften the hearts of profiteering landlords, or Make a motor car that will dodge pedestrians?

While they are offering cash prizes for peace plans, looney words, &c., &c., why not offer a prize to the man who—

Can find an easy way to keep up the installments on the car; Provide weather that will satisfy everybody;

Can find the coal men to sell us winter fuel at old-time prices; Invent a tire that can be changed without stopping the flivver;

Discover a rug that will soften the hearts of profiteering landlords, or Make a motor car that will dodge pedestrians?

The days are getting noticeably longer.

YOU'RE NOT THE WHOLE CIRCUS.

No single head is large enough to contain all the knowledge in the world. Even those whom you regard as learned and wise and great don't know some things that you know. This may startle you a bit, but it is as true as preaching.

It is in this sense that we say it takes all sorts of people to make a world, and this is the basis of the saying that as the people are, so will be the world in which they live.

Some people imagine that in order to know a thing it must ever be on the tongue, or in mind ready to use. The world is much inclined to call those great who have accomplished something unusual, and never stop to inquire what else they may have done, or what manner of men they are, as "men of letters."

The really great and successful lawyer is not the one who can quote most law and cite the greater number of decisions, although such an one is certain to attract much attention, and most likely to get his name in the papers.

The really great lawyer is one who is well-grounded in the principle of law, understands the methods of applying the same and is conscientious in his work. Having read, understandingly, the opinion of others, he becomes well-grounded not only in the principle of law generally but understands the purposes and the methods by which to secure these purposes.

What sensible woman cares for, or can love a man whose letters are made up mainly of quotations from the writings of others? She would much prefer to have his own words, even though unpoetically joined. It is the man himself that she is interested in. Letters copied from handy letter-writers don't go to the spot like those that are written from the heart out.

In love, as well as in war, it is most essential to know the other fellow, for if you don't he is liable to fool you, and maybe fool you badly.

The fellow who is most resourceful is he who reads, desiring to know, and to understand, and when he learns about a thing, and understands it, he is prepared to use it to his best advantage and to discuss its merits most interestingly and profitably. He is the fellow who can make use of his knowledge.

A WORLD OF HALF-BUILT PEOPLE

The world is full of half-built people. If any one doubts this, let him or her visit a Turkish bath, and note the number of people who are flat in the chest, round in the back, ponderous as to paunch and heavy in the jaw—people with outstanding shoulder blades and flat feet. Out of a thousand people in this country, there could be found scarcely three who have really fine figures. And why is this so? Why are there so few people in this country, in the civilized world, who have bodies that are not a travesty of Him in whose image they are supposed to be created?

The reasons are many, but may be grouped under one phrase—unhygienic and unwholesome conditions of living. Among these conditions may be mentioned dietary errors—food that is excessive in quantity, variety or frequency as to meals, and food taken under improper conditions, either of mind or body.

Another and perhaps the most potent cause in the early employment of children in mills, mines and the sweat-shops, under-fed, half-starved resulting in disease and dwarfed specimens of manhood and womanhood.

And its only excuse is a commercial one—a matter of profit to people who are engaged in cutting each other's commercial throats under the law of competition.

Under a Treasury ruling income-taxpayers are allowed to deduct from gross income for losses incurred not only in the taxpayers business but losses from "fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty," and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. Deductions for losses in sale of residence property, bought without intention of reselling, is not allowed. The same rule applies to an automobile.

If you like to see good pictures and enjoy a good show, don't fail to attend the Burlington and Petersburg Theaters next Friday and Saturday night. Manager Porter has one of the best productions for the stage that has ever been shown. "The Man from Glengarry," by Ralph Corder. Besides the above the comedy "Pat's Patent" will well be worth the price of admission. Don't let anything keep you from seeing this play.

Will S. Norris is practicing what he preaches (improve your stock with better sires) by bringing into Boone county the best Rex Peavine Stallion that could be found. He will be handled by our well known horseman Walter Riddell near Hebron. The sires of this horse are Rex Peavine, by Rex McDonald, by Red Denmark, by Crigger's Denmark, a well known Boone county horse of former years. Dams are Lady Montgomery, by Montgomery Chief, by Bourbon Chief by Harrison Chief.

This is a great opportunity to raise good saddle horses that will continue to be in good demand. Rexy Chief weighs 1200 pounds, 16 hands high and will produce good combined utility and saddle horses, as Rexy has the breeding and individuality.

UNIFORMITY OF DIVORCE

Great differences occur in the divorce law between the various states and the couple that can get a legal separation in one commonwealth may not be able to get it in some other. The result must be to make the general practice conform to the states in which divorce is the easiest. If people desiring to separate, live in a strict state, they will be encouraged to seek residence in a state having lax laws.

If it is wrong to get a divorce in one state for certain causes, the act is not made right just by moving across a state boundary. It would seem good policy for the matter to be thoroughly canvassed by experts with a view to choosing the course that will best protect the interest of the family, and that the result of such a study should be made the statute for the whole country.

UNITET ACTION

It makes a tremendous difference in getting things done, whether people act as a unit or separately. The groups of rural people that years ago gathered around the corner grocery stores and discussed politics, never seemed to influence the country much. The politicians did not pay any great attention to them, because they were not organized.

But you take the same bunch of people, and let them form an organization and put the influence of that association behind any movement, and they gain power. Their voice is accepted in influential circles as the voice of the people. The big power which the farming and rural elements have been getting in politics of late, is due mostly to the fact that at last they have organized. And people must join these organizations to make themselves effective.

Many's the man who sings of his longing for a mansion in the sky, on Sunday, that would be satisfied with a house on Main street, on the installment plan.

THE BURDEN OF PUBLIC DEBT SALE OF FIREARMS INCREASES CRIME

The net debt of the United States is nearly $31,000,000,000 of this $22,525,000,000 is the direct result of war, and nearly one-half of that is because of loans to other nations. State debts seem to have increased 175 per cent, during the past ten years, and now amount to a huge sum. City and county debts are more than $8,000,000,000, an increase of 149 per cent in 10 years, and these are rapidly growing, in most cases tax free in order to facilitate the bond flotations. For every family of five there is $1,118.90 of public debt with an annual interest and sinking fund cost of about $80. When it is considered that over 80 per cent of the people live in rented homes, and have to pay the tax on property that is "passed on," it does not require the services of an expert to figure out where the burden is borne.

But few states have laws prohibiting the indiscriminate sale of firearms, and in most cases the laws are practically a dead letter. Lawmakers are of the opinion that a Federal law prohibiting the manufacture of firearms, except under government contract and license, would be unconstitutional. It appears that the only way to stamp out the general use of concealed weapons and the increasing number of murders is by some such reform law and the bill introduced by Senator Coolidge, of New Mexico, providing for a federal license for the sale of every rifle or cartridge, and every handgun, and every other weapon, is designed to meet the need. It is not only every police officer and officer, but of all law-abiding citizens.

SECRETARY MELLON AND THE DEMOCRATIC TAX REDUCTION PLAN.

Secretary Mellon cannot dispose of the Democratic tax reduction plan by the mere charge that it is political. That is the cheap clapnet of one kind of politics itself. It is an evidence that the Treasury Department so far has not been able to attack the Democratic plan upon economic grounds or the sound principles upon which taxation should be levied. So far Secretary Mellon and the chief propagandists of the so-called Mellon plan have relied upon mere assertion without a single demonstration of their contentions. The Secretary tells the public that if the higher surtax rate is cut from 50 per cent to 25 per cent that it will release large sums of money tied up in the tax exempt securities for investment in industry, but he does not tell either how or why that would happen.

As Senator Coughen, Republican, of Michigan, has stated, the chance of ownership in tax securities would benefit nobody and have no effect whatever upon business.

Secretary Mellon has not stated that industry needs money and can't get it. On the contrary, the facts are that every big industry in the country, largely by reason of the favoritism it receives through the Fordney tariff is either declaring an extra dividend, like the Steel Trust, or adding a hundred million of dollars to its gross income, as the Packing Trust firm of Swift & Co., did for last year.

THE HOME PAPER.

Every country editor who is worthy the name wants to help in every movement for the good of the community. Yet he must draw a line at times between legitimate news and editorial support and advertising which should be paid for. Frequently his attitude is misunderstood. Particularly perplexing to the editor is the matter handed him for printing, which by no stretch of the imagination can be considered to be of benefit to the community, but rather is intended to promote some individual or commercial enterprise. Once in a while even a layman, however, seems to get the point of view of the editor. These lines, by Bob Adams, are called "Bitter-Sweet."

The editor sat in his sanctum, and an angry man was he,
For a fellow had brought a column of stuff and wanted it printed free;
A column of stuff that advertised and boosted his private game,
But he hadn't the heart to loosen up good greenbacks for the same.

And the patient editor said at last, although he seldom swore,
He's be double-danged if he'd be stung as oftentimes before.
"You make me sad, you make me mad, you make me good and weary, I'll print you nothing free, by gad, but a nice obituary."

The editor sat in his sanctum at the end of a perfect day
For six subscribers had brought hard cash their honest dues to pay.
And a man had stopped to praise The News and say with a pleasant smile:
"It ranks with the library, school and church in making the town worth while."

From day to day, in every way, it better grows and better;
The way you've worked for a playground park has made my boy your debtor."

The editor sat in his sanctum, encouraged and elated;
His head was bald and his bunions galled, but he felt appreciated.
Original Saxophone 90 Years Old
Played by Tom Brown from W. L. W.
When Oscar Saxe, a Belgian, invented his musical instrument which is now called a Saxophone, he little thought that ninety years afterward music from it would be played in Cincinnati from W. L. W. broadcasting station and possibly heard through radio, in the town of its creation. Some years ago, Dr. Wagner purchased this instrument from the Norwegian Government and had it in his Omaha home for some time. When Tom Brown, creator of the saxophone band, visited that city, the original saxophone instrument valued at $50,000 was given to him by the doctor. This saxophone is used in every performance given by Tom Brown in the Julian Eltinge-Tom Brown "Black and White Revue of 1924."

When the Tom Brown aggregation played in Cincinnati at the Grand Opera House, they were visitors to the W. L. W. studio of The Crosley Radio Corporation and through the courtesy of Henry Fillmore, leader of the local Syrian Temple Shrine Band, gave a midnight concert. This was the first time that Tom Brown and the original Brown Brothers saxophone sextette ever played for a radio audience and the telegrams and letters which were received were most enthusiastic. One of the most prized telegrams came from Doctor Wagner who presented the original Saxophone to the leader of the band. He heard Tom Brown play a solo on the instrument.

In addition to the saxophone band, Julian Eltinge, famous impersonator of femininity, sang and spoke to his friends throughout the country and received several messages from them.

RADIO TALK ON CHILD HEALTH

Dr. Juanita Mc F. Jennings, Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Hygiene, State Board of Health.

I wish to talk this evening to all those in Kentucky who have an interest in and who love little children, whether they be father or mother, big brothers and sisters or teachers. We know that it takes all that each one of us can contribute in interest and service to give these little people the best chance for spiritual, mental and physical development. We want them to have a better chance in all things than we had. It is the purpose of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health to teach mothers how to take care of little children; also how to take care of themselves before the baby comes into the home so that he will not come into life handicapped because his mother has been neglected. His mother must have the right kind of food and exercise, and there are many other health rules she must obey, if her children are to have strong bodies.

Mothers do not know by instinct how to care for children—therefore many times they do the silliest things. And isn't it pitiful that these little ones, whom they love so dearly, will suffer from the parents' mistakes? Unnecessary digestive upsets come often, from the wrong kind of food, or food given too often or at irregular intervals. Or indigestion may come from playing too much with baby thereby making him nervous. Some mothers let the baby suck his thumb which makes adenoids, irregular teeth and an ugly mouth. Others will put on too many clothes in summer and too few in winter. One mother had an eighteen month's old baby running about the house barefoot in zero weather; he had a bad chest cold and she did not know that the exposure of his feet and legs caused his cough.

Parents want to do the right thing and they don't know how. Please write to us about your children and we will give you the most up-to-date information on the subject of child hygiene.

FARMERS ENCOURAGE GROUP BUYING.

The Farm Labor Union of America is attempting to arrange with local trades unions a system of direct co-operative buying as a means of giving the producer a better market and the consumer a lower price. It is pointed out that a bale of cotton sells for $100, but made into shirts it sells for about $5,000. Best cabbage sells for $7 per ton; cost of freight and icing to Chicago jumps it to $42. The consumer pays $140. The difference, $98, goes to the speculators and dealers, and this seems to apply to most of the farmers' production.

The Farm Labor Union has 3,000,000 and they are backing the Morris-Sinclair bill to create a government marketing and corporation to buy farm products and sell them here and abroad. Most of the farmers of this country are keeping cost systems, and they have discovered the reason why buildings and equipment deteriorate, and the mortgage is foreclosed. It is estimated that a hundred thousand of them will go into bankruptcy this year because it is utterly impossible to meet their obligations.

FOOD PRICES GOING UP

According to an analysis of the food index of the United States Department of Labor, the cost of family food supplies are steadily climbing, now being 51 per cent, above the pre-war level. The highest figures reached during 1921 was 52 per cent, but decreased to 39 per cent. The rise in 1922 was 8.6 per cent, and the continued rise in 1923 was 10 per cent more. New York is highest with 60 per cent. Boston and Washington next with 59 per cent. Baltimore and Chicago 57 per cent. Pittsburgh 56 per cent. Salt Lake City is the lowest with 52 per cent. Eighteen cities had increases over the average and nineteen cities were below average.

In England the cost is 77 per cent above the prices of 1914. In 1921 it stood at 99 per cent, and at one time in 1920 at 169 per cent. The cost of family food in France, Germany, Italy, Poland, Russia, and in fact all European countries, are comparatively higher than in the United States, and that fact has a tendency to increase the costs here, under the law of supply and demand.

THAT POSTOFFICE DEFICIT

The Postmaster General's annual report shows an increase in receipts during 1923, of nearly 10 per cent. An increase in clerical force of about 2.5 per cent. in carrier force of 1.64 per cent. Notwithstanding this increase and saving at the expense of service, the expenditures over revenues amounted to $24,023,041. Whenever the representatives of the taxpayers in Congress have the courage to charge the big magazines a rate sufficient to meet the cost of that transportation to the government, something like $72,000,000 will be saved to the department. At present the postoffice department is distributing for these advertising publications at the expense of the people. And some of them violate the rule in selling their publications below the cost of the white paper. It is a subsidy, pure and simple.

Roup Can Be Prevented by Providing Dry House

Roup can be prevented by keeping the poultry in dry, well ventilated houses and feeding balanced rations. Under such conditions if a case appears the bird should be killed and buried or buried deeply, says a writer in Successful Farming. Treating a case of roup is very discouraging. The bird with roup is suffering extreme prostration and the discharge from the disease have a repulsive odor. This odor is the factor that determines whether the hen has roup or a simple cold.

If a hen has a cold it is only a few steps to a case of roup. Isolate hens with running eyes and treat them with one of the coal tar disinfectants or a commercial roup remedy. Place permanganate of potash in the drinking water to keep the disease from spreading. Color the water a deep red. Never return a bird with a cold to the flock until she is thoroughly cured and looks like a healthy, vigorous specimen.

We know of one case where a hen was treated for roup and then liberated before a cure had resulted. In about a week, eight other hens in the flock were sick with the disease, and after another week of fussy unpleasant doctoring, all of the sick hens had to be killed to protect the remainder of the flock.

A hen which has had a severe cold should be banded so she will not be included in the breeding pens the next year. When the disease has progressed until it results in roup the bird is weakened and more subject to a repetition of the disease. This trouble is so serious when once started that the owner of a good flock of poultry must not hesitate to sacrifice the best-looking hen in the flock if she contracts the disease. It is necessary to protect the balance of the flock and prevent a serious financial loss.

Co-Operative Marketing of Eggs Is Profitable

The farm poultry flock has been made a source of cash income as well as for food for the family by many farm women who have learned from their agricultural extension agents the best methods of poultry management and preparation of products for market. The experience of the women of Fairhaven (Ga.) community, is typical of the work in many states. These farm women, desiring to improve the earnings of their flocks, brought eggs to the weekly meeting of the extension club, where the home-demonstration agent showed them how to grade and pack properly for shipment. This was continued each week until the members were able to do the work themselves. They then organized to ship their eggs co-operatively, secured as customer a grocery store in a nearby city, and according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, have been carrying on a satisfactory business for more than a year.

New co-operative egg marketing associations organized in 1922, according to reports, handled 400,000 dozen eggs; in 1921 some 400 new organizations handled about 200,000 dozen eggs.

All Hens Show Decided Preference for Wheat

A recent test at one of the state experiment stations provided certain amounts of various feeds for the hens, and what they left was carefully weighed back in an effort to see which feed the hens preferred naturally. Almost all the hens showed a decided preference for wheat, which is generally used as a poultry feed. Kaffir next in popularity, followed by corn and cornmeal, but oats, bran and sunflower seeds did not prove very popular. Alfalfa leaves were also passed by pretty generally.

A similar test showed that the use of either beef scrap or sour milk makes the hens record at least twice as good as though she were fed no animal feed whatever, and that sour milk is slightly better than beef scrap for this purpose, in addition to being cheaper and easier to get on most farms.

Proper Care of Poultry Is Apparent in Autumn

Now is a time when the good care of poultry shows up. The flocks which have been underfed through the summer are not ready for winter laying. The pullets which have had a balanced ration have developed plenty of vigor. The poultry keeper who has neglected his flock cannot hope to make up for lost time. The best of rations will help to improve the neglected flock, but they will never equal the birds that have made a rapid normal growth from the start.

Dispose of All Fowls Weak and Lacking Vigor

Call all hens that are sick, weak, inactive, lacking in vigor, poor eaters, with shrunken, hard, dull or whitish-colored comb; small spread or distance between rear end of keel and pelvic bones; full, firm, or hard abdomen; and those that have molted or begun to molt in August or September. In breeds having yellow legs and skin the discarded hens should also show yellow or medium-yellow legs and yellow beaks and vents.

The Kitchen Cabinet

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

Cook one-half cupful of celery, one half cupful of cabbage and one-third cupful of carrot, cut into small pieces, and two onions, thinly sliced, in one-third of a cupful of butter ten minutes, stirring constantly. Add three-fourths of a cupful of stale bread-crumbs and one quart of boiling water, cook until the vegetables are soft. Add one pint of hot milk and two tablespoonsful of chopped parsley. This makes a good vegetable soup.

Smothered Round Steak—Try out three slices of fat pork, add one sliced onion and cook until the onion is brown. Add a two-pound slice of steak, sear on both sides. Add one and one-half cupfuls of cold water, bring to the boiling point, add salt and pepper and simmer until the meat is tender. Remove the steak and strain the stock; there should be a cupful—this is used to make the gravy.

Steamed Ginger Pudding—Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar, one egg, well beaten. Mix and sift two and one-fourth cupfuls of flour, three tablespoonsful of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of ginger; add alternately with one cupful of milk to the first mixture. Turn into buttered mold and steam for two hours. Serve with any desired sauce.

Squash Pudding—Mix one-half cupful of sugar, one and one-fourth teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, add two and one-fourth cupfuls of steamed, strained squash, the yolks of two eggs, slightly beaten, and two and one-fourth cupfuls of hot milk; then add the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff. Turn into a buttered mold or pudding dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Serve hot or cold.

Colonial Cabbage—This is a most popular method of serving cabbage. Shred a hard head of cabbage, drop into cold water and let stand to crisp. Drain well and add sweet cream, using enough to moisten the cabbage well, a few tablespoonsful of sugar and just enough vinegar to give zest to the dressing.

LIVESTOCK NOT MONEYBAGS FEATURED IN BANK STATEMENT

"We bank on the cow, the sow, the ewe, and the hen."

The First National Bank of Petersburg, N. Dak., has this slogan on its unique bank statement recently issued.

Pictures of cows, sheep, and swine rather than moneybags are the decorations used. On the same page with a statement of the bank's financial condition is one of the agricultural status of the community.

The report points with pride to the improved livestock and diversified nature of the farming in the district. The 6,000 breeding ewes with purebred rams at the head of every flock, the 80 purebred bulls, 100 or more registered cows besides a great number of high-grade females, the large acreage of Grimm alfalfa, the $51,000 worth of produce shipped out during the past year, and the activities of the Petersburg Livestock Shipping Association which handled 30 cars of livestock last year.

The officials of the bank have been active in cooperating with the United States Department of Agriculture in encouraging the use of purebred sires and in general livestock improvement.

MAPLE-SUGAR MAKERS, DO YOUR TAPPING EARLY.

Makers of maple sugar have lost half and even more of their crops many seasons by not being prepared for the first run, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is a good policy to tap early in the season, not only in order to obtain the earlier runs of sap but also because these early runs are generally the sweetest and therefore the best sugar producers.

All sugar makers are familiar with "sugar weather." In general, the season is ready to open during the middle or last part of February in the southern sections and later in the northern ones, when the daps are becoming warm, the temperature going above 32 degrees F., and the nights are still frosty. If the days are very bright, warm, and sunny the sap starts with a rush, but soon slackens. A high wind, warm spell, or a heavy freeze checks the flow, but the return of seasonable weather causes it to start again.

Records of opening and closing dates kept in an Ohio sugar camp show the opening season as early as February 12 in 1891 and 1908. The latest opening date recorded was March 27 in 1885. The number of days of flow varied from 9 to 50, the average being about 30 days.

White (Irish) Potato Crop

1923 With Comparisons

According to revised estimate of December 17, 1923, the potato crop of this year was 412,000,000 bushels. In proportion to population the crop was about 10 per cent smaller than in 1922, 10 per cent larger than in 1921, and about the same as the average of the last twelve years. In New York and in New England the crop was larger than last year and also larger than usual. In Minnesota, the Dakotas, Colorado and Idaho the crop was smaller than last year but larger than usual, notwithstanding sharp reduction in the acreage planted. In New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Wisconsin and the Pacific Coast states the crop was less than that of last year and less than the amount usually grown.

Of the potatoes produced this year in the 19 surplus late potato states about 64 per cent would grade as U. S. No. 1 or the equivalent late grade, according to reports received from growers and shippers. Last year the average for the same states was 60 per cent. The quality of this year's crop is particularly good in New England and New York and is some of the Rocky Mountain Pacific Coast States.

In the late potato states which do not ordinarily raise enough for their own needs, the percentage of their own needs, the percentage of this year's crop that would grade as No. 1 is reported as 55, compared with 56 last year, and the percentage of seconds as 31 compared with 28 last year.

ELECTRIC VALUES

Are you getting your money's worth of electricity for the bill which you pay each month? Many of us are acquainted with bulb values, and a considerable saving can be effected if the lighting is studied carefully.

Ordinarily the electrician will install 50-watt lamps throughout your home. For rooms where a bright light is essential—such as kitchen, bathroom and cellar—the 50-watt bulb is an economy. But if you are using your bulbs beneath a parchment or in your hallways and living room, a 15 or 20-watt lamp will be sufficient. It will burn less electricity and will be just as attractive. There are many number of new bulbs on the market just now. Those small, frosted ones are excellent for side lights where the bulb shows. And it is well to consider the more expensive variety for this use. Where a lamp shade covers the bulb, the ones of plain glass should be used. Do you know that you are wasting electricity when your bulbs grow dim and you continue to use them. The electric power is being consumed without giving the desired light.

TUBERCULOSIS WORK GOES FORWARD.

That the eradication of tuberculosis among cattle herds is going on at a greater rate than ever before is shown by the figures compiled for the past fiscal year by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Five States tested more than 200,000 head of cattle, Wisconsin leading with approximately 281,000, New York with 253,000, Missouri with 219,000, and Iowa with 214,000.

Leaders in the eradication work believe that it will be necessary to test all cattle in the country before any assurance is possible that the disease can be controlled and eventually eradicated. Investigations indicate that one out of every nine farm premises in the United States harbors one or more tuberculosis animals. The lowest record for any State was 1 per cent or one farm in a hundred, while the highest State percentage was 47.

Wm. L. Stephens will have a sale of personal property at his residence on Middle creek, Saturday, Feb. 9th, beginning at 12 o'clock. See ad. in this issue.

Marvin Adams of Bardtown, Ky., has been elected permanent all-time Alumni Secretary of Georgetown College and will take charge of his work May 1.

Some time ago the trustees of the College met with prominent alumni and decided that for the expansion of the institution a full time alumni secretary was necessary and authorized a committee of the Alumni to appoint some one to take charge of the work of organizing the alumni of the school on a scientific basis.

The committee held several meetings and finally elected the position to Marvin Adams, a graduate of the College in the class of 1922. The offer was made and Mr. Adams accepted, to begin his active work on May 1.

Soon after his acceptance Mr. Adams stated that he was enthusiastic over the prospects of his work and looked forward with interest to the time when he could enter upon his duties. He stated that his first work would be to revise the records now in possession of the school relative to the graduates and former students and that as soon as possible he would take the field for active work or organization. Georgetown Clubs will be organized in every portion of the state and adjoining states, and following such organization the Clubs will be kept informed about the progress of the work of the school and will be used in furthering the plans of the College. Mr. Adams will be an acceptable appointment to the many alumni of the school who know him and admire the work he has already accomplished.

Edgar Hensley is able to be up and around after two weeks' illness.

F. H. Rouse after being confined to the house for four weeks, is able to be out again.

Ed. Hawes, of Covington, spent Saturday night and Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Martha Hawes.

Mrs. Allie Parsons, of Milan, Indiana, has been the guest of Mrs. A. B. Sandford, several days.

Mrs. Agness Clore, Edward Rice and Jack Eddins, who have been quite sick for some time, are all improving.

The many friends of Mrs. Mary Goodridge will be glad to hear that she is convalescing after a two week's severe illness.

We had a little of all kinds of weather Monday—sunshine, rain, hail, thunder and lightning. Some claim that the backbone of winter is broken.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor attended a meeting of the State Poultry Association at Lexington, last week. She was a delegate from the Boone Co. Poultry Association.

Services will be held at the Presbyterian church Union, Ky., next Sunday morning at 11 and evening at 7. Preaching by Rev. Smith, of Louisville, Ky. You are requested to be present.

J. A. Riddell, of Hebron neighborhood, was in attendance at court Monday. He has almost reached the four-score mark and goes around like a boy of sixteen. Mr. Riddell has just returned from a visit of two weeks with his sister in Illinois.

A public pruning demonstration will be held at L. T. Utz's yard in Burlington, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 10th, at 2 o'clock. County Agt. Matson has secured the services of an expert to do this work for the benefit of those who will make it convenient to attend.

Fred Heil, of Point Pleasant neighborhood, gathered from his flock of 190 hens during the month of January, 2082 eggs, which is an average of nearly 11 eggs per hen. One per consisting of 98 Rhode Island Reds laid 1275 eggs, an average of 13 per hen. This is a record that is hard to beat.

B. T. Kelly and family have moved from the farm to their new bungalow in Maple Grove sub-division, and Mr. Claud Greenup and family have moved to Mr. Kelly's farm, and A. L. Nichols and family who have been living in Burlington have moved back to their farm vacated by Mr. Greenup.

RED CROSS NEWS.

Incomplete returns from the seventh annual Roll Call show an enrollment of 2,600,867.

Announcement has not yet been made as to the person succeeding Mrs. White as Field Representative.

The Red Cross Nutrition course has been adopted by the Massachusetts Girl Scouts.

A collection of 800 drawings made by Japanese school children has been sent the American Junior Red Cross by the Japan Society of America.

Campbell county has recently started organizing a Junior Red Cross.

The breadth of the Xmas greetings sent out by the Chapters has just been measured. It starts at Noorvik, north of the Arctic Circle in Alaska and ends at the Panama Canal. That Santa Claus can pop out of a crotonne bag to amuse and comfort a lonely soldier is proved.

Modern Woodmen.

J. H. Latham, District Deputy Modern Woodmen of America, Covington Ky., and Miss Nell DeHart of Louisville, were in Boone county Wednesday and Thursday of last week, in the interest of the Modern Woodmen, and the Royal Neighbors, the auxiliary of the Modern Woodman.

The following counties have been added to the Twelfth District: Robertson, Pendleton, Grant and Bracken.

Patriarch Camp No. 12004 initiated Samuel Ryle into the mysteries of Woodcraft last week.

Patriarch Camp is preparing to have a big celebration and "feed" on their anniversary about the middle of March. The Camp will be one year old at that time. Full particulars will appear later.

John J. Howe Commonwealth's Attorney from the Fifteenth Judicial District announces his candidacy for United States Senator from Kentucky subject to the action of the Democratic party in the Primary election to be held August 2, 1924. As announced in a special dispatch from Carrollton, Ky., and in addition to a formal statement published in the Carrollton Democrat of February 2, Mr. Howe takes the people and press of the State into his confidence and frankly discusses what he deems as paramount for the success of the Democratic party.

Clifford Sutton, formerly of Bellevue, but now a resident of Cincinnati, was in Burlington for a short time last Saturday morning, enroute to see his aged mother, Mrs. Jane Sutton, who has been quite ill at her home near McVie. While in town he paid our office a pleasant call and renewed his subscription to the Recorder. He still enjoys the news from the land of his employment of wof wof in the land of his boyhood days. Cliff is in the employ of the American Express Co., with a run between Cincinnati and Chicago, a position he has held for many years. It is needless to say that he is making a success.

One of our old bachelor friends called in one evening last week, and upon being asked if he knew any news, he said "rope," only I thought I was going to be held up as I came up the street a while ago. Knowing there were no bachelors in Burlington we asked him to relate his experience when he gave us the following: "As I was coming up the street in high I noticed two ladies—an old maid and a widow, standing on the corner, I went into low, thinking that I might catch an ear full as I passed. I heard the following—I would propose, if I just dared, but when I gave a chance, why I'm two danged badly scared. Knowing this was Lady Year I threw into high and motored on."

The stock of Oscar Underwood of Alabama has risen somewhat since the Democrats have decided to hold their national convention in New York City. New York is "enemy territory" to the friends of William McAdoo, and the decision of the National Committee has resulted in a speeding up of their plans to get the nomination for the former Secretary of the Treasury. Bryan's "nomination" of a Florida college professor for the Presidency caused little more than a faint ripple on the political waters here.

It has become difficult for the President of the Senate to assemble enough of the members on the floor at one time to get a quorum for the transaction of business. Everyone is busily engaged in some kind of an investigation. Never before in history have so many things been subjected to senatorial scrutiny at the same time. It is estimated that these official inquiries will cost well over a million dollars.

The following marriage licenses were issued by the County Clerk, this week: Elijah Horton and Essie Portwood; Alvin Franks and Goldie Maxwell.

BUSINESS ON THE FARM.

The Illinois Grange recommends that farmers advertise their products as one method of solving "farm problems."

The telephone and the classified advertising pages of newspapers used with discretion and same faith and understanding which business men display in advertising their products could be of inestimable value to farmers who had courage to use them.

Why should a farmer not utilize modern selling methods in disposing of his products direct to consumers? The automobile makes delivery of farm gates profitable and rapid. Business methods will do more than political methods to solve the farmers' problems and the Illinois Grange is to be commended for its progressive action.

JAMES A. DUNCAN.

James A. Duncan, age 71 years one of the county's well known and highly respected citizens, died at the home of B. F. Jarrell, near Bullittsville, with whom he had been making his home for several years, Monday afternoon, Feb. 4th, 1924, after an illness of several years.

J. A. Duncan was born in Boone county, March 8th, 1853, and was a son of J. W. Duncan, who for many years was Circuit Court Clerk of this county. He was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Gaines, who preceded him to the grave many years ago. To this union one daughter was born—Mrs. V. W. Gaines, of Covington. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. R. A. Brady, of this place, and two half brothers, Dr. E. W. Duncan, of Walton, and John R. Duncan of Cincinnati.

"Jim" as he was familiarly called was a splendid man and citizen, and to know him was to like him. He followed farming most of his life. Until 1901 he was elected to the office of Circuit Clerk, which position he filled for a few years, and on account of failing health resigned and returned to the farm.

James A. Duncan was a gentleman of the truest type, honest, upright and respected for his high moral character. When the announcement was made Monday evening that he had passed to that other and better world, it was received with universal sorrow by his many friends in Burlington and throughout the county. We say that a good citizen has gone to his reward, and as we chronicle this sad event and in our feeble way try to pay tribute to this good man, we find that we are lacking in words which will in any degree express our high regard for this splendid character which we knew all our life.

The remains were taken to Bullittsburg cemetery Wednesday at 11 o'clock, and after a short service at the grave, conducted by Rev. Campbell, were laid to rest by the side of his wife.

FRANCESVILLE.

Fred Reimann and family recently moved to North Bend.

Miss Amanda Koons hurt one of her hands recently by letting a pole fall on it.

Miss Laura Katherine Evans and Mrs. R. S. Wilson are on the sick list this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Aylor were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kilgour, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Riddle, Miss Rhoda Eggleston and Otto Muntz spent Sunday at W. H. Eggleston's.

Misses Amanda Koons and Sadie Riemen entertained Rev. O. J. Chastain and Miss Katherine Estes Sunday.

Mr. Jerry Estes and Mrs. W. H. Eggleston and son Edward attended the funeral of Mr. Estes sister, Mrs. Sallie Rudisell at Ardyston, one day last week.

Mrs. Chas. Muntz was called to Westwood last week by the death of her mother, Mrs. Abe Moore. Mr. and Mrs. Moore lived in this county years ago and had many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Baker and little son Roy Lee, of Oakley, spent Saturday night and Sunday with relatives here and attended church at Sand Run Sunday morning.

Carroll Lee Aylor, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Aylor, won third prize in a Beter Babies Contest recently conducted by the Ohio Farmer. Carroll Lee has quite a health record, having captured three prizes before this one.

In the Boone county court will be probated as follows: Cynthia Mason, W. W. Evans, W. C. Mosley.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Forecasting A Tremendous Spring Demand

739,626

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.

There will be a demonstration of the best methods of pruning grapes to be held at the home of Deputy Sheriff L. T. Utz, at Burlington, on Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The demonstration will be put on by the County Agent. He will not only show how to trim the vines but will tell how to control disease thru pruning.

W. W. Magill, Extension Pomologist from the Experiment Station, Lexington, will spend the 5th and 6th of March with our County Agent. At that time meetings will be held at Burlington, Hebron, Rabbit Hash and Verona, where demonstrations of pruning, spraying and fertilization of fruit trees will be put on. All those who are interested in better orchard practices and better fruit, should arrange to attend one of these meetings. The place of the meetings will be announced later.

At the monthly meeting of the Directors of the Boone County Farm Bureau held at the Burlington office last Monday, plans were laid for a big year's work, that will be of value to all members.

More than fifty members were present at the meeting, and voted to put on a membership drive to make the organization stronger and better able to cope with its problems. Lengthy talks were given by J. B. Cloud, Hebron and R. J. Matson, County Agent, both telling of what the Farm Bureau had done in the past and what it could do in the future.

Special attention will be put on the reduction of farm taxes this year. A similar move as the one planned by the local Farm Bureau, was put on in Union county, Ky., last year and resulted in the saving of over 20,000 in taxes to the farmers of that county. "If the people of Boone county will stick together an equal or even greater saving could be had," according to J. L. Kite who explained the program as put on in that county.

William Arnold was elected as a director from the Petersburg and Bellevue precincts for this year.

Tailorsport.

Preaching service and S. S. every Sunday.

Mrs. Anna Goodridge has been visiting relatives here the past week. A meeting of the Mother's Club was held at the school house Friday afternoon.

The Mother's Club expects to purchase a piano for the school in the near future. During the last month school attendance has fallen off considerably owing to the whooping cough. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sprague and sons spent Sunday with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Chambers of Pike Hill.

The order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring railroads to issue interchangeable tickets under the Act of 1922, is the latest decision of the Supreme Court. The court's decision was based on the statement that hearings must first be held.

Discussing the question of reducing freight rates, Senator Capper, of Kansas, produced records showing that the income of all roads in 1925 exceeded $6,500,000,000. The largest earnings in their history. The total profits would pay a dividend of 10 per cent on the aggregate capital stock of all railroads in the U. S.

The completed tax revision bill which the committee places before the House next month for passage will be a compromise between the Republican and Democratic programs. The big fact that stands out above all else, however, is that taxes are going to be reduced—everyone agrees to that, though the amount and exact form of the reductions are still in doubt.

Nothing short of a miracle will bring the Mellon tax reduction plan out of the House Ways and Means Committee in the exact form it was sent to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury—and this in face of the repeated warning from the White House that President Coolidge will not tolerate any changes in the reduction plan approved by the Administration.

In 1925 farmers planted 341,000 acres of the 14 principal crops, according to the Crop Reporting Board of the United States Department of Agriculture. This was an increase of 7,000 acres over 1924. The production of the 14 crops is estimated to aggregate $1,500,000,000 tons, or about the same as in 1922 and 11,000,000 tons larger than the 10-year average.

Just about the time the United States entered the World War, several of the greatest naval authorities in this country and Europe testified that our coast defenses at Panama were so complete that no enemy including England could approach within 20 miles without committing suicide. Now we are told as a result of a sham battle that we are at the mercy of a foe, and greater guns are needed.

Senator Cousins, of Michigan, charged on the floor of the Senate that "more dishonest misstatements, if not absolute falsehoods, have been handed out at the Treasury Department for the purpose of misleading the public, than were ever issued by a public department in my recollection." That's a very sweeping charge from a responsible source, and should not be passed unchallenged.

Judge Gary says that abolishing the 12-hour work day has increased the cost of production 10 per cent. He did not say whether the 10 per cent had been passed on to the consumer, but as that is the rule it is taken for granted. Another side of the question is illustrated in the fact that in Youngstown, Ohio, bank deposits show an increase of $10,000,000 during the past year, and the manufacturers have but little trouble in obtaining all the labor necessary.

Over 100 quarts of canned vegetables are in the pantry of a Washington County, R. I., farm family as a result of the boys and girls joining the gardening and canning clubs which the county extension agent organized in their community last year. The two boys, according to reports, to the United States Department of Agriculture, raised enough vegetables to supply the family the entire summer and to provide a surplus from which the three girls canned the winter's stock.

Believing that a curb should be put upon the establishment of small high schools in communities too small to maintain them properly, Virginia's State department of education, with the cooperation of the United States Bureau of Education, is making a study of high schools in two counties. From the result of this study it is expected to develop a policy favoring the establishment of schools maintained by counties rather than by districts. This should bring about larger and better schools in the opinion of the Virginia authorities.

"Prices of dairy products did not suffer as much from the drastic deflation following the post-war period as did other farm products," says the United States Department of Agriculture. Butter, cheese, and milk have sold at prices remunerative to farmers. Butter is now higher than the general price level. Cheap feed in western butter districts, and high prices and some curtailment of production in milk districts, have enabled dairy farmers to weather the storm with less adversity than farmers producing commodities a part of which must be exported. Poultry and eggs have continued on a fairly profitable basis.

Claimed that church services are not properly attended, but no such complaint is made about the church suppers.

THE WORLD'S COTTON INDUSTRY.

The British Cotton-Growing Association was founded in 1902 for the express purpose of fostering cotton-growing within the Empire, and presents an interesting report of the progress made to become independent of American cotton, for it is believed the day is at hand when America will not only consume all the cotton she grows but import large quantities from Egypt. The report says the Sudan district promises to yield 150,000 bales. In the Sudan the native cultivator receives 40 per cent, the government which supplies the land and water gets 30 per cent, and the capitalist, the Sudan Plantations Syndicate, which finances, manages, supervises cultivation and gives the crop gets 25 per cent. Uganda now produces about 10,000 bales of good grade, and this may be increased to one billion. In other parts of South Africa the yield is steadily increasing. India produces 4,500,000 bales. Australia has 100,000 acres under cultivation, and the British West Indies produced 4,500 bales of the famous Sea Island Cotton.

Brazil, too, has millions of acres well adapted for the growth of cotton, and the government is encouraging it in various ways. The rapid expansion of textile manufacturing plants has absorbed nearly all the native cotton and it is the purpose of the government to more than double the acreage.

W. J. Fields appointed Mrs. Pearl Hindman Harris, Cattlettsburg, Ky., to succeed M. E. Ligon, Seventh Appellate district. Prof. R. A. Edwards member of the faculty of Eastern Normal School, to succeed H. L. Tompkins, Prof. C. Ford, member of the faculty of Western Normal School, to succeed A. L. Crabbe, as members of the State Text Book Commission.

The commission meets Thursday, February, 7th, Prof. McHenry Rhoads, Supt., of Public Instruction and Secretary of the commission, announced at the same time.

The Senate passed three bills as follows:

Senate Bill No. 55 passed, 36 to 0, introduced by Senator William Duffy, Louisville, to submit a bond issue of not to exceed $1,000,000 for the benefit of University of Louisville; Senate Bill No. 44, passed, 34 to 0, introduced by Senator H. M. Cline, Whitley City, providing that fines and forfeitures in fifth-class cities go to the city treasury instead of to the state; Senate Bill No. 3 passed, 25 to 2, introduced by Senator Newton Bright, Eminence, making fees of licensing embalmers $25.

A heated discussion preceded the tabling, 23 to 15, of Senate Bill No. 29, introduced by J. Forest Porter, Webster county, which would make it unlawful to sell, expose for sale, give away or give as a prize or reward a toy pistol or other device for exploding caps or wafers containing fulminate or other explosives.

Governor Fields sent the appointment of Dr. V. A. Stille, Benton, to be a member of the State Board of Health to succeed the late Dr. D. W. Richmond, and the appointment was confirmed, 28 to 1.

William G. McAdoo will be invited to address the General Assembly, according to a joint resolution adopted by the Senate.

Less livestock on Kentucky farms and lower values, compared to Jan. 1923, are shown in the annual Jan. livestock report for Kentucky issued here today by the Kentucky office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, division of crop and livestock estimates. The value of livestock on Kentucky farms on Jan. 1, 1924, is estimated to be approximately $51,340,000 compared to $94,207,000 a year ago, $91,493,000 two years ago, and $127,369,000 Jan. 1, 1921. This is a decrease of $12,867,000 or about 13.7 per cent in the total value of Kentucky farmers' livestock since Jan. 1, 1923. The decrease in the total value during the last year is due to decreases in prices and in numbers of all kinds of livestock in the state except sheep, which have increased both in numbers and an average value per head since Jan. 1, 1923.

In Kentucky milk cows show a decrease of not quite 1 per cent in numbers since Jan. 1, 1923; other cattle not quite 7 per cent decrease; swine of all ages nearly 8 per cent decrease.

HOC LOSS BIG FROM TUBERCULOSIS

Of the 48,000 hogs slaughtered under Federal inspection last fiscal year about 15 per cent showed tuberculosis infection to some extent. This entails a large food and monetary loss which can be prevented by using proper methods of tuberculosis eradication and management.

Tuberculosis among other farm animals is recognized as a dangerous source of infection for hogs; leading packers are now paying 10 cents per hundredweight additional for hogs originating in counties free or nearly free from bovine tuberculosis.

The United States Department of Agriculture has bulletins for free distribution which give detailed information on the prevention and control of tuberculosis.

Westminster Hall is the second largest building in the world.

Don't cough! cough! cough!

That education spreads the material and mechanical aids and adjuncts to civilization increase and improve is obvious to the most unassuming. Every increase of transportation has spread education, because it has increased the need for education. Every new invention which largely affects civilization increases both the need for education and the means for obtaining it.

A man of a century ago, could he come to life, would find himself at a loss, even were he well educated according to the standards of his time. He could not compete nor keep up with those to whom the telephone, electric light, railroad train, S-ray, writing and calculating machine, trolley, automobile air ship, submarine and telegraph are matters of common daily knowledge.

Now comes the newest wonder, radio, to add its quota to education. And he would be a wise man indeed, who would be willing to venture how far radio will go in the spread of education. Unquestionably the broad casting station and the receiving set are yet in their infancy, yet their use is already widespread. And there is a constantly increasing demand for something else than mere amusement. Concerts, please, jazz bands provide music for home dancing, but the serious lecture, the course in home economics, the speech on thrift and banking, the reading from great books, are all increasingly popular, according to reports from the great broadcasting stations.

FAKE STOCK SWINDLERS

The "get-rich-quick" desire of the human race makes gamblers or crooks of most of us. We live by example. Here and there some marks make a good guess on the wheel of fortune, and the street and the market are full of them. But the more they are, the more they are. Some "sucker" at the other end. Its a gambling game "within the law." If there were no "suckers" there would be no game—or at least very little of it. But the number of the gullible continues to increase to such an extent that, according to official records, the gullible public has been gold bricked of more than $500,000,000 by fake stock swindlers outside of the big "exchanges"—and a good deal of this seems to be "within the law." In fact that seems to be the only difference between picking pockets or robbing banks—and floating worthless stock securities on confiding and over-anxious public. The law prohibits one but fails to reach the other. The whole legal aspect seems to hinge on the question of where or how to draw a line—to distinguish between swindlers and swindlers to protect the gentleman's game and prohibit the "rough stuff." As the matter now stands no federal action is probable unless the people desire to contribute to the horde of sharpers there is but one remedy—don't monkey with the buzz-saw.

Here's a new argument in favor of light wines and beers. It is inconceivable that the depreciation of the French franc is due to our 18th Amendment because this market for their wines has been destroyed. The author of this statement contends that the people of the United States should be permitted to drink French wines and this help France establish foreign credits and rehabilitate the franc. We are now paying several millions per year in taxes to help France.

Secretary Mellon, admittedly one of the greatest financiers of this or any other nation, recently wrote a little booklet called "Success" to boost the government's thrift week campaign. He advises: "Never buy stock of mines you know nothing about." "If you buy property, buy near home." "Look with suspicion on offers with special inducements in cash discounts or stock bonuses." "Stock in companies being organized on the success of others rarely turn out well." And yet there are thousands of "wise guys" who think they know better than Mr. Mellon, and back their opinions by contributing to the sharks to the tune of half a billion per year.

There are now in the United States according to a statement by the Department of Agriculture, more than 33,000 herds of cattle fully accredited by the government as being free of tuberculosis. Indiana has the largest number of these herds, 4,100. Wisconsin stands next with 3,967, and Minnesota third with 3,975.

THE CASE FOR THE ANTIS

The Post does not propose to go into any detail in answering the argument presented at Frankfort by Judge Thurman and others in opposition to the submission of the $75,000,000 bond issue.

The truth is that, while many of the arguments thus presented should be given due consideration by the people at the referendum next November, hardly any of them affect the only issue now before the Legislature. The question now is, shall the people be permitted to vote upon this concrete plan for public improvement? The objectors at Frankfort would have the Legislature vote to the people the right to vote, although both of the political parties solemnly promised the people that they would be extended that opportunity.

Among those engaged in the demonstration at Frankfort against the submission of the bond issue were men for whom the Post entertains great respect and expects to continue to do so. There were mixed in with those whose purposes were purely destructive, and who are opposed to this submission, because they wish to injure the administration of Governor Fields. But all who were at Frankfort had a right to be there. They were entitled to their day in court and their day before the Legislature. It is well that both sides be heard, and the Post never proposes to say unkind words about those who differ with it on public questions.

Into the various arguments as advanced we will not go other than noting our regret that some Kentuckians coming from counties that already have good roads express a lack of interest in the building of roads in Eastern and Western Kentucky. This is a mistake from every standpoint. The value of every acre in Central Kentucky would be increased by good roads to other parts of the State.—Louisville Post.

The secret of cutting down on coal bills while at the same time improving health conditions is given by Dr. A. T. McCormack, secretary of the State Board of Health in urging the people of Kentucky to abandon the habit of hibernating during the winter and instead, keeping the air in the home fresh and moist while at the same time comfortably warm.

"In these days of high cost of coal, it is advantageous to know that with a plentiful supply of moisture, feels warmer at 68 degrees than dry air at 74 degrees," said Dr. McCormack. "Dry air, such as is produced by hot air furnaces and gas, creates an unhealthy state of the membranes of the nose and throat, makes us sensitive to the sudden changes in temperature and renders us subject to common colds, and inflammation of the air passages."

"Fresh air is essential to health. Many persons close their windows and doors tight to conserve heat and save coal, but little do they realize that by so doing they are lowering their vitality and making themselves subject to colds, bronchitis and other infections of the air passages which will usually cost more in doctor bills and medicine than the extra coal they might burn if they ventilated their rooms sufficiently. Even if they escape serious illness, headache, depression, loss of appetite and other annoying conditions will result from breathing dry, stale air."

"Without the proper amount of moisture ourselves and our furniture will suffer. It is of advantage to have a number of flowering plants or ferns around the house, which if properly watered will give off a considerable amount of moisture. Pans filled with water and placed upon radiators, registers or stoves will give off a surprising amount of moisture."

"... your speech would betray you."—Speech on "Constitution with America."

When a man is hurried or excited he speaks the language of his youth. In this way speech betrays one's early life and training.

It is much easier to disguise one's appearance than to disguise one's speech. One rarely, if ever, completely away from the speech of one's youth. I once heard a man declare that he could tell the state of the Union from which anyone came by hearing him talk for a few minutes. He insisted that there were peculiarities of speech peculiar to each state, and that these peculiarities were never altogether outgrown. Few of us ever cultivate our powers of observation to the point where we can distinguish slight variations of speech; but most of us feel able to distinguish by his speech a man from the eastern or western or southern part of our country.

It is perhaps easier to learn a new language than to correct one that has been learned incorrectly. I remember an interesting example of the way in which the mind clings to the form first learned. Bismarck, it will be remembered, was an ardent advocate of music in English. I remember one occasion when he said, "When I was a Page," and sang it as only he could sing it. Then, to illustrate the superiority of music in a language known to the audience, he began to sing it in English. Everything went well until he reached a certain phrase, then his speech betrayed him into the Italian. Chagrined, he tried several times to sing the aria through in English, but every time his speech betrayed him into the language in which he had so long sung.

The speech of the majority of us is influenced by the speech of our associates. This is especially true of children, and mothers are often called to tell with whom their children have been playing by the child's unconscious imitation.

Speech also tends to betray one's occupation and interests and social status, as well as one's childhood environment and one's associates. As Eliot puts it:

Speech is but broken light upon the depth of the unspoken.

RAT-SNAP KILLS RATS

Better Than Traps For Rats

Writes Adams Drug Co., Texas: "They say RAT-SNAP is doing the work and the rat undertakes as busy as pop corn on a hot stove." Try it on your rats. RAT-SNAP is a "no-back" guaranteed sure killer. The word "Adirondacks" is an Indian word, meaning "wood-enters," a derivative term given a defeated Indian tribe who were driven to the mountains by the victorious Iroquois and forced to live there on berries and bark.

This and That.

Question is, if the boys all become experts, who will be left to pay for their advice?

The income tax statute is a highly popular law among those who don't have to pay any.

While the public admires flowers, some of these roses in people's checks look a bit overdone.

Many folks are not worrying so much about the lack of cash as their inability to get credit.

Some folks have got along very well in politics by letting the other fellow do the talking.

Being told that they should seek more light, some people immediately begin to chase after moonshine.

New building undertaken in United States in December shored gain of 10 per cent over December 1922.

Claimed this country needs more elevating influences, but some power still seems to keep prices elevated.

Claimed there is a decline of authority in these times, but the majority of husbands find they have no mind.

The trouble with many politicians is that they hold their ears to the ground so much that they can't saw wood.

It is not complained that many people are underestimating their losses in making out their income tax return.

Some people feel it is not necessary to be handy with tools, as they can always hire mechanics to do repair jobs.

Many people seem to be troubled with defective memory when they come to listing their income for the tax return.

Some of these aspirant for office who can't get newspaper support think that the press is becoming a great danger.

The nickel-in-the-slot radio has made its appearance and one can "listen in" on a concert without being disturbed.

Claimed that civilization is in danger, and one would think so by the warhoops of the neighborhood kin playing Iddian.

The early morning hours being considered extra healthy, some folks stay up all night so as to get the benefit of them.

It is admitted that the present age is decadent, but the young crowd are doing their best to bring up their parents properly.

A lot of the folks who claim that America is not prosperous are injuring themselves by over eating and too many luxuries.

The folks who can't attend church now because it is too cold, may not be able to go next summer because it will be too warm.

Claimed that character is the cause of all progress, but some of these motor speeders make very rapid progress without it.

There is talk in California of a law taxing bachelors over 28 years old. It seems hardly likely that the women will oppose.

Claimed the farmers should use more fertilizer, but perhaps some would do better if they fertilized more with elbow grease.

So far the sportsmen have not induced the government to let them deduct from their income the value of the fish that got away.

Many people are sensitive about having their names in the newspapers, but the politicians do not object to being "mentioned" for office.

It is urged that historic spots be commemorated, but it might save more lives if the spots of automobile accidents were all marked as warnings to speeders.

We are advised by scientific man to brush our teeth, drink water and live to be 200 years old. That may sound good, but with rents and cost of living getting greater the poor man would have to have a pension and then be buried by the country.
What's the use?

In explaining proposed tax revision
Treasury Department says:
"When this country really gets back to a peace-time basis of taxation it is probable that, including normal and surtax, a total tax of 10 per cent will yield to the government the most revenue with the least disturbance to business."

WHY SHOULD MEN ELECTED BY THE PEOPLE FEAR TO SUBMIT A QUESTION TO THE PEOPLE?

What principle controls those who urge the legislature not to submit the bond issue to the vote of the people?

Do they think the members of the legislature ought to arrogate themselves the right to decide a matter of grave importance to the state of Kentucky?

Do they fear to trust the people, and therefore urge the legislature to deny to the people the opportunity to express their own desires upon this question, which is of major moment to the state?

The legislature has no right under the law to authorize bond issue.
It can submit a bond issue to the vote of the people. In morals it has no more right to refuse to submit the bill to the vote of the people's thereby arrogating to itself the power to prevent the issue of the bonds, than it has the right to authorize the bond issue.

Upon what ground do those members of the legislature who were elected to represent the people justify action that would show fear and distrust of the people?

What valid reason can any member of the legislature give to the people for a vote to deny the people the opportunity to vote on a matter of paramount importance, which opportunity they can secure only by the affirmative action of the members of the legislature?

All members of the legislature were elected by the people. Those who have faith in the people, who believe in the principles of democracy, who have confidence in the intelligence and patriotism of the voters, will vote to submit to the people the bond issue.

Every member of the legislature received a majority of the votes cast in his district. Does any one of them take that as an indication of lack of intelligence on the part of the people? Does Representative W. P. Ardery, for instance, think that because the people of Bourbon county voted for him they have not sufficient sense to decide whether they want the bond issue? We have confidence in the intelligence of the citizens of Bourbon even if they did elect Mr.
Ardery to the legislature.

One of the newspapers has published a statement that there is a possibility of the bill to submit the bond issue not being reported by the committee. We earnestly hope there is no foundation for that prediction.
We hope every member of the legislature will be given the opportunity to show by his vote on this bill whether he trusts the people or does not trust them.

There have been mass meetings held in several counties in which those who attended expressed strong opposition to the bond issue.

Do those who have attended these mass meetings fear to trust to the decision of the people this question, and therefore attempt to attain their object by persuading or intimidating the members of the legislature to deny to the people the chance to vote?

Our government is founded on the rule of the people, not on the rule of a small number, who because of any purpose advocate or oppose a special course. We cannot surmise a valid excuse for any member of the legislature to refuse to vote to give the people themselves a chance to say what they themselves desire, unless it is that that member of the legislature fears or distrusts the intelligence of the people who elected him to the legislature because of their action in so doing.—Lexington Herald.

Washington, Jan. 30.—"The hand of fate is writing upon the wall that the Republican party has been weighed in the balance, and found wanting, shouted Senator A. O. Stanley, Democrat of Kentucky, on the senate floor during debate over the Teapotop Dome oil lease scandal."

"Teapot Dome is a crucible in which the world is testing the capacity and the ability of an administration. It is a crucible in which a great political organization is being tested and found to be dross. And that is why," Senator Stanley continued, "the Elephant is trembling from trunk to tail."

Laughter and cheers from the Democratic side, and more laughter and cheers from the galleries greeted the shafts which the Kentucky senator flung at the principals in the lease scandal, and at times President Cummins had difficulty in maintaining a semblance of order.
Twice during the bitter debate of which Senator Stanley's address was a part, the presiding officer was forced to warn the galleries against demonstrations.

LARGE REQUEST MADE TO KENTUCKY MASONIC HOME

Hickman, Ky.—Robert A. Tyler of this city, who died Jan. 13th, 1924, after making some small bequests to personal friends, willed the remainder of his estate to the Masonic Widows and Orphans Home of Kentucky. It is estimated that the home will receive something in excess of $750,000.

The act of the late Brother Tyler is indicative of growing custom number of very important bequests have been made to Masonic benevo-lences.

Movies at home! And you can make them yourselves. Some evening (when mother lets you sit up late) and you have lots of boys and girls to play, try stretching a sheet across the room and in back of it put a strong light. Big candles or a lamp will do if you haven't gas or electricity.

Now, divide the children into two groups, and let one side be the "audience" and the others, the "actors."
The actors must go in back of the big sheet and stand between it and the light. They can make all sorts of funny motions or even make up a little play, and their shadows on the sheet will look like regular movies to the little audience out in front. After they have done all of this, let the "audience" be the actors and try their tricks while the others are amused. You can even invite the "grown-ups" to be the audience!

Sugar Snaps for Little Chapel
Here's a little dainty that's good to nibble when you want just a wee bite of something sweet. Sugar snaps are so easy to make that I'm sure big sister would be glad to bake them for you.
Ask her to make them this way:
2 cups sugar,
1 cup butter,
4 cups self-rising flour,
1 egg.

The mixture should be chilled before the dough is rolled out. Roll thin. The oven should be quick, but not too hot.
Bake about ten minutes.

Trade Where They All Trade

BANG!

The Campaign opens on

Buckeyes

Don't depend on the Uncertain Hen

More than 700,000 of the most successful poultry raisers in America use Buckeyes. Take a look through the testimonials in that interesting booklet of ours entitled "The Verdict of the User," and note how many of the big prize winners admit that the size and quality of their Buckeye-hatched chicks has been responsible in large part for their success.

Sixteen hundred of the most successful baby-chick hatcheries in America are using BUCKEYE MAMMOTH INCUBATORS. These hatcheries have egg capacities from 50,000 up to a million, and up to date EVERY commercial hatchery equipped with Buckeyes has been a financial success. THAT'S SOME RECORD!

The elimination of the nursery from Buckeye Incubators has saved the lives of millions of baby chicks. White diarrhea is an almost unknown quantity when the chicks are kept in a uniform temperature instead of subjecting them to the sudden chill when they are dumped into the so-called nursery. (See Page 18 of the Buckeye catalog.)

Buckeyes ranks first in the point of sales and quality in every branch of our endeavor; Commercial Incubators (up to 600-egg size) coal-burning brooders, Mammoth Incubators and Blue-Flame Brooders. It is most unusual for any manufacturer to hold the leadership in every item they build.

The Buck Incubator Co. started in business over 35 years ago and has been at it continuously ever since. During this entire period we have been building the most efficient poultry-raising equipment on the market and have never hesitated to build and advocate those devices which were better than those which had gone before—whether it was our invention or not.

Incubators..... $16.50 to $107.00. Brooders..... $11.75 to 30.00

Tobacco has been moving south to Walton, and a great deal north to Covington.

Our town has got to be quite a coal center, as haulers from several towns are getting their coal here.

Miss Jennie Cleek and Miss Catherine Finnell located at Tampa, Fla., report being delighted with their adopted home.

Mrs. B. Perry Tanner and daughter will leave for Florida in a few days to join Mr. Tanner who has located near Bartow.

The continued cold snaps causes us to watch our wood and coal piles and also our steps so that we may keep our feet where they should be.

Mrs. Jane E. Northcutt, aged 75 years and 6 months, passed away Tuesday the 22nd, after a brief illness. Funeral services were held at the Mt. Zion M. E. church by Rev. Mr. Baker, Wednesday and interment at the Hopeful cemetery.

Northcutt was the daughter of the late Samuel and S. Anne Dobbin and a sister of the late D. B. Dobbin. She leaves to mourn her loss two sisters, Mrs. Anne Hammond and Mrs. Fannie Snow and two brothers, James and Wm. Tobbin. Mrs. Northcutt was beloved by all and a christian woman, a member of the Mt. Zion M. E. church for nearly 50 years, and we will all miss her.

Be-a-Hill-Customer It Pays

We Are Agents for Queen Incubators and Brooders

High Percentage Hatches with the Queen Incubator.

Every one wants big hatches, and the QUEEN will deliver them. Besides being wonderfully well constructed in the way of materials and workmanship, the QUEEN embodies the most scientific principles of artificial incubation.

The QUEEN is doubly insulated. First there are double walls of California red wood forming a dead air space. Second, corrugated strawboard is used between the wooden walls. Proper insulation adds considerable expense to the manufacturing cost, but it is an absolute requirement of a good incubator.

The QUEEN is the only incubator that carries out the double red wood wall construction all around, and provides a double wall front in the way of two separate doors. The outer door is a solid panel of red wood that is hinged entirely independent of the inner door and is fastened with a sash lock that draws it tight, this making the loss of heat impossible.

The inner door is also of red wood construction containing a panel of glass the full length and height of the egg chamber.

Queen Brooders are GoodStep Mothers.

They are designed to raise the chicks in all kinds of weather at any time of the year with complete protection day and night. The heating system gives an abundance of heat, distributed properly, while plenty of fresh air is provided automatically without draughts.

WE SELL THE QUEEN BECAUSE WE ARE HERE TO STAY AND CANNOT AFFORD TO TRIFLE WITH YOUR EGGS. COME IN AND SEE HOW A QUEEN OPERATES, OR SEND FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.

KENTUCKY AND NORTH CAROLINA.

"The vivid story of North Carolina's development and growth from a commonwealth of almost State-wide poverty in 1900 to the place she holds today, high in the list of States, was told at a banquet of Atlanta business men in the metropolis of Georgia on the evening of January 29, by Mr. J. S. Hill, a distinguished citizen of Durham, N. C., and a member of the North Carolina Road Commission.

Mr. Hill's address is published in full in the Atlanta Constitution of the following day, and that paper says that Mr. Hill's address makes it plain that North Carolina came into her own "by the force of the thought and conscience of that State that swept ignorance and prejudice and demagoguery aside, and set up a great broad-voiced program of education, and, through enlightenment, evolved a sentiment of conviction that has made North Carolina a leader in progress."

We turn to Mr. Hill's narrative, and we find that what was done in North Carolina was precisely what is now proposed for Kentucky. Rich resources, North Carolina found her plant in disorder. Her roads were so poor that the cost of bringing farm products to the markets paralyzed agriculture. Only in the cities and towns were the schools even tolerable. The prisons and asylums of the State were in bad condition. There was much talk of trying to make North Carolina over by the "pay-as-you-go" plan, and it was found that a beginning might be made in ten years time.

And then the Governor of North Carolina asked the people this simple question: "If anyone of you owned as much property as is represented by the State of North Carolina, and that property was developed, and, therefore, producing ill effects, would you not at once borrow a sufficient sum to restore the plant and get the wheels of business moving?" And the answer was in the affirmative, although we find that in North Carolina, as in Kentucky today, the obstructionists got busy and tried hard to check the progress. The fight was very keen for a time, but in the end, the thought and the conscience of North Carolina prevailed. The sum of $50,000,000 was borrowed for roads, and immediately thereafter $30,000,000 more was borrowed for other public improvements. And the transformation that has been brought about in North Carolina by the judicious expenditure of this money has been simply marvelous.

The State now has a primary road system comparable to that of California. Over 6,000 new school houses have been built in the country districts. The salaries of school teachers have gone up, but taxes are falling as wealth increases. Through the expenditure of only 100 million dollars, and the force of the progressive movement that has accompanied it, the wealth of North Carolina has increased in the sum of one billion, 500 million dollars, and is still increasing.

The Post could quote at length from Mr. Hill's address, but for reasons of space will confine itself to a section of the latter's address in which he discusses the charge of the foes of progress that such a plan as was followed in North Carolina and is proposed in Kentucky is unjust to the owners of automobiles. In that connection Mr. Hill said:

"My, even the saying on gasoline alone will more than pay interest on money borrowed by North Carolina for building roads. In 1920 there were consumed in the State 73,997,832 gallons of gas and there were 142,284 cars or each car burned 520 gallons of gasoline. In 1923 there were consumed in the State 103,123,000 gallons of gas by 247,300 cars or each car consumed 418 gallons of gas hence there was a saving in 1923 over 1920 of 74 gallons of gasoline per car, and gasoline estimated at 25 cents per gallon, will make a saving to the people of North Carolina of $1,877,000 on gasoline use during 8 months. $1,877,000 used."

There is no escape from this exhibit. If we adopt the North Carolina plan in Kentucky every automobile owner in Kentucky will save twice as much in a year as he is called upon to contribute and this without taking into consideration the wear and tear on machines from bad roads.

When everything else is said and done, it comes right down to the question: Is Kentucky incapable of doing the things that North Carolina has done? Is it impossible for Kentucky to find men who will spend public money as honestly and efficiently as the public officers of North Carolina have done? Are we in Kentucky afraid to take the chance to accomplish the great things that North Carolina has secured by her willingness to do and dare?

We should not deceive ourselves about the "pay-as-you-go" cry. That only means, in the final analysis, that nine-tenths of the proposed improvements will be put aside. If this bond issue plan is not adopted, there will be nothing done for the present, and nothing done for the future, and nothing done for the University or the Normal Schools, and nothing done for colored education, or a geological survey. Something will be done for the roads. Work on them will continue in a more or less haphazard way, but, as compared to North Carolina, Kentucky will stand still. Is that what the people of Kentucky want? The people of Kentucky have their choice and the story of North Carolina should beckon them on to the great adventure.

KENTUCKY DOINGS.

Louisville, Ky., February 2.—Governor William J. Fields received his baptism of fire last week from a battery which was manned by a former Governor, and by a recent aspirant to the Democratic nomination for Governor.

When the "pay-as-you-go" advocates for road improvement appeared before the General Assembly in joint session to oppose the $75,000,000 bond issue which is the supreme feature of the administration's program, former Governor J. C. W. Beckham and Judge Lucie Thurman, Springfield were among the chief speakers against the bond issue.

While the speeches were marked by studied courtesy toward Governor Fields, the opposition to his program was as clearly set forth as though it had been voiced in the strongest language of the stump instead of in a courtly phrase.

To emphasize the determination to defeat the Governor's program for Kentucky the opponents of the bond issue started a "pay-as-you-go" club and effected a partial organization. Behind the opposition to Governor Fields' program, the supporters of the Governor see a great number of the opponents of the late J. Campbell Carrill in the late Democratic primary, and the followers of Congressman Alben W. Barkley, altho Mr. Barkley is absolved of any hostility toward Governor Fields.

Former Governor and U. S. Senator J. C. W. Beckham was the foremost speaker against the $75,000,000 bond issue proposal which Governor Fields advocated in keeping with the party platform pledge of a bond issue for good roads. Mr. Beckham showed what an extreme position he had taken when he approved the report of the Efficiency Commission which attacked the bond issue. Governor Fields had denounced this report as a piece of "unwarranted interference." Therefore in approving it, Mr. Beckham placed himself in a position of violent conflict with the Governor.

Judge L. H. Thurman, who also spoke against the bond issue was for a time the prospective candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, of those who were advocating a "business man." However, he did not enter the race. He supported Barkley in the primary election as did Governor Beckham.

The fight on the bond issue in the Legislature is held by its advocates to be entirely unwarranted. They cite the platform pledge of a bond issue for good roads and contend that all the Democrats in the Legislature should do is to submit it to the people. It is for he voters to decide whether or not they will issue bonds or take the "pay-as-you-go" plan.

Governor Fields has reached the crisis of his first legislative session, that critical period for Governors. Whether or not he is to have the position of security in his dealings with the Legislature which seemed assured on the first tests of strength, or whether or not he is to be the sport of insurgents is something that will be determined speedily.

The situation in the Legislature is placing the Republicans in an advantageous position. They can exercise a balance of power that may prove a powerful lever.

The Board of Directors of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs has issued an address to the members of the General Assembly, calling for the defeat of certain measures before the Legislature. The measures and the reasons given by the women for opposing them are:

House Bill No. 97.—This bill if enacted into a law would forbid the paroling of long-term prisoners—a policy which is advocated by all the advanced authorities in criminology, but denounced by contractors and politicians, for whom long-term prisoners represent additional opportunities for profit.

House Bills Nos. 194 and 195.—These bills would abolish the present Board of Charities and Correction, and if enacted into laws would result in the establishment of two bipartisan paid boards—one for the penal and one for the charitable institutions—and would make indescribably easy the return to the spoils system which long flourished in Kentucky.

House Bill No. 253.—This bill if enacted into a law would preclude all possibility of obtaining the most efficient persons available for the positions under the authority of the State Board of Charities and Correction.

The Directors who signed this call include women representing all sections of the state.

William G. McAdoo, who is considered the choice of Kentucky Democrats for the Democratic nomination for President, is to be invited to address the General Assembly. A similar invitation is to be extended Senator Oscar W. Underwood, a native of Kentucky.

Chas. Beall, one of our sound and true friends of the north end of the county, near Hebron, was transacting business at the county seat, last Saturday. He called in to see the printers while in town, and said he didn't care anything about the Recorder, but that his good wife would be lonesome without it, and he had to take it to keep peace in the family.

WILSON'S LAST WORDS WERE "I AM READY!"

Washington, Feb. 3.—Woodrow Wilson floated away on the tide of death with no parting word for those about him—those who had seen his power wax to world-wide preparations and wane to hopeless invalidism.

Virtually comatose for 22 hours before the end, his only recorded statement was the appreciation of his own condition, whispered to Dr. Cary T. Grayson, Friday:

"I am a broken man. A broken machine. I am ready."

Throughout Saturday, his last full day on earth, he did not speak except to murmur "Yes" or "No" a few times to direct questions. Toward night he could do no more than nod his head in affirmation or dissent. At 10 o'clock a profound sleep passed into a state of unconsciousness. He was destined not to wake again.

Mr. Wilson's death was a slow and painless yielding to the inevitable. Every medical art was employed to ease his passing.

Born in Staunton, Va., December 26, 1856.

Was the twenty-eighth President of the United States.

Entered Princeton in 1876 as a member of the famous class of '73. Studied law in the University of Virginia after having left Princeton. Practiced in Atlanta, Ga., and later took a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins in political economy. Finished his famous "Congressional Government" while a student there.

Married Miss Ellen Louise Axon, daughter of a clergyman, on June 24, 1885.

Became professor in Bryn Mawr that year.

Went to Wesleyan University in 1888.

In 1890 was called to Princeton as professor of jurisprudence and politics.

Twelve years later he became President of Princeton University.

Made his entrance into politics September 15, 1910, when he was nominated by the Democrats for Governor of New Jersey.

Was elected by a plurality of 50,000.

On July 2, 1912, was nominated by the Democrats at the Baltimore Convention for President on the forty-sixth ballot.

Elected to be President November 4, 1912, having received 435 electoral votes, and was inaugurated on March 4, 1913.

Ordered blockade of Mexico following the American flag by General Huerta April 15, 1914.

Mrs. Wilson died August 6, 1914.

On May 2, 1915, delivered his famous "Too proud to fight" speech at Philadelphia.

Note sent to Germany warning against "murder on the high seas" following the sinking of the Lusitania on May 14, 1915.

Accepted resignation of Secretary of State Bryan as a result of this note to Germany, June 9, 1915.

Appointed Robert Lansing to fill the vacancy on June 11, 1915.

Married Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, of Washington, on December 18th, 1915.

Renominated to be President on the slogan, "He kept us out of war" at St. Louis Convention, June 15th, 1916.

Re-elected President on November 4, 1916, receiving 277 electoral votes.

Telivered speech in Congress advocating the breaking of relations with Germany following the establishing of unrestricted submarine warfare, February 4, 1917.

Declared war upon Germany April 6, 1917.

Proclaimed selective service act May 19, 1917.

Declared war upon Austria December 8, 1917.

On October 14, 1918, refused armistice terms to Germany until all invaded territory be evacuated.

Announced to Congress that Germany accepted armistice terms November 12, 1918.

December 5, 1918, left for France arrived at Brest December 14 and Paris December 15.

December 27, arrived in London and was greeted by the King and Queen.

Greeted by King Victor in Rome, January 4, where he visited the Vatican.

February 7 the President's scheme for the League of Nations was adopted.

Left Brest for America on February 16th.

Arrived at Boston, where he was welcomed wildly February 24, 1919.

Left again for France March 5th, arrived at Brest March 13 and resumed his work at the peace conference on the 14th.

Treaty signed, he returned to this country, where he took up his fight for the ratification of the peace treaty with the League of Nations covenant incorporated.

Collapsed at Wichita, Kan., October, 1919.

Returned to Washington, "a very sick man." Retired to almost cloistered seclusion.

Retired from office March 4, 1921. Died Feb. 3, 1924.

The jokesmiths of the country apparently have overlooked entirely the fact that Congressman Celler has introduced a bill to legalize beer and wine. And his first name is Emanuel, meaning, "the redeemer."

POULTRY

When Pullets Begin to Lay Get Them Into Coop

Experienced poultrymen have found that if pullets are allowed to remain very long on the range after starting to lay, the change to winter houses is sure to check them and may cause a fall molt.

Cornell backs them in saying that as soon as the first eggs are found on the range, at least a third or a fourth of the best-developed birds should be placed in winter quarters.

When the remaining birds show maturity, they should be put in winter quarters also.

A thorough cleaning and disinfecting of the houses and pens in which the pullets are to live is advocated.

This is especially true if the birds that formerly occupied the buildings have been diseased or have had worms.

Artificial lights should not be used on pullets until they have had a chance to respond to normal conditions. If they do not respond quickly enough, or if neck molt starts, then light can be used with good effect.

Many flocks of pullets take cold after their removal to winter quarters because they are kept in tightly closed houses. All windows and curtains in the front of the houses should be wide open night and day until really cold weather sets in. Even in the middle of the winter, the cloth curtains should not be entirely closed.

Lack of ventilation causes dampness in the houses and this, in turn, results in colds and roup.

Emden-Toulouse Cross Is Favored for Holidays

The cross of the African gander with common geese is considered excellent. This mating gives larger goslings than common stock, and they make an attractive carcass when picked. The Rhode Island experiment station made some experimental crosses of geese. The results are:

"The Emden-Toulouse would appear to be the best all-around cross for general purposes for both early and late markets, and especially for the production of large geese for the Christmas and New Year's markets. They are large, hardy and, when dressed, present a fine appearance. The Emden-African cross seems to be next in desirability, and if goslings are sold early in the summer, or before they are eight weeks old, this cross would be preferable to all others. The Emden-White China cross picked the easiest of these crosses, the birds were white when dressed and, although small, presented the most attractive appearance."

Intestinal Worms Very Harmful to Iowa Fowls

Many Iowa fowls are being ruined through the prevalence of intestinal worms, according to R. T. Parkhurst, poultryman with the extension division of Iowa State college. Such worms cause nonproduction, lack of growth and oftentimes death, besides making the birds susceptible to other poultry ailments.

Birds affected with worms will become thin, despite a good appetite, and after a while grow listless and dull. This is especially the case where overcrowding occurs, as with a large flock and a small poultry house.

The best method to get rid of these worms is to feed the chickens a tonic made from 12 quarts of mash, either dry or wet, mixed with one pound of epsom salts and one pound of dry sulphur. Give them daily for three or four days all they will clean up in ten or fifteen minutes.

It is a good plan to see that all refuse is removed from the quarters and sanitary conditions are provided.

Thoroughly Clean House Before Severe Weather

The hen-house should be thoroughly cleaned, disinfected and made tight before the cold weather sets in. If the house has a dirt floor, it is well to remove three or four inches of dirt from the top and to replace this material with dry gravel or sand. On cement or wooden floors four or five inches of fresh straw or litter may be thrown down after the floor has been cleaned.

Production of Holiday Turkeys Is on Decline

Every year dozens of old-time turkey raisers drop out of the game and the production of holiday birds continues to decrease. This means that it is a good time to go into the business of producing turkeys if there is plenty of range where the birds can get plenty of feed and will not be killed by predatory animals. Fall is the time of year to search for good foundation stock before the turkeys are all put into fattening pens and sold.

Contagious Fowl Cholera Is Easily Distributed

Fowl cholera is a germ disease which is very fatal, says Harry Emberton, head of the poultry department of the Oklahoma A. and M. college. A fowl showing no symptoms of the trouble may be found dead under the roost the next morning. All affected birds do not go in this way. Some may linger a few days, showing a great thirst, due to fever, also a loss of appetite. The bowels will appear very loose.

The Kitchen Cabinet

(By 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

Very nearly every rich man looks upon a man who has not made money as having made a failure—unless he has gained fame. Even then, the moneyed man doubts the claims of a fame which has not received financial recognition.

SOMETHING TO EAT

Cranberries, the ruby jewel of the misty marabes, are with us once again. Serve them often.

They contain just the acids that are needed in the body given in an attractive form.

If one will take time to wash them, cut them into halves, and then wash them under the tap to dash out most of the seeds, a sauce of more delicate flavor will result. Cook until nearly done before adding the sugar and serve hot, then you will get the full flavor of the berry.

Spiced Cranberry Jelly.—Pick over and wash off a quart of cranberries. Add one cupful of boiling water and let boil until the cranberries are soft. Rub through a sieve and add two cupsful of sugar, one-third of a cupful of cold water, two-thirds of an inch-piece of stick cinnamon, twenty-four whole cloves and six allspice berries. Bring again to the boiling point and let simmer fifteen minutes. Add a few grains of salt, turn into a mold and chill.

Chicken and Cucumber Salad.—Peel one large cucumber and one onion, chop them with one red pepper until fine. Sprinkle with salt and let stand in a cool place for an hour. Drain and add to one cupful of finely minced white meat of chicken. Mix well, season with salt and a dash of red pepper, mix with just enough French dressing to season. Serve well chilled.

Cabbage Salad.—This is one of the most appetizing of salads and not difficult to prepare. Chop a small solid cabbage head with one fat-sized onion. Try out in an iron frying pan three thin slices of fat salt pork cut into very thin small dice. Pour the fat and diced pork over the finely-chopped cabbage and onion and into the frying pan put one-fourth of a cupful of vinegar, heat to boiling and turn that over the cabbage. Season highly with salt and cayenne pepper and serve while still hot. Keep in the heater until serving time.

Shirt Sleeve Diplomacy

A recent cartoon in the Portland Oregonian shows General Dawes sitting on a high stool in his shirt sleeves at the Reparations Commission table, which is surrounded by a group of European diplomats garbed in full dress with gold braid and all the tinsel that went with officialdom of the past. Under the table each of these diplomats has a keg of powder, a revolver, bowie knife or some other instrument of warfare with which he hopes to gain an advantage over his neighbor.

General Dawes, silently watching from his stool, says: "Gentlemen, while I am here, we will play all this cards on the table." Consternation appears on the faces of the diplomats as Dawes makes this statement. For five years jealousy, intrigue, personal ambition and greed have dominated in place of an honest desire to settle the reparations tangle.

The only aim of the American members on the Reparations Commission is to secure an early and peaceful settlement of the financial troubles of Germany which are upsetting the industrial rehabilitation of all Europe today.

"Diplomatic poker players" in Europe are not going to put over any slight-of-hand tricks on "Hell and Maria" Dawes or O. D. Young while these gentlemen act as representatives for the United States on the Reparations Commission.

The American members of the Commission are paying their own expenses and are living illustration of "shirt sleeve diplomacy" which will appeal to every red blooded American and give new hope to millions of beggared and befuddled European citizens.

SHOUTERS AND STOPPERS

Observing a runaway horse on the street, a citizen noted that some men contented themselves with shouting, "Whoo!" at the fleeing beast, while others got out and actually stopped the "critter." They remarked that it was always so. Some merely shout under such circumstances, while others get out and do the actual running and assume the danger of getting trampled on.

Good deal so, isn't it, in bigger things? When there comes along any hard job, some folks are merely willing to talk, while others take hold cheerfully and do the thing. Here's hoping that during 1924 there may be fewer people who are mere shouters, but more who will get out and do the work of stopping wrong conditions and straightening out business and civic problems.

The United States public debt was reduced $400,000,000 during 1923.

HOW LINCOLN ROSE

The public speaker, school teacher, or any man who tries each year to say something about Abraham Lincoln, can follow several lines of thought. He can deal with the patriotic spirit of this great American, his high ideals of justice, and his great achievements. But perhaps the most inspiring thing he can say is to point out the romance of Lincoln's rise from the most humble beginnings.

The wonderful thing about Lincoln's early life was that he steadily rose to prominence and fame, though his combined schooling would not have made more than one year. But let no one think that that meant that it was unnecessary to go to school. Lincoln knew better than that but he knew also that every ambitious person can constitute a school of one and learn from the great masters and by seeking the society of intelligent people.

So while other boys were idling away their time, Lincoln was reading the Bible and Shakespeare and the history of the United States and the life of Washington. Any person who will read such books is bound to grow mentally, and will be able to think larger thoughts and understand bigger problems, and meet and deal with more important people. The young person who starts out with such reading soon becomes able to meet thinking people on their own ground.

Lincoln soon began to gather the reward of his studious efforts. Before long he was getting elected to the legislature, reading law, acquiring practice and winning attention as a growing man.

Of course few people have any such mental gifts as Lincoln possessed. But he would never have achieved fame had he not worked hard for self improvement. Any boy or girl, no matter how humble the beginnings, who will do likewise, can rise far beyond the starting point.

NO REASON WHY

There is no reason why Burlington should not see a great revival in home building this spring.

Countless people have had the home of their dreams before their eyes for years. They have been waiting for prices to come down.

But are prices going to come down? Has not a new standard of money values been set up since the war? Has not the average man's revenue increased in proportion to the increase in prices of commodities? We can't expect the building material dealer to sell his goods for less or the carpenter or the brick mason to work for lower wages, so long as the price of everything else remains correspondingly high.

There is no time like the present to build your home. Build now and help make Burlington in every sense of the word a little city of homes—the best place on earth to live.

AN EXAMPLE TO FOLLOW

Little Cuba has set an example to all countries on the other side of the Atlantic might try to follow instead of devoting their energies to stirring up another conflict.

Cuba paid off the $10,000,000 she owed Uncle Sam, with interest. This is a small sum compared with what any other nation owes, but the amount counts little. It is the spirit that the little island government has shown.

No other nation, except England, has exhibited any signs of acting like they would settle, and there is still a small minority in this country that has the timidity to mention cancellation of the war debts owed to United States.

More than seven billions of dollars owed to us by countries, which we befriended in time of stress, and no sign of payment more than five years after the war ended.

A very small part of this amount would solve the soldier's bonus problem and make federal tax reduction a simple case in mathematics.

Do you agree with international bankers that we should "forget" the loans in order to "take our place in world affairs"?

Do you want to "buy bonds till it hurts" again to finance European quarrels?

One experience like this ought to be enough.

THE WOMEN SHOULD VOTE

Figures of registration of voters in Massachusetts show that only one half of the women eligible to vote have registered. Probably the general average all over the country is not much higher if any.

A great many of these non-voting women are people of excellent intelligence, splendid wives and mothers. Their voice is needed at the polls, to offset great masses of women who do not vote intelligently.

THE LURE OF PRINTER'S INK

Some people are born to do newspaper work, and it is hard to pry them loose from it. That was illustrated a few days ago, when it was announced that Mrs. Warren Harding is to become an associate editor of the Marion Star, and will write for the paper through which her famous husband got his start, and to which both the Hardings gave so much thought and effort.

The American newspaper fraternity will heartily welcome her to this new service, and will hope that the keen interest that attaches to newspaper work will do something to soothe her deep grief.

There is no better way to forget one's troubles than to become interested in such a line of work as Mrs. Harding is undertaking. Some women sink into discouragement and despair after suffering a great loss. But Mrs. Harding has the insight to see that life's griefs are cured by active service to the community.

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

Congressman A. B. Rouse introduced a bill in Congress which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed, and which we hope will become a law.

To build, construct, and maintain a military road between Camp Knox Military Reservation in Hardin County, Kentucky, and Fort Thomas Military Reservation in Campbell County, Kentucky.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the Secretary of War, be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to build, construct, and maintain a military road between Camp Knox Military Reservation in Hardin County, Kentucky, and Fort Thomas Military Reservation in Campbell County, Kentucky, of such material that he deems best, and such durable on a route that will connect the county seats of the counties of Boone, Gallatin, Carroll, Oldham, Trimble, and Jefferson, in the State of Kentucky, and is hereby appropriated out of the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, as much money as is necessary to build, construct, and maintain such road.

OWN A HOME.

A good percent of the people of this community own a home.

But why shouldn't more of them have a place to go each night, after the day's work is done, that they can actually and really call home?

The time for building is here. The spring of the year is approaching, the time when hope springs anew in the breast and when nature sets about to the task of reviving the beauties which she is capable of producing.

Somewhere in the heart of every man is the desire to be independent, because independence is the measure of his standing in the community.

The first step along the road to independence is to own your home. The man who owns his own home is respected; the trusted man in this community.

The home owner has a deep sense of civic pride. He is established; Old and responsible; he is vitally interested in everything that tends toward the peace, security and improvement of the place in which he lives.

There are few excuses for not owning your own home. Means are provided whereby, with a small down payment, one may be acquired by weekly installments paid as rent.

The sense of security and shelter that goes with ownership is well worth the cost. It is a feeling that can be gained only through owning a home.

The independent man always owns his own home. Build your own now.

THE PAY AS YOU GO SYSTEM.

The above is getting to be a popular system that if followed out there would be fewer autos, player pianos and steel ranges bought and more old used grocery bills paid.

People look just as well in good plain comfortable clothes and certainly feel better if they can say they are paid for.

Habits are wonderful things to get hold of a person and it takes some time to break away from them, so it would be much better to form only good ones.

The pay as you go habit is a good one and will bring happiness and more contentment. It does not take money nor fine palaces to make a home but it does take an industrious contented family.

Riding around in automobiles not paid for, neglecting business and staying up until the small hours of the night usually makes sluggish and brings trouble.—Ex.

If people spent a little less time complaining about high prices, and a little more in studying and acting on the advice of the RECORDER they would come out better.

A FORMER BOONE CO. BOY

In the Courier-Journal of February 7th, appeared the following special from Minneapolis, Minn: "Minnesota owes much to Kentucky. It is generally accepted that the growth and development of any community along right lines depend more upon the character of its population than upon any other cause. Kentucky has been generous to this State.

"In politics, business and other pursuits many of our leaders point to Kentucky as their starting place. This was particularly true in the early days of Statehood. Perhaps, because it is more difficult now to trace back through several generations, the pioneers are outstanding.

Of a long list of Kentuckians who have made good in that state was the following: Louis N. Scott, born in Petersburg, Ky., in 1858, now has charge of the Metropolitan theaters of St. Paul and Minneapolis. He came to Minnesota in 1875 and eight years later became engaged as manager of the opera house in St. Paul. For a time he was manager of a theater in Duluth. Mr. Scott has been one of the great theatrical stars in Minneapolis and St. Paul. He has done much for the advancement of the theater.

We have been informed that Mr. Scott's father for a number of years, ran the hotel now known as the Loder House at Petersburg.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The convention was called to order by A. R. Edwards, Chairman of the county committee, and on motion J. H. Stevens was made Chairman of the convention and J. L. Kite secretary.

D. B. Wallace, as chairman on Resolution reported the following which was unanimously adopted:

We reaffirm our allegiance to the time honored principles of the Republican party, and the great achievements accomplished since the party came back into power in 1921 demonstrates that the party is worthy of the confidence of the people by the same, patriotic and economic management of the public affairs.

It is with great sorrow that we lament the death of our beloved President Warren G. Harding, whose noble christian character endeared him to our hearts, and his great statesmanship made him the admiration of the world.

We are now in proud of the administration of President Coolidge and the efficient manner in which the business of the country is being dispatched, and he is in every way entitled to and should receive the nomination of his party for re-election.

Every American citizen should be big enough and broad enough to recognize the merit and greatness of our public men regardless of the difference of opinion or affiliation, and we therefore desire to express our profound sorrow of the death of ex-President Woodrow Wilson. He was a great man, and his patriotism and devotion to the highest ideals in life will cause history to record him as one of the great presidents.

We heartily endorse the actions of our worthy U. S. Senator Richard F. Ernst, and recommend that he and Mrs. A. T. Hurt be made the Delegates from the State-at-Large to the National Republican Convention to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, in June.

We heartily recommend D. B. Wallace as a candidate for District Delegate to the National Republican convention at Cleveland, Ohio.

We recommend that the following be made delegates from Boone county to the District Convention at Covington, Feb. 11th, and to the State Convention at Louisville, Feb. 12th, M. Baker, J. H. Stevens, A. R. Edwards, Chas. Hughes, Dr. E. O. Seaton, D. B. Wallace, Geo. W. Baker, A. H. C. Miller, E. B. McClure, Everett Hickman, Jonas Stevens, Earl Smith James Elmore, Geo. Blythe, A. L. Pettit and all the ladies of Boone county who affiliate with the Republican party.

J. L. KITE, Secretary.

Mr. Geo. Penn has sold his farm adjoining the town of Burlington on the north, and will have a sale of personal property on Saturday, February 23d. A Mrs. Wyle of Covington is the purchaser of the farm.

COUPLE ARE GIVEN VERY RARE PRIVILEGE

It is deemed a great privilege for a couple to celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary, although it has several times been the Recorder's pleasure to report a celebration of this sort. However, by this item, we are announcing that on Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Kenos Robbins celebrated their anniversary which went way past the fifty mark. On that day sixty nine years ago they were married, the wedding having taken place in Painesburg.

Both Mr. Robbins and his wife are natives of Indiana although born in different parts of the state.

Their marriage was blessed with a number of children, of whom Miss Lydia Robbins, Mrs. Sherman Myatt and Frank Robbins of Cincinnati and Mrs. Clarence Bedgood of this place are living.

Mr. and Mrs. Robbins for fifteen years have lived in a cottage on Second street, living alone a great part of the time, although their children often visit them to assure themselves of their comfort.

Mr. Robbins is ninety-three and his wife some years younger.—Rising Sun, Indiana, Recorder.

Mr. Robbins is a brother of Uncle Addison Robbins, of this pact who is in his 96th year and still hale and hearty.

PAID HEAVY FINES.

Geo. Crawford, colored, who was arrested a few days ago by Sheriff Hume and Deputy Utz for being drunk and transporting moonshine is serving his sentence of 30 days in jail, and he has paid a fine of $100 and executed a bond that he will not violate any of the liquor laws of Kentucky for twelve months. Mary Crawford, his wife, was also arrested for being intoxicated and resisting an officer and she paid her fine of $25. Crawford's wife was also fined and it will be sold by Sheriff Hume and the amount realized from the sale of the machine will also be paid to the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Crawford and his wife paid fines amounting to $125 and lost their automobile. This is quite a penalty for violating the law regarding the liquor traffic. Willie Allen and his wife Charlie were with the Crawford's and they were also intoxicated and they paid a fine of $20.

WHERE THE MONEY WENT

The $200,000.00 Boone County road bond fund—spent on the following roads: Bellevue Rabbit Hash and Waterloo, Burlington and Bellevue, Burlington and Idlewild, Constantine Hobron, Idlewild Petersburg, Bullittsville to Snyder, Big Bone and Hamilton, Covington and Lexington, Burlington and East Bend, Frogton road, Florence and Union, Gunpowder and Rabbit Hash, Hebron and Limaburg, Big Bone to Huey's corner, McGlasson road, Richmond Highway to Snyder, Union and Highway to Walton, Verona Gallatin Big Bone Church, Youell pike. The amount spent on these roads totaled more than $250,000 part of which was state aid work and paid for by the state, and re-appropriated for construction of the Dixie Highway with concrete. A number of people are under the impression that a large part of the bond fund was spent on the Burlington and Florence pike, when the fact is not one dollar of that fund was used on that road.

NET CIRCULAR ON TOBACCO DISEASES

A new circular just issued by the Kentucky Experiment Station contains "safety first" methods for preventing angular leaf-spot and wilt in the tobacco fields of the state.

Sanitation must be employed if tobacco diseases are to be stopped says circular 162, The Control of Angular Leaf-Spot and Wilt of Tobacco, and care must be taken to keep the bacteria which cause the diseases out of the plant seeds. Small pieces of infected pods in the seed may carry the bacteria, and tobacco trash may also serve to infect the beds. A new development has just proved conclusively that if the cured leaves infected with either wilt or angular leaf-spot are chewed and the juice spit into the beds during preparation or weeding or at any other time, as is frequently done, the young plants will be infected and the disease will later occur in the field.

The circular carries recommendations for control of these diseases, treatment, and various other precautionary measures. Write for this circular to the Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

Harry Humphrey and E. L. Morehead, of Taylorsport, were business visitors to the county seat, last Thursday. They called at the Recorder's office and had their names added to our large list of readers. Mr. Humphrey will have a sale of personal property at his residence on Wednesday, Feb. 20th. See adv.

RED CROSS NEWS.

The first Red Cross museum in the world established at National Headquarters belongs to all the members of the American Red Cross. These silent records of missions of mercy should make our citizens feel very proud of their membership in the American National Red Cross. John Barton Payne chairman.

The re-enrollment certificate for Big Bone Church school was received last week.

Following are excerpts from letters of Foreign Red Cross Societies regarding the Junior Red Cross Xmas card.

"We beg you to transmit our grateful thanks to the American Red Cross for having accepted again the suggestion of the American children to end their sweet Christmas boxes to their Hungarian friends."

"I cannot tell you how touched we are at the evidence of friendship given by your young children." French Red Cross.

"With greatest joy we have read your letter telling us about American children who are preparing some Christmas packages for Polish children."

ANOTHER ANNIVERSARY

The birthday of an individual is a significant event, as making a definite stage in the allotted span of life which must inevitably reach its end. The mere living of each year is an achievement in itself. But in the case of an organization worthy to endure through the ages, it means little as a mere measure of the passage of time.

On the 16th day of February, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will celebrate its fifty-sixth anniversary. The event offers a suitable opportunity to survey the accomplishments of the past, and to study the problems of the future.

The Elks with its vast membership of splendid American citizens, its wide scope of varied activities in the service of humanity, make it one of the most influential factors for good government and good citizenship. The Elks believe in the American freedom, the bulwark of the Republic.

THIRD PARTY MOVEMENT

A movement is under way to form a coalition of the various independent parties and political associations of eastern states. The first meeting for this purpose was held in Washington last week. The purpose is to organize the independent voters in the east who are scattered now under various party labels so that they can participate in the Farmer-Labor convention to be held in St. Paul, May 30. Also it is expected that this new coalition if it is achieved, will seek recognition at the Conference for Progressive Political Action, to be held in St. Louis, Feb. 15.

There are strong indications that a determined effort will be made, both by the Conference for Progressive Political Action and by the Farmer-Labor convention to give Mr. Follette the third party nomination. Those claim to be close to the senator from Wisconsin, even members of his bloc in the Senate and House, seem to be confident that he will accept that nomination.

QUIT KNOCKING.

There is considerable noise being made about the condition of the roads in Boone county. We know they are bad—extremely bad—but no worse than in many other counties, and in some not near as bad. There is no use kicking about the roads in Boone. As long as there is no regard for them during the wet, freezing and thawing period the condition will ever be thus. The roads are what most of us help to make them. There is insufficient revenue from county taxation to build and maintain them, and if there are not enough enterprising and progressive citizens within our borders to devise some way and means of taking care of the proposition then we are up against it.

GET READY FOR THE INCOME TAX MAN.

A deputy from the office of Robert H. Lucas, Collector of Internal Revenue will be in Burlington today (Feb. 14th) 1924.

This officer will be glad to assist individuals in preparing their 1923 income tax returns. He wants to be of real service to the people of this community. Individual taxpayers are urged to bring their income tax troubles to the deputy and let him help them. This service is absolutely free.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The following was received from Dudley Gaines, of Texarkana, Texas, who fifty years ago was a citizen of Burlington, and lived in the residence now occupied by Mr. Geo. W. Penn and family: "Enclosed draft for $1.50 in payment of subscription to the Recorder for another year. Hoping this will find you and all my old friends in old Boone in good health and prospering."

There are but few of Burlington's friends left in Burlington, a majority of whom have crossed the Great Divide, and those that are left, have reached the shady side of life, and are now looked upon as the old citizens of the town and county.

"Handsome" Ryle, of "Hoot-owl Ridge," whom we are always glad to see darken our door on business or pleasure, dropped into our sanctum last Thursday, the first time since the New Year made its advent, and he furnished us with news enough to fill a column, but the man who tickles the ivory keys on our Linotype refused to set it, therefore, we had to let it pass by, but we appreciate the effort made to furnish news.

Mrs. Margarette A. Price and son Archie and daughter, Miss Mildred Jane, of Big Bone neighborhood, were business visitors to Burlington, last Friday. Mrs. Price will have a sale of personal property on what is known as the F. M. Hewlett farm on the Big Bone and Union pike, on Thursday, Feb. 28th. As she expects to go back to her home at Rosedale, Ind. Everything will be sold to the highest bidder, nothing reserved.

From the kind of weather we have been having since the 2nd inst. would indicate that the ground-hog saw his shadow. It was late in the afternoon Mr. G. Hog beheld a dim shadow of himself and said "good-bye" for six weeks more, and scrambled back to his warm burrow under old Mother Earth, and there he will slumber until the 20th of March when spring begins.

Senate Bill No. 28 has been passed by the Legislature and is now a law as it contained an emergency clause and went into effect immediately after it was signed by the Governor. The main provision of the law is the one changing the time of meeting of the County Board of Supervisors and fixing the time at the second Monday in February instead of the second Monday in March.

It is claimed by some who profess to know that the peach crop of 1924 will be almost a complete failure on account of being killed during the recent weather. It is also claimed that apples and pear crops were not damaged by the cold waves, due to the fact that they are more hardy and not so far advanced as the peach buds.

The County Board of Tax Supervisors is now in session, the time of meeting has been changed from March to February 11, 1924. Any taxpayer who desires that his list be changed should appear before this board at this time.

The Radio fans who were tuned in last Friday night on Chicago heard a test that was being made by Telephone and Radio, whereby the Radio fans heard very distinctly persons in Havana, Cuba, Key West, Tampa, Jacksonville, Florida, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Denver Kansas City Salt Lake San Francisco, talking to each other over telephone-wires and their conversations were broadcast from Chicago. A violin solo was played at Havana and the low notes were heard here. Over five thousand miles of wire were in the circuit connecting these cities and the telephone lines were built over the rocky mountains more than a mile above sea level, and the cable from Key West to Havana, a distance of over two hundred miles was in place a mile below sea level. This was not only an interesting demonstration but gave a slight idea of what we may expect in the future development of the telephone and radio industry. Those of us who use the telephone wonder how the voice can be carried over wire for a distance of more than five thousand miles when we have trouble, at times, in being heard only a few miles away. In long distance transmission by telephone, amplifiers are used at certain determine distance. The voice is received by the amplifier and restored to its normal volume at the different stations and there is practically no loss in transmission.

A nickel in the slot radio receiving outfit gives patrons advance information as to the type of entertainment coming and gives a warning 20 seconds before another nickel is required to enable them to enjoy an uninterrupted performance.

Be-a-Hill-Customer It Pays

We Are Agents for Queen Incubators and Brooders

High Percentage Hatches with the Queen Incubator.

Every one wants big hatches, and the QUEEN will deliver them. Besides being wonderfully well constructed, in the way of materials and workmanship, the QUEEN embodies the most scientific principles of artificial incubation.

The QUEEN is doubly insulated. First there are double walls of California red wood forming a dead air space. Second, corrugated strawboard is used between the wooden walls. Proper insulation adds considerable expense to the manufacturing cost, but it is an absolute requirement of a good incubator.

The QUEEN is the only incubator that carries out the double red wood wall construction all around, and provides a double wall front in the way of two separate doors. The outer door is a solid panel of red wood that is hinged entirely independent of the inner door and is fastened with a catch lock that draws it tight, this making the loss of heat impossible.

The inner door is also of red wood construction containing a panel of glass the full length and height of the egg chamber.

Queen Brooders are Good

Step Mothers.

They are designed to raise the chicks in all kinds of weather at any time of the year with complete protection day and night. The hatching chamber has an abundance of heat, distributed properly, while plenty of fresh air is provided automatically without draughts.

WE SELL THE QUEEN BECAUSE WE ARE HERE TO STAY AND CANNOT AFFORD TO TRIFLE WITH YOUR EGGS. COME IN AND SEE HOW A QUEEN OPERATES, OR SEND FOR CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST.

Modern Woodmen.

H. E. White, Frank Kelly, Benj. C. Stephens Jr. and Raymond Goodridge, were initiated into the mysteries of Woodcraft last week by Patriarch Camp No. 12004.

Neighbor Lee Craddock expects to go to the hospital this week.

The M. W. A. the most Fraternal, Cheapest and Largest Fraternal Insurance Society in the world, has again benefitted humanity. While they do not promise to pay sick benefits, pay more than any other society. Neighbor Perry Bruce, who has been sick for several weeks but is now able to be out again, was assisted by seventeen members of Boone Camp who had a wood-sawing to warm up the household and also arm our hearts in Fraternalism. We wish to thank Mr. Florin Holten for the use of his engine and saw, for the occasion. There were neighbors there from Hebron and Idlewild. We are pleased to say who take great interest in Woodcraft. Neighbor J. T. Williams, of Bullittsville, also wishes to be mentioned as one of the beneficiaries and is disappointed because we did not let it be known more thoroughly through the paper, but don't be discouraged. We do like to advertise all we do only to those who wish and request it to be done. We would like to see every man in Boone County between the ages of 16 and 60 belong to the Modern Woodmen.

LET LAW ANT JUSTICE PREVAIL

For many months there have been unanimous matters from the National Convention of irregularities in high official places, and there has been the indefinite promise that those accused would be called upon to answer.

Recent disclosures along several lines indicate a decidedly unfavorable condition, and that the "goods were delivered." Honesty or dishonesty are qualities on which no political party holds a monopoly. From the disclosures there seems to be plenty of both.

There have been investigations and investigations and more are promised, but what the people are particularly interested in is that the public officials who are accused of fast and loose methods, guilty of breach of trust or incompetency, should be brought to account in a proper court.

If this republic shall endure among the civilized nations of the earth upon the fundamental principles that underlie our government, it must be because the citizenship of the country have a respect and an admiration for law, even the law be wrong. We live by example. If those in high official life disregard our laws, in spirit or in letter, what can one expect of the common people?

No man, or woman, or school boy, finds fault with square deal—but in this 20th century all of them know when they get it, and when they do not. The vanishing of a sore spot does not heal the wound. The time has come when Representatives of the people, regardless of party, must "come clean" or make room for worthier men.

TAX-EXEMPT BONDS A GREAT EVIL

In the United States there are between $30,000,000,000 and $40,000,000,000 in privately held securities outstanding in America, whose owners are allowed, either partially or wholly to escape the burden of taxation imposed on the rest of the Nation. The securities in circulation which are wholly tax exempt are valued at $12,309,000,000.

Congress today provides on the one hand, a graduated income tax with surtaxes rising as high as 50 per cent on incomes over $200,000, while on the other it permits the use by cities, counties, and states of tax-exempt bonds, which not only relieve estates from the surtaxes but from income taxes altogether. In the war loans, and in the other bond issues, Congress itself floated securities wholly or partially tax-exempt. Mr. Mellon admits that the government loses nearly half a billion dollars annually in taxes from these securities. A graduated income tax draws heavily from the man with the big income. The richer one is the heavier the tax, consequently the more he gains by investing in tax-free bonds, which tends to create a "tax-exempt aristocracy."

Legal authorities differ as to the "intent" of the 16th amendment, dispute its plain language that "Congress shall have power to levy and collect incomes from what ever source derived." The Supreme Court leans to the opinion that it is meant only to legalize the income tax.

Mr. R. C. Leffingwell, former assistant secretary of the Treasury, sums up the condition as follows: "The issue of tax-exempt bonds is a very great evil. First, because it diverts capital from the productive enterprises of business men, and subsidizes the wasteful and defensible expenditures of political authorities; second because it undermines the public revenues and public credit; and third because it violates the fundamental principle of equality in taxation, and discriminates in favor of unearned incomes and against earned incomes."

TOO MUCH LAW

The modern lawmaker seems to think it his chief duty to introduce new legislation. It does not seem to occur to him that the power to repeal is almost as frequently available to put into effect the power to enact, nor does he realize the dangers and inconveniences of a cumbersome legal system. Usually the fails utterly to comprehend the fact that in a republic the best government is that one which is operated by the aid of the least law. One prolific cause of too much legislation is the deposition of legislators to assist one another by a trade of votes. Representative Jones votes for Representative Smith's bill, regardless of its merits, on the understanding that Smith will vote for Jones' bill. This is an everyday practice in all parliamentary bodies of this country.

A remedy might be found, if we ceased designating bills introduced by the names of their authors. It matters Representative Jones to have his name attached to a bill, and if his introduction of it did not cause that name to go thundering down the corridors of time, very often he would not introduce it.

Under present conditions it is claimed that the legislator who votes "no" on every proposition will be right more than half of the time.

WOODROW WILSON'S final exit from the world's stage at a time when the political parties are preparing for another great battle is not expected to have any marked effect on the presidential campaign. If he had lived through the summer his influence would have been felt at the Democratic National Convention, probably in support of McAdoo, his son-in-law. His death, though, has been the signal for the renewal of efforts by various peace organizations to sell the League of Nations to the country.

UNFORTUNATELY for them the country just now is more interested in matters closer to its home and pocket-book than in international affairs. Most of the people seem willing to leave the conducting of foreign relations to Mr. Hughes (with the advice and consent of the Senate) and to focus their attention on the messes in Congress for tax reduction and the Government's effort to get at the bottom—how deep that may be—of the great oil lease scandal.

INVESTIGATION of the Fall-Denby oil leases has led to a veritable deluge of oratory on Capitol Hill. Mostly it is words words, and largely for political effect at that. Upon occasion there is a bright spot. For instance, Senator Tom Heflin, of Alabama, an old-time bombastic declaimer, suggested that G. O. P. stood for the "Grand Oil Party." But that was before Ed. Doheny announced that his high-priced assistants were not Republicans and that he had had at least three members of the Wilson Cabinet on his pay-roll.

NO NATIONAL conference in Washington on domestic problems is complete without Herbert Hoover to do the organizing and pull the necessary wires. When the President called his conference here to discuss the distressed agriculture and banking situation in the northwestern states, the Secretary of Commerce was on hand—and busy, though it would appear to the casual observer that the matter might have been handled very well by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Great faith is placed in Hoover's organizing ability. It is his job to get the conferences to adopt the proper resolutions and take the action which the Administration desires. And he always does the job and does it well.

EPYTH BOLLING GALT WILSON, widow of the Ex-President, expects to continue her residence in Washington; but has not decided whether or not she will occupy the S Street mansion where her husband died. Mrs. Wilson is part owner of one of the capital's largest jewelry stores, formerly operated by her first husband. She is said to be worth half a millions dollars in her own right.

IT IS REPORTED from Florida, that Attorney General Taugherty has started work on his promised biography of Warren Harding. The book may be ready for the press in the autumn.

ALTHOUGH TWO of the men who succeeded him in the White House have succumbed to the trials of the Presidency, William Howard Taft, the Chief Justice of the U. S. still goes about his daily duties as hale and hearty as ever. Taft is now 68 years old. Wilson was 67 when he died, while Harding was only 58. The death of two Presidents within a few months has brought forcibly to the attention of the leaders the necessity of choosing younger men as candidates. Being President of these States has gotten to be a man-killing job.

HELPING TOWARD SELF EX-PRESSION

One of the greatest benefits derived from the farmers and woman's clubs and other organizations formed in country towns has been that they help country people express themselves. Up to recent years, the majority of country people could hardly talk in public. Their heads were just bursting with ideas, but they did not have enough self confidence to express them in a company of people. This has handicapped the progress of the country towns, because so many people who mentally are prepared for leadership, can not take it just because of this feeling of confidence.

In the various club organizations people get over this self consciousness, and those who are capable of leadership learn to lead.

THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY TOWNS

The cost of food is the biggest item of expense in the average family. Many families could reduce their costs for clothing and for shelter by a great proportion, but if they cut their food costs down an equal ratio, they would be undernourished and their health would decline. A family that is well fed can stand hardships in other lines.

hus the production of an adequate food supply at a fair price is the most basic essential of human life. It must be done efficiently, or the price will be so high that the people will not be properly fed.

To get this basic industry carried on successfully, you must take it attractive for bright and capable people to engage in food production. If conditions are very discouraging, a great part of the capable folks will quit the farms and hunt for jobs in cities and in factories.

If as the result of such a movement, the farms should be largely left to be tillied by a type of people who are indolent, or who lack ambition or intelligence or initiative, food production will become costly, and the masses of the cities will lack proper nourishment because they can not pay the prices asked for food.

The country towns live largely by food production. They have resting upon them the heaviest responsibility in the nation's economic life. Their task must be well performed, or the masses who work in cities and factories will suffer. It is for the in the production of food that the country life is made favorable, so that the work of food production shall attract its fair share of efficient and progressive people. Denying the country towns their fair share of the state's income hits at the state's prosperity.

No secret is made now of the fact that the United States is wholeheartedly on the side of Alvaro Obregon in his effort to put down the revolution that threatens to destroy his Government. Agents of the revolutionists are being jailed along the border on charges of violating the neutrality laws of the United States, while American arms and ammunition and American warships have been thrown into the balance against the rebels. The interest of this country in Mexico lies largely in the oil holdings of Americans in the Tampico regions, but deeper than that is the policy of the Coolidge Government to frown upon any revolutionary activities anywhere in this hemisphere.

You've tried to carry peas on a knife (gracious no, I don't mean while eating!) but have you ever been in a cranberry race and tried to carry cranberries on the back of your hand? Get a large bowl full of cranberries and have all of the boys and girls, one at a time, put a hand, palm down, into the bowl getting as many cranberries on the back of the hand as possible. Then they must run to the other end of the room with them and the one who has the most when the goal is reached wins the game.

When Johnny Eats Johnny Cake.
It's most fun to eat things with funny names like popovers and Johnny cakes. Isn't it? I'll bet everyone has a favorite recipe for Johnny cakes but here's one that you can tell cook or mother is the best of all:

1 cup sifted milk
1 pint sweet milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 cups corn meal
1 egg beaten tablespoon butter
Sift the flour and add the corn meal and sugar, and then the milk, beaten egg and melted butter. Bake in a sheet pan for 20 minutes in a hot oven.

The first Radio Beauty Contest in history will be conducted by WLW, of The Crosey Radio Corporation, at 10:00 p. m., Valentine's Night, Feb. 14th, 1924. The contestants are to be Miss Helen Hamilton, pupil of Miss Minnie Tracey; Miss Statira Childress, secretary of Hubert Taft of the Cincinnati Times Star; Miss Hilda Brooks, advertising department of the Procter and Gamble Company, and Miss Mary Costella, Millinery Fashion Girl from the Joseph Lazarus Company.

In strange contrast to those beauty contests so familiar to all of us where the girls appear in person before the judges, the young ladies participating in this first Radio Beauty Contest will be judged by persons living hundreds and thousands of miles away! For they are to be described from the studio, where they will actually be, and then each is to say a few words to the vast radio audience. In this way every auditor will receive a very definite mental picture of just what the girls look like.

The exciting feature of the contest will be found in the fact that the voters are to voice their sentiments by telegraph! The telegraph company will have two or more lines direct into the WLW studio, and there receive the votes from all over the country. The telegrams are to be prepaid, and every telegram sent should bear the name and address of the sender. Each telegram will entitle its sender to a six months subscription to the Crosey Radio Weekly, so that every one participating will obtain value received for the cost of his vote. But besides, this is more interesting, there are to be given away One Hundred Prizes that are well worth the chance of winning.

Dolly Varden Candy Company is offering FIFTY five pound boxes of chocolates especially prepared for the occasion, to be distributed among those who vote on the winner. Michael, manufacturer of the Sonoda Cigar, is contributing FIFTY boxes of Sonodas to be distributed among the voters on the girl winning the second largest number of votes.

As for the girls, there will be a special theatre party at the Grand Opera House given by Thurston, the magician. Suitable presents also will be given to them. They are to be the full spirit of the contest and happy to participate in this, the first Radio Beauty Contest in the world.

AGAINST INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS

A plan to reduce industrial accidents has been announced by the National Industrial Conference Board. It is not generally realized that such accidents play a considerable part in the cost of living, and constitute one of the nation's heavy burdens.

The loss to workers by such accidents is estimated at $1,000,000,000 annually. But whether this includes the rest loss caused by the permanently lowered production of a great body of crippled men may well be doubted. When a man loses a leg or an arm and is forced to take less productive work, the loss to the industry to be more generally estimated.

Safety appliances reduce such mishaps. But accidents are prevented principally by care, watchfulness, and caution. A lot of people are bound to get injured as the result of a disposition to "take a chance."

With the High School Classics

By MARGARET BOYD

(By Margaret Boyd.)

"She actually said 'mate' for 'most,' 'appen' for 'perhaps' and 'saw' for 'horse,' which to young ladies living in good Lythierly society, who habitually said 'orise,' even in domestic privacy, and only said 'appen' on the right occasions, was necessarily shocking."—Silas Marner.

Centuries before the Christian era, the Galatians captured a certain ford of the Jordan river and tried every man who wished to cross it by making him pronounce the word Shiloh. If they knew their enemies could not pronounce the h in the word. Those who failed to pronounce the word correctly were put to death. Whether pronunciation was considered a vital matter before that time or not we have no way of knowing; but we do know that for many centuries a man's training and rank in the world have been judged by the way he pronounces certain words.

At the present day those who say "ither" for either and "tomahoe" for tomato consider themselves as superior to their neighbors, as did the young ladies from Lythierly who habitually said 'orise'.

We are told that some other languages are simpler in respect to pronunciation than the English—they could not well be more complex. We have the pronunciation of the Londoner who says "bawth" for bath and of that other Londoner who says "lidy" for lady. We have the pronunciation of the New Englander to whom an idea is always an "idear" and the pronunciation of the Southerner, to whom a head is a "haid." Then we have dictionary pronunciation, with so many pronunciations allowed for each word that it seems unlikely that a man would miss all the given pronunciations—English, wherein a man may blast out rock with "din a mite" or explode a "bun" or draw an "ob lik" line.

We have a set spelling and a set word order that may be learned from books, but pronunciation is not so easily learned. There was a time when the pulpit, the stage and the lecture platform served as the school for pronunciation, but popular evangelists, vaudeville actors, popular lecturers have done much to discredit these mediums with the purist.

Oliver Wendell Holmes would judge a casual acquaintance rather by his choice of words than by his pronunciation of them.

KENTUCKY DOINGS.

Opponents of racing in Kentucky who hope to kill the sport on which the state's breeding industry rests, by repealing the statute legislating the use of the pari-mutuel system at regularly licensed race meetings, will have opportunity Wednesday to see what they can do in the House.

The vote to make the bill a special order was 61 to 28, and this has led many of the anti-racing faction to point to the vote as an indication of how the House stands with regard to the repeal of the pari-mutuel statute to be altogether wrong. The vote was not an indication of how the House stands with regard to racing, but rather was an answer to the charges that the racing bill and other measures were being held in committee and not permitted to come to a vote, they say. This allegation is settled by a vote of the House in making the bill a special order and many of those who did this are opposed to the repeal of the pari-mutuel statute. They had no objection, however, to bringing the matter to a test in the House.

The final vote, will, it is predicted, be close, with a possibility that the bill will pass the House. That it will never pass the Senate is considered certain.

There are two bills in the House to abolish the pari-mutuels. They were introduced by Representatives H. A. Full of Paducah, and G. W. Bennett, of Webster county.

With the pari-mutuel statute dragged into the arena at Frankfort, its companion of the Democratic primary, the coal tax, may be expected to challenge the legislators to action. Though these measures were the issues in the Democratic primary and were submitted to a vote of the people, which were adverse, the advocates of the pari-mutuel repeal and of the coal tax refuse to abide by the decision. A result that can be foreseen is that action against racing and the breeding industry may force a coal tax.

J. Campbell Cantrill in the primary campaign declared against anything that would cripple the breeding industry of the great blue grass section and against a coal tax. Barkley took the opposite side and made his campaign particularly vigorous on the racing issue. Cantrill beat Barkley decisively, and this was held to have settled these questions as far as the Democrats of Kentucky are concerned. They were omitted from the Democratic platform, and the Republicans did not include them in their declaration of principles. However, in the election, Dawson made a bid for anti-racing support and the victory of Barkley irreconcilable by saying that if it is the Legislature that is to pass the pari-mutuel law he would sign it. Dawson was defeated overwhelmingly, and thus the people went on record once more as against a change in the pari-mutuel statute.

The bills against racing and for a tonnage tax on coal were nevertheless among the first introduced at the session of the General Assembly. Another irritant in the racing situation in the General Assembly is the presence of the so-called "Ripper" bills from Louisville. These bills would take the control of the Jefferson County police from the Republicans and give them to the Democrats, would insure Democratic domination in the Jefferson County Commission and would make a change as to automobile fees in the Circuit Clerk's office here. None of them is a matter of importance, but they are calling to Louisville Republicans who are in a mood to call upon their brethren from other sections to put a stop to the ripper bills threatening to support the anti-racing measures. The ripper bills so far have stirred up an undercurrent of feeling and Democratic leaders realize that what is at stake through them is not worth the trouble they are causing.

The problems of taxation are as usual the most difficult with which the Legislature is called upon to deal. Governor Fields is anxious to relieve the farmers and the small land owners of certain of their burdens and have asked for a reduction of the state tax rate on farm lands and real estate from 40 cents to thirty cents on the $100 value. This means of course a reduction in revenue which will have to be made up elsewhere.

Provisions of the Nelson tax bill, however, which was introduced January 30 in the House and reported favorably February 4, have raised a storm of protest. The proposal in this bill to which the most vociferous objection is taken is to levy a tax of 50 cents on the shares of the capital stock of all corporations doing business in Kentucky, whether organized in the state or elsewhere.

The Kentucky Tax Reform Association and the Louisville press have taken the warpath against this stock certificate tax, asserting that it would do Kentucky incalculable harm.

The Tax Reform Association immediately started an active fight against it. The Nelson law would reduce the tax on real estate from 40 cents to 30 cents as suggested by Governor Fields. It would increase the tax rate on all other property to 50 cents. It would increase the tax rate on live stock from 10 cents to 50 cents and exempt same from local tax on the shares of the capital stock of all corporations and would require all banks and trust companies to provide the State Tax Commission with a verified list of all notes, stocks, bonds, accounts and other credits deposited as security for loans or other purposes.

The Tax Reform Association, in a statement to the public said in part:

"The proposal to tax the shares of the capital stock of all corporations is absurd and indefensible. Corporations now pay taxes on their property and licenses, fees and franchises, and to tax the shares will be so unjust there will be a stoppage of the present industrial development, and probably force many corporations to dissolve and become partnerships in order to avoid this excessive taxation. It is one of the inconsistencies of the proposed law that a partnership business is exempted from taxes on capital, while corporations are to be required to pay on their capital."

The Louisville Post said, "The meaning of the legislative proposal at Frankfort, to subject to taxation the paper certificates of ownership by Kentucky people of stock in Kentucky corporations certainly has not been generally understood, or there would have been a shout of protest that would have been heard in every part of the state. We cannot believe that this dangerous proposal will be written into statute law, but we can be certain that if it is, this Legislature will be remembered forever as one that gave the state and people of Kentucky the worst blow they have ever received from a State Legislature. The passage of this law would set Kentucky back many years. In fact it would drive capital away from Kentucky in the tens of millions of dollars."

The Times said, "Kentucky, by inaugurating the double taxation proposed by the Nelson bill, virtually outlawing the conduct of business through corporate ownership, would prevent its own development, would keep out capital, would keep down population, would keep down pay rolls, would keep down road development and school development, increasing the burdens of taxation by placing the whole burden upon a far smaller and far poorer population than the state should have and might have."

The Kentucky State Bankers' Association, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association and the Louisville Retail Merchants' Association have taken stands against the Nelson law also.

Buckeyes

Don't depend on the Uncertain Hen

More than 700,000 of the most successful poultry raisers in America use Buckeyes. Take a look through the testimonials in that interesting booklet of ours entitled "The Verdict of the User," and note how many of the big prize winners admit that the size and quality of their Buckeye-hatched chicks has been responsible in large part for their success.

Sixteen hundred of the most successful baby-chick hatcheries in America are using BUCKEYE MAMMOTH INCUBATORS. These hatcheries have egg capacities from 50,000 up to a million, and up to date EVERY commercial hatchery equipped with Buckeyes has been a financial success. THAT'S SOME RECORD!

The elimination of the nursery from Buckeye Incubators has saved the lives of millions of baby chicks. White diarrhea is an almost unknown quantity when the chicks are kept in a uniform temperature instead of subjecting them to the sudden chill when they are dumped into the so-called nursery. (See Page 18 of the Buckeye catalog.)

Buckeyes rank first in the point of sales and quality in every branch of our endeavor; Commercial incubators (up to 800-egg size) coal-burning brooders, Mammoth Incubators and Blue-Flame Brooders. It is most unusual for any manufacturer to hold the leadership in every item they build.

The Buck Incubator Co. started in business over 85 years ago and has been at it continuously ever since. During this entire period we have been building the most efficient poultry-raising equipment on the market and have never hesitated to build and advocate those devices which were better than those which had gone before—whether it was our invention or not.

Incubators..... $16.50 to $107.00. Brooders..... $11.75 to 30.00.

For eighteen years several hundred acres of cut-over hardwood land in Northern Michigan has been carefully guarded by fire wardens supported solely by Herman Lunden. Today there are many twelve and eighteen inch saw logs and much chemical wood on the protected tract.

Experiments in a Hudson River tunnel ninety feet below the surface of the river and 1,600 feet from an exit, tuned in with a radio set and heard concerts as far away as Pittsburgh. This experiment may lead to something of value to entombed miners.

Perhaps if the women folks were not chasing so much after new wrinkles in their clothes, the world would not get so many wrinkles in their faces.

All indications in Congress point to a very severe restriction of immigration during the next three years. Many members favor a total restriction, or at least limited to temporary tourists or visitors. There seems to be no question about the present quota being materially reduced.

FOR KENTUCKY ROADS

MRS. JANE SUTTON

Plans for raising $2,000,000 more a year for state road work and from $1,000,000 to $4,000,000 a year for other improvements are suggested in a memorandum prepared by the Efficiency Commission for the use of the Governor and the General Assembly made public.

Two plans for increasing the road funds are suggested. Both involve the enactment of a three-cent gasoline tax and an increase in motor truck license, which the commission in its report, estimates will together bring in $1,500,000. Additional funds amounting to $500,000 are suggested through a revision of the present inheritance tax and corporation license tax, or through the placing of a tax on winning wagers or admissions at race tracks.

Provides Special Fund

The commission's report alleges as the "effects of any of the proposals made," the following:

"To provide for the next eight years an increase in road construction expenditure of more than $2,000,000 a year on an average. This will be added to the present total of $4,000,000, available for construction, and will mean that $500,000 will be spent on road construction within eight years, using a negligible amount of county money for a year or two only.

"This means that the amount proposed to be expended in five years with a bond issue can be expended in eight years without a bond issue, the $4,000,000 or more of interest on bonds being saved and put into additional roads.

"To provide for the next 16 years an increase in road construction expenditure of about the same amount $2,000,000 a year on an average. This amount assumes the anticipated increase in gasoline used and the number of cars to cause the proposed rates of taxation to result in increased collections to keep pace with increased maintenance costs. Past experience suggests that the assumption of such increases is justified. This will mean an average of $6,000,000 a year, exclusive of county funds expended on road construction or a total of possibly $100,000,000 of new construction in 16 years.

Interest Is Saved.

"It is to be noted that over as long a period as 16 years the advantages of a pay-as-you-go policy are measurable in very large sums of interest saved, which mean correspondingly many more millions for road construction."

The report then discusses proposed increases in the gasoline tax, increases in motor licenses, taxes on winning wagers, in heritage tax increases, in the corporation license tax and suggested immediate increase in general funds.

The report covered detailed notes as to possible tax legislation with respect to additional sources of revenue available for consideration at this session of the General Assembly, it declares.

GRANT R. D.

Orville Kelly is attending an electrical school in Cincinnati.

Bob and Sam Wilson bought the Bassinger place on Lick Creek for $2500.

Everett Clore sold his farm to Jita Rice. Hogan Ryle will move back to his farm on Gunpowder.

Dora Mae Ryle celebrated her 10th birthday Monday by entertaining a few of her school friends.

It is reported that Jesse Jones has sold his East Bend farm to Mr. Herrington, the purchaser of Clara McKay's farm.

Will Hankinson had the misfortune to fall and injure his knee cap one day last week, and is now confined to his room.

We extend our sympathy to Robt. Hankinson and wife, (nee Mamie Aylor) in the loss of their infant daughter last week. She was buried Saturday in the Bellevue cemetery.

Quite a number of our citizens attended the funeral Sunday at Bellevue of Mrs. Jane Sutton, an estimable lady of the McVillie neighborhood. Her family has our sympathy.

Spring moving will soon begin. Will Hankinson will move to Frank Merrieth's farm. Raymond Ashcraft to the house occupied by Lewis Merrieth, who will move to Jim Will Ryle's place and Ray Williamson to the house on Collin Kelly's place vacated by Mr. Hankinson.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me;
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea,
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep Turns again home.

Jane Sutton, the daughter and third child of William and Elizabeth Stewart was born at Quercus Grove, Ind., July 2, 1842 and died at her home near McVillie, Ky., Feb. 7th 1924, aged 81 years, 8 months and 5 days. She was united in marriage to Thos. Sutton by the Rev. James A. Kirtley Sept., 11th, 1872. To this union were born four children, Thos. Clifford Sutton, Stella Scott, Grace Scott and Katie May Kelly. The husband died April 12th, 1890. Katie May, the wife of J. Colin Kelly joined her father July 18th, 1915. Mrs. Sutton leaves one brother, James Stewart, of Rising Sun, Ind., three children, one step-son Will Sutton and three grandsons of her immediate family. Besides these blood ties there are those further removed and those joined by affiliation who have shared her love and devotion in a measure not less than those whose claim was first. The affection of all these was displayed in the tribute paid her each year by the remembrance of the date of her birth and meeting with her in the home.

In her early youth Mrs. Sutton united with the Methodist Episcopal church at Quercus Grove. After the removal of the family to Kentucky she transferred her membership to the Bellevue Baptist church during the ministry of the Rev. E. N. Dickerson. She was devoted to her church, faithful to its obligations, and constant in her interest.

Each of us has a special mission in this world—a task, given to be fulfilled. Mrs. Sutton exemplified motherhood. Wonderful mother! whose large heart and kindly manner bound us with ties, now not broken, but extended—to the beyond. Her upright life noble heart and friendly smiles are her monument.

"She is not dead, she is just away. With a cherry smile and a wave of the hand she has wandered into an unknown land, and left us dreaming, the fingers there. And you, oh youth, while the white dust yearns for the old time step and the glad return, think of her faring on, as dear in the love of There, as the love of Here. Think of her still the same. Say: She is not dead, she is just away."

CARD OF THANKS

While our hearts are filled with sorrow and grief, we are not unmindful of the many kind acts and words of sympathy bestowed upon us by our relatives, friends and neighbors during the sad hour of our bereavement in the loss of our dear beloved mother, Mrs. Jane Sutton. We wish to thank Rev. C. E. Ficker and Rev. C. L. Nicely for the impressive and comforting words; also Dr. Yelton and Miss Artie Ryle for their untiring efforts and the donors of the many beautiful floral offerings. We thank Mr. Stier for the kind and efficient manner of conducting the funeral.

The Bereaved Family.

COUNTRY CELEBRATIONS

Many prosaic old timers ask what is the need of having country festivals and old home days and town picnics and all that kind of thing. They say that the ends of life are only obtained by hard work, and that going around to "fandangoes" just dissipates human energy and gets people out of the habit of working.

It was just this kind of spirit that has given many towns a black eye, by making them seem so sleepy that young people would not stay in them. A good country town celebration brings visitors from far and near, it brings old friends together, makes every one feel jolly, and people who would have heard him renewed rest. Burlington should have several of these affairs during the coming summer. Such occasions draw trade to a town, and are worth all they cost.

PETERSBURG.

Sorry to hear of the death of Jas. Duncan.

We are glad to report no ice in the river now. Aunt Amanda Jarrell is still in very bad health. Mrs. Wood Sullivan, Sr., has been very ill the past few days.

Your scribe spent a few hours in Lawrenceburg, one day last week. Mrs. Mary Helm, the mother of the late Everett Helm, is in very poor health.

Rev. Chastain and wife, of Louisville, spent from Saturday until last Monday at this place. Rev. Tanner of the M. E. church filled the pulpit Sunday morning and night at the M. E. church.

J. S. Evans has been very ill for several days at his home in Latonia, but is some better at this writing.

Mr. Editor, the Ground-hog must have saw his shadow from the winter we are having—cold and gloomy.

Mrs. Chas. Klapp of Brookville, Ind., spent several days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. White, here.

W. T. Evans has been confined to his home with a severe cold and cough for the past two weeks. He is not able to be out.

William Ryle fell and hurt himself one day last week while walking on the street. He had been exposed to the cold weather for some time when found.

We are very sorry indeed to hear of Rev. Swindler's death at his home in Latonia. A good man falling asleep. He had charge of the Baptist church here.

Clifford McWethy, of Dillsboro, will locate in the city of Lawrenceburg to practice his profession of dentistry. He is the son of Harry McWethy and wife.

Our little town is a dear spot. A beautiful place to live, good people, the sun shines bright, the grass grows green, and some times we have moonshine on our streets.

Charles Acra, with his fiddle, spent the day with W. T. Evans and wife, one day last week, when he had been listening you would have heard him patting his foot to the strain of his music. It reminded us of days past and gone.

A new type of air suspension of motor car bodies is being used in England, wherein the body floats on a type of encased rubber tubing in such a manner that it acts much the same as a pneumatic tire, permitting the car the same resilience afforded by the pneumatic tire, while at the same time the wheels themselves are shod with less expensive hard rubber tires.

GERGE WASHINGTON—THE AMERICAN.

On February 22, the 192d anniversary of the birth of George Washington, Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary army, and the first President of the United States of America, will be observed in the Senate and House at Washington, and in thousands of public schools and colleges throughout the land by reading his "Farewell Address."

In these times of patriotic stress and trial and disaster effort to belittle or belittles the historic value and splendor and patriotism of our revolutionary forefathers who risked life, liberty, property and happiness in the determination to provide for the generations to follow a free and self-governing nation, it is more necessary than ever before that the example and advice of this the greatest American statesman, should be kept constantly before us.

The man whose birthday we honor on February 22, was in many respects the greatest man this world ever saw, not the greatest soldier; not the greatest statesman, but a character as strong as the highest mountain and as pure as the snow that sleeps on its crest; a man, who, when he lay dead at Mt. Vernon, excited such admiration and regret in defeated England that the fleet lowered its flag; Napoleon in France issued an order to his army to honor his memory; and in the British Parliament Charles Fox paid him a tribute that no monarch of the world ever deserved.

Washington lifted himself above his time; his mind was as broad as the continent; his wisdom was not only for his day, but for our day and all days. And if we have reached the point in our national development when we discard his advice and his councils, whither does the path lead?

It might be well to ask who are the statesmen, who are the leaders, what are the influences that overcome the teachings of this wise American, who declared time and again that he was a nationalist—not an internationalist; an American—not a cosmopolitan nor a hyphenate?

Washington has been pronounced by the greatest students of history and of mankind, a pure and high-minded gentleman of dauntless courage and stainless honor; a great soldier who fought a trying war; a successful and impossible without him; a great statesman who did more than all other men to lay the foundations of a republic which has endured in prosperity for more than a century and whose penetrating vision beheld the future of America when it was dim to other eyes, a great intellectual force, a will of iron, an unyielding grasp of facts, and an unequalled strength of patriotic purpose.

Let every American again read the prophetic words in his "Farewell Address" and dedicate themselves anew to the principles that must stand as fundamental to the perpetuity of this government.

DANGER OF INFECTION TO BABIES

Dr. Juanita McCuff Jennings, Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Hygiene, State Board of Health.

Germs of disease come chiefly from other people's mouths and hands. Be very careful to keep the baby away from anyone who is not perfectly well, and out of crowded places, such as stores, picture shows, etc. So-called common colds, such as running nose, sore throat, bronchitis and the like are easily communicated to children and may be especially serious for the baby, often leading to fatal results.

Do not sneeze or cough in the baby's face. A mother with a cold should protect the baby from catching her own cold, by tying a handkerchief or piece of cheesecloth over her nose and mouth when nursing or caring for her baby. She should not kiss the baby on the mouth. Babies' colds often develop into bronchial pneumonia.

The germs of disease usually enter by way of the mouth. Keep playthings, and everything that has not been thoroughly cleaned out of the baby's mouth. Do not let the baby crawl about on a dirty floor or dusty carpet, where he may come in contact with tuberculosis and other germs. Place him on a clean sheet or blanket. Do not let him suck a pacifier or his thumb.

Flies and mosquitoes may carry disease, such as diarrhoea, summer complaint, etc. Screen the baby's room and keep the crib or carriage covered with mosquito netting.

Measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and diphtheria are very serious diseases for young children. As a child becomes older the danger of fatal results is lessened; therefore the mother should take every precaution to prevent the child from having communicable diseases. Measles and many other diseases begin with a running nose and sore throat; children thus affected should be put to bed and kept isolated from other children in the household.

Kissing the baby and coughing or sneezing near him are common ways of transmitting infection—especially is this true of tuberculosis, a disease to which young children are particularly susceptible.

Richard Marshall and wife have moved to Salem Ridge, Indiana.

KING JAMES BIBLE HELD NOT SECTARIAN

Supreme Court of California Settles Vexed Question.

Washington, D.C.—The Supreme Court of California has decided that King James version of the Holy Bible is neither sectarian nor denominational. The decision affirms the judgment of the Superior Court in Fresno County and reverses the judgment of the California District Court of Appeals.

Those who desired the Bible disbarred from school libraries contended that the state constitutional provision which states that "no publication of a sectarian, partisan or denominational character must be used or distributed in any school, or school library, nor must any sectarian or denominational doctrine be taught therein," was authority for such disbarment.

The Supreme Court, in rendering its decision, stated that:

"The fact that the King James version of the Bible was not approved by all sects of a particular religion, nor by the followers of all religions, would not disqualify it as a religion for library purposes. There is no religion that has found universal acceptance, and therefore no book of religion that has."

"The contention that the Bible in the King James translation is a book of a sectarian character rests on the fact that there are discrepancies between it and, among others, the Douay version; that it is of Protestant authorship; that it is used in Protestant churches, and that it is not approved by the Roman Catholic Church."

"According to such a test, the Bible in any known version or text is sectarian. In fact until all sects can agree upon the manuscript texts that should be used no English version of the Bible, not 'sectarian' in this view, can be produced."

"The mere act of purchasing a book to be added to the school library does not carry with it any implication of the adoption of the theory or dogma contained therein, or any approval of the book itself, except as a work of literature fit to be included in a reference library. For aught that appears in the instant case, the library in question may already contain copies of the Douay version of the Bible as well as of the Talmud, Koran and the teachings of Confucius."

PLANTING FLOWERS IN HUMAN LIFE

"Die when I may" wrote Abraham Lincoln to his friend, Speed, on one occasion, "I want it said of me by those who know me best that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower where I thought a flower would grow."

This superman never spoke carelessly. He knew, as you and I must learn, that what is said of one by the general mass amounts to little or nothing. He had such respect for what "those who knew him best" said that he wanted to deserve their commendation after death.

Great souls are not affected by what the world thinks or says. They listen only to the voice within and the few other voices that come close to them.

If you will eliminate that foolish regard for what people may, will or do say—a fear it soon becomes—you will find your way smoother and easier and your work more successful.

The world at large cannot know you. How then, can it judge you? And what difference does it make if it attempts to judge?

Are you answerable to the world at large, save for respecting its laws?

Perhaps you are one of the few who make it a rule, as Lincoln did, to pluck thistles and plant flowers in place of them.

If so, do you preface your action with a thought as to whether or not a flower will grow where the thistle now is?

For, if you went through the world supplanting all thistles with flowers, you'd soon use a stretch of withered flowers, and you would have wasted many blossoming plants.

As a rule, those who plant flowers in human lives, do it blindly. They seek to think their whole duty consists in sticking the shaft into the soil and hurrying along to duplicate the act as often as possible before the sun sets. Whereas, it is just as important to select your planting ground as to plant your flower.

And one great cause for the common complaint that life seems to yield so little in return for what is given it in the way of time and effort is the misplacement of the effort.

Measure this day's work by this standard of Lincoln's and see where YOU stand!

CONSTANCE.

Preparations are being made for the foundation of the new church.

The Fugate brothers are moving—one to C. O. Hempling's farm at Taylorsport, the other up on the Licking river.

There has been several sales of property here. Julius Bell has sold his farm on Dry Creek above the bridge to Lawrence Michaels, Frank Klaserer has sold the place he bought from Mr. Hyden to Mr. Cotton, Mrs. Tupman has sold the old toll-gate house.

"BACK HOME AND BROKE."

Next Spring—

With over 200,000 orders for Ford Cars and Trucks already placed for delivery during the next few months, we are facing a record-breaking spring demand.

Each successive month this winter has witnessed a growth in sales far surpassing that of any previous winter season. This increase will be even greater during the spring months, always the heaviest buying period.

These facts suggest that you place your order early to avoid disappointment in delivery at the time desired.

SPRING LAMBS

Lexington, Ky.—With reports being received from leading packers and live stock men throughout the country indicating that the Kentucky spring lamb has already established a reputation in the markets of the middle west and the east as the best product of its kind to be obtained, the extension specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture are planning to boost the percentage of trimmed lambs which go to market this year high above that of any previous season by enrolling every sheep producer in the Spring Lamb Improvement Campaign.

"I believe that the consumption of native lambs could be increased 50 per cent on quality alone if the producers of these lambs would castrate their ram lambs when they are young," says R. S. Matheson, head sheep buyer of Swift and Company.

"Docked and castrated lambs this year ran practically one hundred per cent tops, while fifteen per cent of those not so treated were seconds," writes W. S. Bell, President of the Louisville Live Stock Exchange. "The docked and castrated lambs sold at a premium of 50c to $1.25 over the other. When the Kentucky spring lamb is standardized by choice quality, docked and castrated, then it will be a national delicacy and have an unlimited outlet."

"As the buck grows," says George E. Meyers of the Small Stock Department of Wilson & Co., with natural heavy development of the forequarter is putting weight on the lowest selling part of the carcass. One is not looking for the big, coarse neck stock in lambs and were the breeder placed in the position of salesman he would readily see that the greater percentage of such meat through the carcass the less the price realized for the entire carcass."

The Senate Tuesday by a vote of forty-seven to thirty-four requested the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Edward Denby.

President Coolidge answered the Senate request for the resignation of Edwin Denby as Secretary of the Navy with the statement tonight that "no official recognition can be given to the passage of the Senate resolution relative to their opinion concerning members of the Cabinet or other officers under Executive control."

The executive declared he did not propose to sacrifice "any innocent man for my own welfare" nor retain in office "any unfit man for my own welfare."

"As soon as special counsel can advise me as to the legality of these oil leases and assemble for me the pertinent facts in the various transactions," the President added, "I shall take such action as seems essential for the full protection of the public interest."

"I shall not hesitate to call for the resignation of any officials whose conduct in this matter in any way warrants such action upon my part."

WOODROW WILSON

ST LOUIS GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—In view of what we now know he did, and in view of what we now know he did, and in view of the nature of the principles and ideals which he impressed upon the world and which needed no time to make their value known, we do not hesitate to predict that posterity will rank him among the great leaders of the nation of mankind. Woodrow Wilson is dead. But, though dead he lives, and will continue to live. Through his tongue is silent his voice will speak on through the years. And that which he sought to accomplish, and in part did accomplish, will yet be achieved. The torch that he lifted has not gone out, and it will continue to burn, a beacon light upon the highway of human progress.

PHILADELPHIA LEADER—Somehow the countrymen of Woodrow Wilson never understood his human side. Men called him aloof and cold. His intimates knew him better—that splendid mind, functioning as coolly and precisely as a machine in a frigid vacuum, was warmed by his flashes of human tenderness. In his retirement the world and not forgotten him nor had he forgot the world; but his voice was seldom heard and he engaged in few controversies. His home had become the shrine of thousands of Americans who regard him as the stricken comrade of the Unknown Soldier, who rests at Arlington and of all the dead who sleep in France. On his last birthday thousands of men and women stood in the rain in front of his home to do him honor.

NEW YORK WORLD—Woodrow Wilson is not dead. The mind was the man, and it lives. The word was the man, and it did not perish with the racked body, any more than the Gettysburg address was snuffed out by Booth's bullet. The man who fought the fight for democracy in Princeton against caste and wealth, who fought the fight of democracy in Trenton against cliques and bosses, who in Washington led with mastery the intellects of the world in the great war that should have made the world safe for democracy, if we, who are pledged to that faith had done our part, will not be forgotten; nor will the power of his work and words diminish with passing years. If they do not in the end prevail will be the end for civilization.

WASHINGTON POST—Fate, with her dread shares, has cut the thin web of life that was Woodrow Wilson's. The world bids farewell to one who, in his time, played many important roles on a great stage. As educator, historian, student of political institutions, politician, party leader, statesman and President his activities were wide in range. To every part that he played he brought determination, uncompromising steadfastness, unflinching faith, faith in self and cause that knew no waning, and a positiveness that disdained opposition. He was no opportunist, but he was a subject of opportunity. Historians hereafter will review the calmly these times, and will assign to Mr. Wilson the place to which he is entitled. It will be a high place, not only in the annals of the U. S. but of the world.

LOS ANGELES TIMES—America is better, the world is better, because Woodrow Wilson lived, an apostle of peace. He played a deciding part in the greatest war of the ages. When the war was ended he asked for himself and his country nothing. His great hope was to aid the negotiation of a peace that would make such wars in the future impossible. If that high aim was not accomplished is not ultimately accomplished—the fault rests not with him, but with those of his generation who permitted passion, jealousy and the spirit of revenge to postpone to a future generation the fruition of a great hope.

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER—Concerning no other American of this generation has been spoken and written more both in praise and in derogation than of the twenty-eighth President, whose long invalidism onwade in death. A casualty of the great war in as true sense as one who loses his life in camp or on a battle field, Woodrow Wilson gave his all to his country and died at last, a supreme sacrifice to patriotic duty. As America's leader in the great war, as inspired spokesman for democracy the world over, as symbol of the hopes and aspirations of millions for a place in the sun of political opportunity—as such will Woodrow Wilson be judged by future generations.

BALTIMORE SUN—In the 135 years since the adoption of the constitution, which created what was destined to be the mightiest republic in history, the deaths of but three of the 40 men who have occupied the presidential office have been universally recognized as world events and subjects for oral record. In the deaths of Washington and Lincoln the high as well as the humble of every nation on earth recognized the passing of two of the greatest figures among the children of men. In the death of Woodrow Wilson the whole world stands again in mourning and reverential admiration beside the bier of an American President. Washington wrote the first chapter of political freedom in this country and Lincoln the second, while Wilson wrote the third as a Magna for mankind.

Late in the summer of 1919 came his historic collapse. Long before the world even suspected that President Wilson's health slowly was breaking under the tremendous strain, one man knew it—and knew it only too well.

He was Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the executive's personal physician, forewarned by those little things that every good doctor recognizes.

When the president's famous League of Nations speaking tour of the west first was suggested, Dr. Grayson warned him that his physical condition was not equal to the exertion. Wilson bowed to the physician's advice, but a few nights later he changed his mind and decided to make the trip at all costs.

Early next morning Dr. Grayson heard of this and hurried to the president's study.

Bluntly and frankly the physician told his patient that his strength was too feeble for such an ordeal and that his life might be the penalty. Then—speaking now as a friend to friend—he begged him not to attempt the trip, for the sake of himself, his family and his country.

Wilson arose, turned and walked to the window with hands behind his back. For a full minute he stood there, gazing across the White House lawn with eyes that saw nothing. As Dr. Grayson waited in patient silence he could feel the inward emotions of a man struggling with his soul, struggling with the Great Decision.

Suddenly, the president wheeled and faced him. His lip was quivering and big tears glistened on his cheeks. Dr. Grayson said. With an effort, he squared his shoulders and stood stiffly erect. History probably contains no expression of a nobler motive than that which followed the next moment.

"Grayson," he said in low, measured tones, "you are my doctor. I have the utmost confidence in your professional ability. Never before have I disregarded your advice in a matter of this kind. But now I must."

"Those boys who sleep overseas did not fail when the crisis came, and I must not fail now. If circumstances have rendered me so fortunate that I may be the instrument of putting an end to this terrible thing, I cannot shirk the task, cost what it may. It is my duty to them, to man and to God. Grayson, the western trip will be made."

The physician bowed and departed. All the world knows what happened next. It came when the presidential special train, returning from the famous speaking tour to the Pacific Coast, was roaring across the western plains. For days, the sick man had quietly suffered splitting headaches and they were growing worse.

A TYPHOON

One of the great passenger ships of a Pacific line was steaming through the China Sea. Scores of tourists, returning missionaries, business men, army officers and their families, were the sky the peculiar yellowish-green color that means that a typhoon was approaching. The great ship swung around and started full steam ahead for the nearest port. But long before she reached it the typhoon struck. The sun was hidden; night settled down at noon. Mautinuous waves rushed aboard like ravenous beasts trying to tear the great ship into pieces. The passengers were in continual terror.

Suddenly the lookout reported ship on the starboard side. It proved to be a small Chinese junk, the deck of which was crowded with men and women. From the prow a sailor madly signalled the approaching liner.

The captain ordered her to lay to and made arrangements for taking off the passengers. The Chinese ship, but to the amazement of the Chinese put down a small boat. It tossed about like a cork; there did not seem to be the slightest chance that it would ever come up out of the trough of the sea. But as if by a miracle it reached the liner and the men scrambled up the rope ladder. In plain English the new-comers made it known that they did not wish to be taken off; they simply wanted to look at the chart in order to find out where they had been blown. The captain gave them the courtesy of the bridge. Having studied the chart, they rowed back to the junk, hoisted a shred of a sail and started on their way. All they wanted was to know exactly where they were.

It is imperative that a person should know where he is and where he is going. The best of men may temporarily be blown off his course, but all honor to the man, though he be as unprepossessing as the Chinese junk, who, having found what his true position is, steers back to his course in the face of all the obstacles that the powers of evil muster against him.

When a kid is late at school, he may claim that he was not too indolent to get there, but his time was so valuable that he could not spend it on the opening exercises.

CIVIC ENTHUSIASM

Some people carry the boosting spirit so far, that one gets tired of hearing the glories of their home towns extolled. But there are more folks who go equally far to the opposite extreme.

They seem to want to give the impression that they feel superior to their own surroundings. It is out of this that spirit that many town knockers are developed, who are constantly running down the conditions in the community in which they live.

There is nothing winsome in that spirit, and people who have it rarely get the prizes of life. The big rewards go to the folks who are so overflowing with friendliness and enthusiasm, that they see everything in sanguine and happy colors. They would find pleasant and encouraging conditions anywhere. Their hopeful and optimistic spirit encourages other people to do things, and fills a town with a spirit of achievement such that it accomplishes positive results.

In Siberia the ground freezes 100 feet deep.

Miss Blanche Williamson and Ben Slayback were married last Monday. We wish them a long, happy and prosperous life.

It seems that Rabbit Hash is in need of more parking room for automobiles by the side of the crowd that was there Saturday.

Robt. Hankinson and wife have our heartfelt sympathy for the loss of their infant which was buried at Bellevue by the side of Mrs. Hankinson's mother.

JAPAN DEMANDS DEMOCRACY.

Japan is the latest European nation to take a decided stand to break from the grip of an outworn and deeply resented autocracy. The parliament is dissolved and the impending election, if the Liberal forces can present a united front, will undoubtedly result in overthrowing the rule of the House of Peers. The issue in the election will be a straight one between the Bureaucrats on the one hand, and the Liberals on the other, the former seeking to perpetuate autocratic government at the expense of the Constitution; the latter determined to shake themselves free from the political clutches of the Elder Statesmen and establish universal suffrage with a government that will be in fact democratic.

CHILBLAINS.

This is a very painful condition of the skin—usually the skin of the fingers and toes, nose, or ears—caused by cold and dampness. It is more severe than ordinary chapping, but less serious than frostbite. It is more common in England and the northern countries of Europe than it is in the United States, but is by no means uncommon in some parts of our country. CPVPf Laa29 uzgG our country, especially where a considerable degree of cold is combined with much dampness of the air. The condition is favored by living in cold rooms and by exposing the hands to the heat of an open fire. It occurs most frequently in those who are poorly nourished and in persons with sluggish circulation, who have cold hands and feet.

The affected parts turn bluish and shiny. Often they are swollen, and when exposed to the air they itch and burn intolerably, in fact the itching is often the most disagreeable symptom. After a time blisters containing a yellowish fluid form and cause much pain; they soon break, discharging their sticky contents, and then persist as painful ulcers. These form most commonly on the outer side of the feet and the little toes, on the corresponding portions of the hands, and quite often on the ears. They do not show much tendency to heal and, if untreated, persist until mild weather appears.

Persons, especially children, who suffer from chilblains every winter, should have a nourishing diet, containing an abundance of fat. They should try to improve their circulation by cold or cool bathing in water to which sea salt has been added, and by abundant exercise. They should wear woolen stockings, woolen gloves, and roomy shoes. When the ground is wet or covered with snow, they ought to put on waterproof overboots. If woolen stockings or gloves irritate the skin wear them over others of thin silk. Mopping the unbroken skin with spirit of camphor, boric acid solution, or compound tincture of benzoin is useful, and if ulcers have formed dress them with oxide of zinc or balsam of Perdu ointment, or with equal parts of ichthyol and lanolin. Some times salting the parts once or twice with tincture of iodine, before ulceration has taken place, gives relief to the pain and itching. It is a waste of time to say don't scratch—but still, don't scratch.

Prosperity was once determined by the number of new homes being built, but now a community's prosperity is judged by the number of new automobiles it boasts.

It will be fine when all the American people shall hear the debates of Congress by radio, and it might be equally fine if Congress heard the cussing from the country.

NEARLY $12,000,000
PAID MEMBERS OF POOL ON 1923 CROP

HAVE THIRD PAYMENT COMING TO THEM ON 1922 TOBACCO AND TWO MORE DIVIDENDS ON THE PRESENT DELIVERIES.

Nearly $12,000,000 has been paid to tobacco growers who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association since the delivery season of the association began on their 1922 crop. Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Earley, of the big tobacco co-operative, reports in a statement from his office at Lexington.

Mr. Earley said that the association had distributed to its members approximately $70,000,000 since it began to handle tobacco for the growers. Of this amount about $24,500,000 was paid the growers for their 1921 crop, $33,000,000 has been paid to them on that part of their 1922 crop which was sold early in the season and the $12,000,000 paid on the 1923 crop increases the total to slightly more than $70,000,000.

The members of the co-operative have a third payment coming to them on the 1922 crop, and if the association follows the same policy as in previous years in paying for the 1923 crop, they will receive two more payments on the present crop.

The entire tobacco crop of 1920, the last sold under the old system of marketing, brought the growers $26,400,000. The terrific slump in prices between the market years of 1919 and 1920 may be better realized from a comparison of the total paid for the 1920 crop with the amount paid for the 1921 crop over Lexington warehouse floors alone, which was $200,000 more than the entire crop sold for in 1920 in seven states and over 140 warehouse floors.

The Burley co-operative, it was pointed out, already has paid to its members on their 1922 crop $37,200,000 more than the entire 1920 crop sold for, with a third payment coming to the members. It has paid already, on the 1923 crop delivered so far, half as much as the entire 1920 crop sold for, with two payments still coming to the growers.

Contract breakers, it was said, has practically stopped throughout the Burley district, as loyal members are taking a hand in the prosecution of contract violators, and furnishing evidence of their offense in suits of injunction and damages.

FORMATION OF SOCIAL LINES.

A college student remarked recently that there is a considerable difference between the social attitude of many students in the earlier portion of their course, from that which prevails in their senior year. As a freshman and sophomore, he said, the students all seem to feel the need of a democratic spirit. They must be good fellows with the crowd, show themselves generally affable, or they will not form friendships.

But when they become seniors there is a tendency for social lines to stiffen. Those who have acquired social prominence, or the position of those families gives them social position, are often inclined to withdraw from their former democratic attitude.

They feel they are about to come out into a world in which social lines are sharply drawn, and many of them show that they do not care for intimacies with those who lack social prestige.

The democratic spirit, which boys and girls exemplify in their earlier life has something very admirable about it. But it often tends to fade away as young people approach the close of their school courses. In many places social lines seem quite strongly developed in high schools. Young people from obscure families find it difficult to make friends among the more favored elements.

This condition reflects the life of the community as a whole. In spite of our theoretical democratic principles, social lines are drawn with some sharpness in this country. It is of course natural that congenial people should associate with each other, yet when an exclusive spirit divides a community into sets and classes, it is contrary to American ideals. The people who do the finest work in the world disregard these false and artificial lines, and recognize that talent and fine personality are found in all elements of society.

HIS OWN OPINION

Some people when they put on their Sunday suit and call up their radio-meeting smile and go to church and contribute a nickel to help the preacher and seven kids to live on bacon and beans, think they are saints and traveling the straight and narrow road to the home of everlasting bliss. While their neighbor who had no Sunday suit, stayed at home and read his Bible and sent a poor widow woman and her children a fat hen for their dinner.—Ex.

ESTIMATE WEALTH OF THE STATE OF KENTUCKY

Washington, D. C.—The Department of Commerce announces for the State of Kentucky, its preliminary estimate of the value, December 31, 1922, of the principal forms of wealth, the total amounting to $3,582,787,000, as compared with $2,225,353,000 in 1913, an increase of 60.3 per cent. Per capita value increased from $963 to $1,459, or 51.5 per cent.

All classes of property increased in value from 1913 to 1922, except live stock, which decreased, from $135,524,000 to $112,090,000, or 17.5 per cent. The estimated value of taxed real property and improvements increased from $1,023,754,000 to $1,683,911,000 or 64.5 per cent; exempt real property from $115,679,000 to $181,028,000 or 56.6 per cent; farm implements and machinery from $21,962,000 to $24,593,000 or 57.5 per cent. No comparison is possible for the value of motor vehicles, which was estimated in 1922 at $57,337,000, because no separate estimate was made in 1913.

In making these estimates the Department followed in general the methods employed in making the estimates for 1913, though it is believed that in some respects the work in 1922 has been more thorough. It should be borne in mind that the increases in money value are to a large extent due to the rise in prices which have taken place in recent years, and as far as that is the case they do not represent corresponding increases in the quantity of wealth.

THE BONUS AND TAXES.

A resolution before congress calls for an investigation to determine whether the fight for the Mellon tax plan is not propaganda.

If the conditions of the American Legion are true, there may be some foundation for the charge that selfish interests are at work in an effort to prevent the ex-service men from being rewarded by the government.

The Legion contends that congress can safely reduce taxes to the amount proposed, with reasonable assurance that the government's ordinary expenses will be met, the national debt reduced as provided by law and the long over due obligation to the veterans provided for without resort either to new taxes or new loans.

If this be true, certainly no good American is going to object to voting a bonus to those who were responsible for winning the tide of battle for the allies when their outlook was black.

And the Legion has some convincing figures. They show, taking the secretary of the treasury's own estimates, that after reducing the national debt by all of the requirements of sinking fund and other provisions of the present fiscal year, before any adjusted compensation payments are scheduled to begin, a balance of at least 700 million dollars, or nearly twice as much as Secretary Mellon estimates that adjustment of compensation will cost for the following three years, or until June 30, 1927—namely, $450,000,000.

A highly organized effort has been made to convince the public and that taxes can't be reduced and the bonus paid. But the people are fair and the American Legion is entitled to a hearing—very much entitled to one.

LET'S HAVE THE FACTS

A fair and impartial investigation of the naval oil reserve leases is all that will satisfy the people of the United States, since the senate inquiry has served to stir up a scandal and has proved nothing.

The effort by either party to make political capital out of the unfortunate incident will be condemned by everyone who wants to see fair play. Injection of politics into the senate investigation has ruined its chances of accomplishing anything worth while and the suggestion of an official cast a reflection on the official life of Washington.

There are far too many people who believe that public officials are bribed by the "wholesaler"; far too many who, in their insatiable search for sensations, want to believe that public servants are dishonest, if they cannot find the least trace of evidence to support it.

We must have faith in the men we elect to office, else our representative form of government is a failure. We must believe in their integrity and must rely on their judgment in matters of public welfare.

When anyone attacks the character of an office holder, the motives involved must be considered and the charges are based on the fact that should be broadcasted to the world with the same degree of publicity as was given the charges.

When political factors become a part of an investigation, it is well to examine the motives. Political persons are all tarred with the same brush.

THE "POLITICIAN"

A favorite way for thoughtless people to condemn a man in public life is to call him a "politician."

Rabid and sensational metropolitan newspapers are in a large measure responsible for this point of view. Office holders who will not do their bidding are branded as "politicians" and in the minds of those who fail to think for themselves, nothing could be worse.

But what is a politician? The definition of the word discloses that a politician is one engaged in politics. Politics is the administration of public affairs. So by the simple process of reasoning, we arrive at the conclusion that a politician is one experienced in the administration of public affairs.

It is so horrible to be versed in public affairs? Yet implications have perverted the use of the word "politician" until many regard offices created for the service of the people the least desirable of all vocations in life.

There are those, of course, who are not thus deluded. They realize that men and women trained by experience are needed in public life just as they are needed in any private corporation or small business.

Politicians, if you please, people versed in the art of public business—not machine politicians, not errand boys or disreputable "ward heelers" but clean, honest and reputable citizens who realize that politics offers a useful career.

Men and women of talent and ability should enter the field of politics but many are going to remain on the outside until the stigma is removed from the "politician."

DR. A. H. McGLASSON DEAD

Albert Henry McGlasson, was born May 13, 1872, died Feb. 8th, 1924. The early part of his life was spent on his father's farm at Constantine, Ky., where he was born.

He was a student of Nelson's Business College, later graduating from the Ohio Veterinary College in 1894.

On April 6th, 1898, he was united in marriage to Miss Carrie Kottmyer of Constantine, Ky. To this union were born three daughters, Harriet, Janet and Edna.

Albert McGlasson practiced his profession for a short time at Erlanger, Ky., when he went to Madison, Indiana, where he located permanently, practicing his profession for over 25 years, and becoming a valued citizen of Madison.

He was secretary and treasurer of the school board for two terms, also serving two terms on the Indiana State Board of Health at the same time.

He also served three terms as president of the City Board of Health.

Three months ago, on account of his health, he was compelled to give up all active business at which time he removed to Cincinnati. Ten days before his death he failed rapidly, up to then his loved ones had hopes for his recovery.

He was an honorary member of Madison Lodge, Knights of Pythias. The 10th of Feb. at Oakley, Ohio, K. of P. Lodge members held the last rites over the body of their departed brother.

The regular funeral services were held Feb. 11th, 1924, at Wirt Funeral Home at 130 p. m., burial at Highland cemetery, Ft. Mitchell, Ky. Those left to mourn his loss beside his widow and three daughters, are his aged mother, two sisters, and four brothers, and a host of friends.

EVERYBODY PLANT A GARDEN.

Surprise is often manifested because so many people living in country towns, some of them being farmers themselves, have no vegetable garden. It is one of the important advantages of country life that it usually gives one the chance to raise a supply of vegetables.

Fresh and toothsome vegetables picked out of one's own garden are a delight to every lover of good living. Many people in distant cities long for this form of abundance which can be had here at small cost. Scientists emphasize the idea that vegetables should have a prominent place in people's diet, and the folks who raise a garden this summer will promote health as well as thrift.

WILSON'S LITERARY GIFTS

When one comes to analyze the qualities that led to President Wilson's remarkable rise, much important must be given to his wonderful gifts as a writer and orator.

This power was not merely in the felicitous choice of eloquent words. His utterances seemed to be touched and permeated by a certain lifeliness and enlightenment of conception. It seemed as if the suggestions and thoughts that were offered were on a higher level of human purpose and achievement. One might disagree radically with his conclusions, yet his power to present ideas in a fascinating and gripping way has rarely been equaled, and had a large share in his success as a leader of thought.

THE MUSCLE SHOALS PROBLEM.

Congress will not let the Muscle Shoals question lie dormant.

President Coolidge did not hesitate to discuss Muscle Shoals in his message. As in other matters, he states his position frankly. He said that the person or corporation purporting the property should be required to give adequate guarantee to experiment until a process has been developed for the production of cheap nitrates.

The farmer's interest and the interest of the nation in Muscle Shoals alike is in the possibility of cheap nitrates. The farmers need it for soil nourishment, the government for military purposes.

The President proposes to get down to brass tacks in the latter, get at the production of nitrates in the shortest way possible, and write off whatever expenditure may be necessary to get action—The Knickerbocker Press, Albany, N. Y.

RECOGNIZE THE YOUNGSTER.

Do you speak to boys and girls of your acquaintance?

This inquiry is addressed to men and women who have reached their majority and who have made a place for themselves in the community.

All too few can answer that they do.

They don't give boys and girls they know the friendly nod as they pass them on the street.

It is not because they don't want to speak. It is due to their thoughtlessness—just plain carelessness.

How many will resolve here and now never to pass a boy or a girl from this day forth without some sign of greeting?

If you could but appreciate what it means to the youngsters. You can, if you will go back in your book of memories and recall the days of your childhood.

Remember the man or the woman who always "knew" you? To this day you have a very fond remembrance of those persons who were never too busy, never too engrossed by their own affairs to recognize you with a nod of the head, a wave of the hand or a smile.

You know how their word of encouragement helped you along when you thought your burdens were heavy. You know that their recognition made you feel that you were of some importance in the world after all, and gave you a new grip on yourself.

Don't slight the boys and girls who are going to be the men and women of the community a few years hence. Give them a boost.

Speak to them. It makes no difference if you don't know their name. The point is—speak.

THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY

It would take many editorial articles to detail all the services that country life renders to the nation as a whole. We have in recent issues tried to briefly mention a few of them. Many others could be named.

The question now arises, when one perceives what an absolutely vital factor the country communities are to the nation, what obligation that imposes on the people who live in cities and large towns? What do they owe the rural communities? Also what will it be for their advantage to do, to help keep up the rural communities?

If the rural communities are allowed to decline or suffer neglect, the cities will suffer very seriously. It is like the organs of the body. A man can not say that he will simply feed his stomach and pay no attention to his heart. If he abuses one organ to favor some other, the neglected function will soon break down.

It will pay for the people of the cities to deal generously with the country towns. The latter can not usually out of their own wealth alone keep up social institutions to the standard of modern efficiency. Unless they get help from outside, they are likely to have inferior roads and other facilities.

A portion of the great amounts collected in taxation from the wealth of the cities should be devoted to building up those rural institutions that are so vital to the welfare of the whole country. Money put in them will bring returns to the cities by turning out a generation of well-trained young people who will operate the business of the country efficiently.

Thursday evening of last week a team of horses hitched to a road wagon and belonging to Asa McMullen, from which he had just finished unloading a load of tobacco, and it's store, and went into to make a purchase, and when the horses suddenly became frightened and ran away. The team of frightened animals went out the East Bend road at breakneck speed and were not checked until they had reached the hill just beyond A. L. Nibbel's residence. Fortunately no damage was done and it was lucky no one was on to read at the time.

CARVE YOUR NICHE.

Have you carved your niche in the community you call home? Rather a pertinent question, perhaps, but listen.

We once heard of a man who applied for membership in a lodge. The name was referred to a committee for investigation.

Only one man on the committee knew the applicant. Who is he? What does he do? What church does he belong to? Who are his friends? There are only a few of the questions that were asked when his application was being considered.

No one could answer them, except one acquaintance, who knew his name and where he worked.

What did the committee decide? That a man who had lived in the community as long as he had and had made no more of an impression on it than he, would be of no value to the lodge as a member.

Impression have you made after living here as long as you have? When your name is mentioned, do people think of you as standing for something definite, as having left your impress upon them?

It is a question that everyone may ask himself or herself.

Carve your own niche and zealously stand by it.

Stand for something.

THESE ARE TRYING TIMES

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," wrote Shakespeare, and he wrote true, for when we dissent from our hobbies, at our speeders, and stand on level footing with our fellows, we can see that we are kinfolk, and must admit whether we will or not.

Some times we don't like to admit it, and yet we always feel a lot better when we do. True, we get stuck up sometimes and have a sort of grand, gloomy, and peculiar feeling which, for the time, is very satisfying.

But it is only for the time, for when we lay aside our fine clothes and special airs we realize that we are merely men, just human beings, beset by common frailties, and liable to common ills and failures.

These are trying times, trying the theories and methods and manners of all men. And you may depend upon it that those which are found wanting will be cut off even at the expense and inconvenience of those who have acted unwisely.

Judgment days come from time to time, whether for men, or states, or nations, and come they will as long as man needs to be judged, and that will be until he has learned to do right for right's sake.

There is no judgment for the righteousness, nor for the just, but only for those who act unjustly and fail to live right.

Those who have lived justly and rightly have no cause for alarm in such times as these, for during the long period of prosperity through which our country has come, every man has had his opportunity without violating the law or trust reposed in him.

Nor can they acclaim that they were blinded by the glare of prosperity, for good men, like Noah of old, were handier than those who heard the warnings, heeded them, but went on their way.

The fault lies with them.

HEALTH IN COUNTRY LIFE

Did you ever hear of a family whose members had not been well in a country town, but who on going to a city wrote back that they had all improved in health? It may happen some times, but it would be unusual.

Yet how often it happens that people will move out from some city location, in order to get better health conditions, and are delighted to find that country life puts new vigor into them.

The fresh air and out door life of the healthful working conditions in a country shop or store, are a splendid tonic. Such a change is a wonderful advance for a family, since it increases their working power, and sooner or later must promote their material prosperity.

THE LOCAL TIE

Some people are pure individualists, and they go through life sufficient unto themselves. They may be able to take care of themselves, but they do not commonly reach the higher results, because they do not make many warm friends.

Other people feel keenly the ties that bind them to others. It is second nature for them to support the enterprises and activities of their home town. If some one suggests that they might gain some supposed advantage by buying merchandise elsewhere, the thing goes against their grain.

What will I gain by buying elsewhere, when my own town people, whose prosperity and welfare is essential to the advance of my community, is selling the same stuff? they say. Their instinct of town fraternity tells them to stand by their home industries. People of that type do not wait for friends when they are looking for co-operation.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The members of the Burlington M. E. church assisted by members from other churches very delightfully entertained at the Boone House, last Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Penn and family, who are moving to Covington the first of next month. Five years ago they came to Burlington from Scott county—strangers among strange people, and who have, during their stay here won the respect of the old as well as the young. A real sumptuous banquet resulted, and a general good time was enjoyed by the twenty-five or more persons present. "I hate to see them go!" Such are the sentiments of every citizen in Burlington and surrounding vicinity, who have known them. No other people in the time, have so endeared themselves in the hearts of their people. There are many reasons—their happy smile of greeting, their quiet unassuming manners, their interest and cooperation in every plan for the betterment of the civic, social and spiritual life of Burlington, and for these reasons, Burlington people are loath to give them up, and everyone joins with the Recorder in wishing them health and happiness wherever they may cast their lot.

Mr. Chester Hill, of near Idlewild, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Friday afternoon, and while in town called at this office and handed us a copy for a public sale of personal property, which will be Friday, Feb. 29th, beginning at 10 o'clock (noon). Mr. Hill rented the Len Utz farm in Union neighborhood and does not want to move this property. Mr. Hill is one of the county's hustling farmers. He has already delivered 21,000 pounds of tobacco to the pool at Aurora, Ind., for which he received 10c on first payment and has about 6,000 pounds more to strip.

The housing proposition in Burlington has become a serious matter. Rents are almost prohibitive, and people are kept from being citizens of Burlington from the fact that they cannot find a house to rent. For instance, just a few days since there was a house and lot for sale and there were a half dozen persons after it, but it was sold before the owner had time to move out. There are now about a dozen applicants for houses to rent.

A number of residences in Burlington have been wired for electricity, and the owners hope that the company will have the high tension line completed at an early date. W. C. Weaver was the first to have lights in his residence after being wired—he hooked up to W. L. Kirkpatrick's plant—and now he backs back in his arm chair, when everything is as black as night, his good wife busy putting the dishes away, as reads by electric lights.

There are 1850 dogs listed in the county, with an approximate estimate of that many more not listed. Up to date, taxes have been paid on 754 dogs. The dog without a tag is liable to get in bad with the Sheriff, who is allowed $2 for each one he kills. A state representative has said there will be no "Morrow pardons" this year for those who have failed to pay their dog tax.

N. O. Gray, Assistant Tax Commissioner, head of the Automobile Department, Frankfort, paid $113,560.38 into the Auditor's office, on Thursday, Feb. 14th for the week ending February 9th, for automobile licenses, making a total to that time on 1924 licenses of $1,996,320.16.

More sheep were killed in Boone county during the year 1923, than for any other year since the present law has been in force. Prior to 1923 there has been a balance in this fund that had been paid to the school fund of this county, after all claims and damages for sheep killed and injured by dogs had been paid.

Tomorrow is Washington's birthday and both local banks will be closed and there will be no rural mail delivery. There will be no more holidays until April 1—all fool's day then we can all take a day off.

The old-fashioned mother who used to raise the dough with baking powder, has a daughter who uses considerable dough to keep herself supplied with face powder.

E. G. Cox, one of the good citizens of Petersburg neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday he made this office a pleasant call.

Burlington Masonic Lodge will have work in the master's degree next Saturday evening, beginning at 7.30. Two candidates will be raised.

Robins, the first harbinger of spring, were seen in Burlington last Thursday, St. Valentine's Day.

Your neighbor is entitled to his opinions, even though you don't agree with him.

KENTUCKY DOINGS.

The extent of the breach between the Republican organization and the Republican administration in Louisville clearly was shown by an incident of the selection of delegates from Louisville to the Republican State Convention.

When the list of delegates was published it was found that the name of Mayor Huston Quinn was missing.

It was well known that the Mayor was not in favor with the Searcy-Chilton organization, and this failure to send the Republican Mayor of the largest city in the state as a delegate to the convention was recognized as a notice to all concerned that the Mayor is outside the breastworks and that his day of favor with the powers that control Fifth District Republican politics is ended.

When the attention of Chesley Searcy, acknowledged "boss," was called to the omission of Mayor Quinn from the delegate list, he proffered an explanation that dug the hole into which they had dropped the Mayor still deeper. He said the Mayor has been left out of the convention "by one of those oversights that just can't be explained." They had just forgotten the Mayor, that was all.

However, they added the Mayor to the list, which made matters a little worse than the omission had made them after the original jolt.

The Bingham papers, which fought Cantrell so bitterly, have been supporting the anti-racing campaign, although Judge Bingham was one of the organizers of the Kentucky Jockey Club and made a speech on behalf of the breeders and against a similar bill when it was presented in the Legislature two years ago. Thursday the session there has been evidence that the Barkley campaign did not end the first Saturday in August, but has been carried into the General Assembly.

Two interests to which Kentucky looks for fame and prosperity fared ill in the legislative halls at Frankfort last week.

Horses and coal, one representative of the sentimentality, the other of the material wealth of the state, were the House of Representatives has passed a bill reducing the tax rate on lands from 40 cents to 30 cents, and have also passed the anti race bill which abolishes pari-mutuel betting at race tracks. The tracks have paid annually taxes amounting to more than $250,000.

The income of the State has been materially reduced by the passage of these two bills and there must now be a reduction in the expenses of the state. The state debt must be increased which is bound to occur when bills are passed that reduce revenue and expense are not reduced like amount.

The Lexington Herald on the race track question says in part:

A MOVE TO RESTORE THE RULE OF THE BOOKMAKERS

A majority of the members of the house of representatives of the Kentucky legislature have declared themselves to favor the restoration of the rule of the bookmaker.

No matter what may be the actual motive which inspired the vote of any member to repeal the statute authorizing the use of the pari-mutuel machines, the effect of that vote is to restore the rule of the bookmakers in Kentucky.

There are some men who voted for the repeal of that section of the law who have been misled, and sincerely believe that the movement they voted to support is a move forward to good morals and good conduct.

But they are under a misapprehension, and should that movement succeed, and that provision of the statute be repealed, they would find that they had simply restored the rule of the bookmaker; that for a system of wagering under which there was deducted from the amount wagered 5 per cent, which was given in stakes and purses, and used in payment of taxes and improvement of the tracks, they have caused to be restored a system under which bookmakers would make books with a per cent against the betters of from 15 to 30 per cent, all of which would be kept by the bookmakers.

They would find instead of a system under which a man can bet that a horse will win, they had restored a system under which a man can bet that a horse will lose; that they had restored a system under which crooked gamblers, crooked owners and crooked trainers can lay against a horse winning.

It is of both interest and value to analyze the influence that led to the action of the majority of the house of representatives.

The movement that resulted in the passage of that bill has been led by a group of adroit, ambitious and ruthless politicians as ever operated in Kentucky. There has been no combination that group would not make, no tool it would not use, no method it would not follow to accomplish its purpose.

Misrepresentation of actual facts, skillful and insidious appeal to the credulity of connoisseurs and sincere opponents of gambling; equally skillful appeal to the political ambition and cupidity of others, have been a part of the campaign which reached its crest in the vote of the house of representatives.

The members of that group know the effect of the passage of that bill that it would mean the restoration of the bookmakers. They know that to stop betting on racing they must stop racing. If they were sincere in their proclaimed opposition to betting they would advocate the stopping of racing instead of the transfer of the control of racing to bookmakers.

But to accomplish their purpose they have waged a campaign of hypocrisy, tarty impervious to the tremendous financial loss they will inflict upon Kentucky, utterly regardless of the damage they will do to a great sport and a great industry.

On the very day of the vote in the house deals were reported to have been made for the protection of certain interests. These reports will either be verified or disproven by the action of certain men within the near future. If they are disproven, we shall make public acknowledgment of that fact. If they are proven we shall name those whom we now believe and shall then be certain made the deals, using the sincere and honest opponents of gambling as mere pawns in the game they were playing.

Speaking for ourselves alone, in no wise voicing a suggestion from any other, we should greatly prefer to have an act passed to prohibit racing than the act that was passed by the house of representatives.

We do not want to see another clique like Cella, Tilles and Adler in control of racing in Kentucky. We do not want to see the bookmakers again in position not only to take from the public unaccounted toll through syndicate books made on from fifteen to thirty per cent, but also have the opportunity to profit through crooked racing.

We do not want to see the political sharps and sharks who have engineered the movement to repeal the statute permitting the pari-mutuels be in position to continue to trade and dicker and profit by misleading the honest and sincere, and using them as pawns in their game.

We recognize fully the tremendous financial shock it would be to the Blue Grass, to all of Kentucky in the depreciation in the value of thoroughbred and trotting horses and of farm lands, should either the bill to restore the bookmakers or a bill to prohibit racing be enacted into law.

But of the two we prefer the latter, preferring the sudden and clean death of a splendid sport and great industry to a dragging illness marred with the festering sores and corruption that would come with the return of the bookmakers.

According to government reports 2,452 men were killed by accidents in American coal mines last year. This means that for every 250,000 tons of coal brought to the surface one man's life was forfeited. It is argued that a man has got to die some time anyway, but added to the cost of coal it is a pretty stiff price to pay. Some day perhaps coal mining will become a white man's job—but not under present conditions.

Buckeyes

Don't depend on the Uncertain Hen

More than 700,000 of the most successful poultry raisers in America use Buckeyes. Take a look through the testimonials in that interesting booklet of ours entitled "The Verdict of the User," and note how many of the big prize winners admit that the size and quality of their Buckeye-hatched chicks has been responsible in large part for their success.

Sixteen hundred of the most successful baby-chick hatcheries in America are using BUCKEYE MAMMOTH INCUBATORS. These hatcheries have egg capacities from 50,000 up to a million, and up to date EVERY commercial hatchery equipped with Buckeyes has been a financial success. THAT'S SOME RECORD!

The elimination of the nursery from Buckeye Incubators has saved the lives of millions of baby chicks. White diarrhea is an almost unknown quantity when the chicks are kept in a uniform temperature instead of subjecting them to the sudden chill when they are dumped into the so-called nursery. (See Page 18 of the Buckeye catalog.)

Buckeye ranks first in the point of sales and quality in every branch of our endeavor; Commercial incubators (up to 600-egg size) coal-burning brooders, Mammoth Incubators and Blue-Flame Brooders. It is most unusual for any manufacturer to hold the leadership in every item they build.

The Buck Incubator Co. started in business over 35 years ago and has been at it continuously ever since. During this entire period we have been building the most efficient poultry-raising equipment on the market and have never hesitated to build and advocate those devices which were better than those which had gone before—whether it was our invention or not.

Incubators..... $16.50 to $107.00. Brooders..... $11.75 to 30.00.

Alabama's new plan of employing convicts is to lease them to the state, and the state will mine the coal at a given price per ton. This will relieve the coal companies of any responsibility to the convicts and their families, as the state will have absolute charge of the convicts inside and outside the mines. The operation of the plan will be watched with interest.

The hauling of tobacco has torn the roads considerably. The many friends of N. B. Kirtley regret to see him move to Indiana. Clements of the Hathaway neighborhood, has the whooping cough.

Huey Kirtley and family, of near Buffalo Ridge, expect to move to Erlanger soon.

James K. Sebree is traveling with his brother, Frank H. Sebree and family.

Mrs. Francis Shinkle is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, of Nonpareil Park.

Several from here attended the automobile contest held at Rising Sun, Ind., Thursday.

A number of persons from this vicinity attended the sale of Murl Allen held near Patriot, Ind., Tuesday.

A very small crowd attended services at Big Bone Baptist church Sunday morning, due partly to the wet.

J. L. Aylor little son of John A. Aylor, who has been seriously ill with bronchial pneumonia, is recovering slowly.

Miss Sarah Nell Cleek has been teaching the primary grades at Harborton school the past week in place of her sister, Ruth Cleek, who is having trouble with her eye.

Morris Rice had a serious accident Thursday morning, while trying to pass a machine the tire of the machine he was driving ran off and caused the machine to turn over, wrecking it considerably. Fortunately Mr. Rice escaped unhurt.

UNION.

Only two cases of scarlet fever—both doing fine.

About twenty-five cases of measles around Union.

The many friends of Mrs. Martha Huey was sorry to hear of her illness.

Mrs. Bertha Smalley, of Columbus, Ohio, is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. H. Garber.

L. T. Utz and wife, of Burlington spent Sunday with Rev. J. H. Garber and family.

Misses Marietta and Eugenia Riley spent the week-end with their brother, Harry Riley.

Mrs. Martha Huey, who was operated on for appendicitis at St. Elizabeth hospital, is doing nicely.

TAX REDUCTION
Revision of the revenue laws and reduction of taxation will be of no lasting benefit to the country unless the taxation remains lowered. A reduction in this year's taxes to be followed by a deficit and a consequent increase in next year's levy would be worse than the present.

It is to be assumed that the Treasury Department's estimate of the amount that taxes can be lowered is based on the best estimates possible. But assurances that lower taxation has come to stay can only lie in a gradual tightening of the expenditure limits, the steady elimination of unnecessary government bureaus, and the practice of wise economy all along the line.

The first report of a Congressional committee on an appropriation measure is a satisfying indication that government is moving in the right direction. The Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives reported the annual supply bill for the Interior Bill, after having slashed budget estimates by $10,000,000, making amount recommended for operation of the department during the next fiscal year $35,792,044 below the appropriation made for the department's activities during the present fiscal year.

There are points below which reduction in revenues cannot safely go. Government functions must continue, and their continuance will always cost money. But the limits of reduction have not yet been reached.

ANOTHER OLD CONFEDERATE SOLDIER GONE

Moses Scott died at his home near Rabbit Hash Friday, Feb. 15th, in his 82nd year. He was one of our oldest and most respected citizens, honored and respected by all who knew him. He responded to the call to arms in the conflict between the states and made a valiant soldier in the army of his choice, which was with his Confederate companions.

He represented his people as a Justice of the Peace and member of the local court, and no one can point his finger at a single official act that is not fair and honest to all. He retired from office to private life Dec. 1913, and enjoyed the sunset of life with his family and friends, those whom he loved best. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was buried with the honors of that order Sunday morning Feb. 17th, at 11 o'clock.

He is survived by his widow, son, brother and a number of relatives and friends who extend to the bereaved family their sympathy.

HEBRON.

Mrs. Chas. Garnett, who has been confined to her bed for several months, does not improve. Owing to the very bad weather last Sunday morning there were no church services at Hebron.

Hubert Conner and family spent Sunday with their daughter Mrs. Ralph Jones and Mr. Jones.

Miss Nannie Lodge spent from Sunday until Thursday of last week with her aunt, Miss N. Louise Lodge of Ludlow, who was very ill.

Arthur Garnett and wife, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Chas. Goodridge, and son of Latonia, were guests of their mother, Mrs. Charles Garnett, one day last week.

Mrs. Lizzie Boggs (nee Hamilton) of Cincinnati, was the guest of Mrs. Amanda Lodge and daughter last Friday night and Saturday, and Sunday she was the guest of Robert L. Aylor and family.

James Beall is at home sick with the mumps.

Lee Craddock had his sale Saturday afternoon.

L. H. Sprague, of Indiana, is visiting relatives here.

Lewis Riddell, of Ludlow, is working in the garage at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pierce are entertaining a young son since February 4th.

Mrs. G. S. Aylor and son of Ludlow, called on relatives at this place last Sunday.

Mrs. Earl Aylor and Mrs. Phelps Walton were shopping in the city Wednesday.

Mrs. Huey Aylor, who has been quite sick for several weeks, is slowly improving.

Lela Gossage of Cleveland, Ohio, is spending the winter with her aunt Mrs. Theo. Barnella.

RABBIT HASH.
Wither Acta has been sick. Moving time is drawing near.

Robert Stephens is visiting at Lavine Stephens.

There are a few cases of mumps in this vicinity.

Hubert Ryle has purchased a new Ford touring car.

Raymond Acta is now mate on the U. S. Steamer Ottawa.

Checker playing is the order of the day at this place.

Hugh Stephens has purchased a new Star touring car.

Paul Acta broke his arm while cranking his Ford Saturday.

Heleen Clene, who has been confined to her home, is improving.

Cecil Williamson purchased a cow from Raymond Hankinson Saturday.

Louise Aylor has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Mamie Hankinson, the past week.

C. W. Gibbs, our local blacksmith, of Rising Sun, moved to this side of the river last week.

Moses Scott, an old citizen of this place, quietly passed away last Friday, and was buried at Bellview Sunday. He leaves one son, wife, one brother and many other relatives and friends to mourn his death, who have our sincerest sympathy.

If the schools cost an awful lot of money, but uneducated people cost the people of Kentucky much more.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN SCHOOLS COMPARED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14.—Dr. John Adams of London University, in addressing the annual convention of the Oregon State Teacher's Association, showed similarities and differences in British and United States schools in a highly original manner. He said in part:

"American schools offer to their pupils education à la carte. In England we give them the course table d'hôte. Here you allow them to pick and choose. There we give them the things that are for so long been required and insist that they take them all without turning aside for other things that they may like better."

"The course of study in the United States is the more practical, while that in England is more classical and more in accord with the traditions of the pupils' forebears."

"Schoolmasters are more in evidence in England than in this country, where so many women teach. In England there is a schoolmaster to every three and one-half women teachers, while in the United States the proportion is one to eight. It would be desirable to have more men teachers in the upper grades and in high schools of this country, not because women teachers are less efficient than men, but that boys, as they grow older, need the contact with and direction by men."

"However, in my opinion, the charge sometimes made that the dominance of women teachers in our schools has ended to make the youth effeminate is not borne out by the facts. Best evidence of this is the fine character of the young men who went from the United States to fight in the World War."

REMOVE THE BARNACLES

According to Washington newspapers and special representatives the end of the oil-cruise scandals is far from being reached, and no one can tell what or who may next be enmeshed. It is broadly asserted that influential political leaders and financiers in all parties are quietly bringing pressure to bear to check further disclosures, on the ground that the people are losing faith and respect for their government and faith in their officials.

It is true that a crisis in public opinion has arisen, and will long endure. The disclosures have been a staggering shock to people more or less indifferent to affairs of government and it is too much to expect that they will pass it by lightly.

Reports received from all parts of the nation indicate that these revelations of "high finance" involving bucket shops and cabinet dignitaries and "sharks" have already created more so-called "radicals" or political independents than all other combined causes have done in a generation. When men ranking high in industry and in public office are discovered in shameful traffic for their own gain, it is something more than partisan politics, for it justifies and stimulates a resentment that has been smoldering among agriculturalists and industrialists for some years.

Any attempt to suppress or varnish over, or condone or excuse any man in any manner connected with the prostitution of public trust, will be the greatest mistake political leaders ever made. The only way to restore the confidence of the people is to be true to the line and eliminate the barnacles.

THINK THIS OVER

The farmers' and manufacturers' convention recently held in New York was a practical step in working out the theory of unity of interest between these two groups.

John M. Kelley of Baraboo, Wisconsin, vice-president of the National Holstein Association, in discussing cooperative marketing and emphasizing the necessity of modern business methods in farming said: "No industry can survive and follow the methods that obtain in farming. If Rockefeller handled his business as farming is conducted, gasoline would sell at five dollars a gallon to pay cost of operation."

"America's greatest problem is to teach the farmer how to produce on a quality basis and sell on a paying basis."

Commenting on the harm of high taxes, Geo. F. Heindel, vice-president of Phoenix Trust Co., of Ottumwa, Iowa, said that in some localities taxes on farm lands have increased ten years three, four and five-fold. In speaking of the Treasury's plan for tax reduction he said:

"This is not Secretary Mellon's problem; it is not your problem or my problem; it is not the problem of the banker, or the farmer, the manufacturer or the mechanic, the landlord or the tenant. It is the problem of all of us. It reaches into our pockets and takes twelve and one-half cents out of each dollar it finds there; it reduces every ton of coal to 1760 pounds; it cuts a slice from a ten-cent loaf of bread and two ounces from a pound of meat. It will not be solved by political bickering, by criminality or recrimination, by demagogues or radicals, but by the sane, sober thought and political action of the sane, sober, honest people of this nation."

Most people show splendid indignation over political wrongs when the same are committed by the party to which they do not belong.

A CONTRAST

The citizen who stands on the street corner, with his hands stuffed down in his pockets, his shoulders stooped and a sneer on his face, is of no value to any community.

He is the fellow who says the fire department doesn't know how to fight a fire, and tells how it ought to be done. But he never lends a hand.

He is the fellow who complains about the rats in the streets, but he hasn't paid any taxes for years and of course doesn't help keep them in condition.

He is the fellow who finds fault with the public schools and the teachers, but never did anything in his life to improve the schools.

He is the fellow who condemns everything and sees no good in anything.

You all know him and his type. The sooner he leaves us, the sooner we will be able to move forward.

Contrast him with the citizen who is a booster and may be counted on to help every worthy cause.

This type of citizen pays his debts and his taxes, stands for everything that is for the betterment of the place where he lives and never allows his enthusiasm for his home town to lag.

He is an asset to any community. It is one of his class who are responsible for all of the improvements that are made. We owe it to him that we have as good streets as we do, that our school system is as modern as it is and that we live in a place that we can boast of to our friends.

Classify yourself and see which class you belong to, which type you match. If you belong to the former, it's time for rejuvenation. If you belong to the latter, more power to you.

TOO MUCH EDUCATION

This is the day of the specialist. In law, in surgery, in medical practice, in the machine shop, the tannery, the shoe factory, glass factory, every operation is the result of systematic study to save motions. Colleges and schools specialize in education, and almost everything in life is reduced to a scientific system. Success requires specialization. The all-round man, the handy man, cuts but little figure.

Not so long ago science contended that the farmer should specialize in his crops. Thousands of young men were trained to go out on the farms analyze the soil, and encourage specialization in crops for which it was best fitted. Today specialists insist, and have convinced the President that concentration on wheat crops, corn crops, hay-crops and cotton crops is the real cause of trouble with farmers. He is now told to diversify—to junk his special equipment and become a huckster if he would be successful. With all this advice the farmer is between the devil and the deep blue sea. The only thing he is sure of is his mortgage, and the interest which consumes all his profit.

But the farmer has been specializing on his own account. He has been keeping a cost system, just as manufacturers do. He is not guessing at results any more. He knows. And he knows that he works 12 to 13 hours per day, the wife works just as hard; the boy and the girl do a man's work—but he's not money enough left to repair the machinery or buy a Sunday suit.

No, the real trouble on the farms is too much education in the business end of things. The farmer wants the same treatment and opportunity given manufacturers. He hasn't quite made up his mind how that is to be brought about—but he's doing a heap of thinking.

REAL WHISKY NOT WANTED

A million dollar cargo of medicinal and chemically pure whisky bought in Scotland three years ago has been returned to Scotland because its owners were unable to dispose of it lawfully under a wholesale liquor permit to sell to druggists and hospitals.

It is said the owners have refused many offers from illicit sources but that druggists and hospitals found it more profitable to buy from bootleggers who could undersell the legitimate dealers. Many hospitals have been the recipients of contraband liquor turned over to them by tenderhearted magistrates, though it has transpired in many cases that liquor thus donated are unfit for hospital purposes, and in many instances are now refused. The turning back of a million dollars worth of standard-proof liquor serves to reveal the avarice and greed of those who are not only willing to violate the law in order to gain an additional profit but to deceive those who place confidence in their business and professional integrity.

The Department of Labor reports that while more churches than places of amusement were built during 1922 in communities of 25,000 population or more, the places of amusement cost $10,000,000 more than the churches. The report offers no estimate on the comparative amount of money expended for the maintenance of these institutions, but its a safe guess that the churches get a white lot.

A good deal of money is going out all the time to the mail order houses, but the country merchants can keep a lot of it at home by advertising.

WILL BE

DE LAVAL SERVICE DAY

For the benefit of our many customers and users of De Laval Cream Separators we have established a De Laval Service Day.

On this day we shall be glad to have any De Laval user bring his complete separator to our store for a thorough and careful inspection and adjustment, which will be made free of charge. Should any parts, due to unusual wear or accident, need to be replaced, this will be done, the only charge being for the price of the new parts used. No charge will be made for the service.

Both a De Laval Service expert and a representative will be with us to assist with this work. Bring in your De Laval Separator that day and receive the benefit of their advice on the care and operation of the machine, as well as the free service. It is our wish, and that of the De Laval Company, that every user of a De Laval Separator get the maximum of service at the minimum of cost, and we therefore urge you to avail yourself of this free and useful service.

COME EARLY

Also if you are in need of a good rebuilt Separator at a price that makes them real values, be sure and see our splendid assortment. These machines are sold subject to return of your money if not satisfied after ten days trial.

Again, don't forget the date, March 7th, 1924.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS

A noted educator says that an active Parent-Teachers association is the sign of a healthy condition and an indication that parents are vitally interested in the schools.

It is even more than that. It discloses that parents are not alone interested in their schools, but also in their children, and in order to better the condition of their offspring, are turning to the schools as the agency that can get results.

Not infrequently it has been charged that the changing social order has resulted in parents neglecting their children, that the increasing demand of people for more leisure time has resulted in more hours per day devoted to pleasure, with consequent neglect of the home life, and hence neglect of the children.

If this charge be true—and in many instances it doubtless is—a virile organization of parents and teachers devoted to improving the schools indicates a change of heart. Many people are realizing that children have been neglected; that mother has spent too much time with her card clubs and church societies; that father has been devoting too many hours to playing golf or to other pleasures. This has brought added responsibility to the schools.

The natural thing for parents to do after having overloaded the schools with responsibilities they should have borne, is to turn to the schools and help work out a way to meet the problems that confront the child of the present generation.

A Parent-Teachers association is a good sign. More strength and influence to it.

STATE HEALTH BOARD.

Whereas, Official reports from many counties in the State indicate unusual epidemics of malignant typhoid fever—a serious filth disease, and of similar bowel borne diseases, including dysentery and infantile or other diarrheas; and,

Whereas, These diseases are spreading from the sick to the well only from unclean-for bowel discharges and urine;

Now, therefore, Acting under the authority conferred upon it by law, the State Board of Health requests every citizen of the State, who is not a resident of a city having sanitary sewers and a safe water supply, to boil or chlorinate their drinking water unless it has been examined and pronounced safe by the State Sanitary Engineer after examination at the State Health Laboratories at Lexington or Louisville, and to provide for the installation of a sanitary privy of a type approved by this Board; and it further requests that every citizen be vaccinated against typhoid fever by his or her family physician as soon as possible with the reliable vaccine material furnished free from this office, which is produced by the same formula and in the same careful manner as that which successfully protected the lives of our 5,000,000 soldiers during the World War. This is especially important to citizens who ordinarily use a safe drinking water but whose duties carry them into the country districts or small towns where water is unsafe.

The attention of thoughtful citizens is called to the well established fact that more money is being wasted in Kentucky on unnecessary typhoid fever and other water borne diseases than is being expended on the maintenance of roads. Definite instructions in regard to the purification of water supplies or the installation of privies can be secured by writing a postal card to the State Board of Health at Louisville.

Given under our hands and the Seal of the Board at Louisville this February 11, 1924.

Geo. S. Coon,
Vice-President.

A. T. McCormack, Secretary.

According to one newspaper President Coolidge has taken his place beside Abraham Lincoln; according to another paper he has taken his place beside Grover Cleveland. While there may be wide difference of opinion concerning the justification for these statements, there can be no difference of opinion over the fact that President Coolidge has taken his place beside Stimp, Tolbert, Denby and Daugherty.

Resolutions lived up to are better than any that were ever written down.

BROKERS TRYING TO BUY CERTIFICATES OF POOL MEMBERS

President Stone Warns Growers Not to Sell and Says They are Worth Much More Than Speculators Offer.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 19—Officials of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association have learned of efforts being made to purchase participation certificates of growers of the 1922 crop at a price below their actual value, around 25 or 30 percent of the amount received by the growers as the second payment on the crop. In connection with this attempt President and General Manager James C. Stone, of the Burley co-operative, issued a statement warning the growers not to sell their certificates. Mr. Stone said:

"Our members ought not to dispose of their certificates at all. They may be sure that if speculators offer them 25 or 30 percent of the second payment, these speculators have reason to believe that they are worth a great deal more, and that they are certain to make money on such transactions.

"I want to urge all our members to hold their certificates and under no circumstances to part with them, as they are going to be worth a great deal more than speculators and brokers are offering for them.

"Members who have stuck to the orderly marketing system provided by the association should not now throw away any part of their profits by accepting offers for their participation certificates far below their actual value.

"This warning will not be necessary for the large proportion of our membership whose loyalty and faithful support have made it a pleasure to represent them, and they probably will not be approached. The poorer growers, however loyal and faithful they may be, who are known to be pressed for money, are the ones who will suffer by any sale of their participation certificates.

"My advice would be to sit tight in the boat and to continue the loyal and faithful support which has made our organization the largest co-operative marketing association in the world and up to this time, one of the most successful.

The field service division of the Burley co-operative reported 354 new members added since the recent report of membership and the total number of actual growers now enrolled is 101,299. These include the tobacco growers of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, West Virginia, Missouri and Virginia with a few scattering in other states.

THE AVERAGE MAN RULES.

The experience of the world has demonstrated the truth that in the long run the welfare of the nation depends on the average man.

In times of war it is the average man with the musket; in times of peace it is the average man with the ballot. Leadership is important, but one of its greatest uses is inspiring confidence in those who are led.

It may seem that the weight of each individual is small, but it is the aggregation of individuals that make the weight of each individual makes "we, the people," and the character of that aggregate is what makes or ruins the nation.

Each individual who stands firmly for right and justice raises the average and strengthens the fabric of national character.

The important point is that the people themselves should realize their responsibility; that each voter should appreciate the fact that he is a part of public sentiment; that his duty is not merely to humor his own prejudices, but act rationally for the general welfare; that it may be urged that this is visionary; that it is incompatible with human nature for men to drop their personal bias and act with reason for the common good. There is a great deal of truth in this, and in that truth lies the greatest danger to any republic in any crisis, lies on the other hand is the saving quality that the man of average intelligence will reflect that the general good is the individual good, and that he is voting for his personal welfare when he votes to promote the general welfare.

The average man has in fact no real interest except in good government and in wise political policies.

THE COST OF SICKNESS

The health commissioner of Chicago declares that there is in the whole country an average of 8,000,000 people ill all the time, which is a tremendous loss to the nation.

Every time a man drops out of his job because he is ill, something is added to the cost of production which the people must eventually pay. The output of that working unit is lowered while a large part of the cost are piling up just the same. That is why it pays for the community and employers of labor to spend money to secure good health conditions.

BE CAREFUL ABOUT YOUR SPEECH.

You have often heard of people who proverbially begin at the wrong end, or who get things wrong end first, or of wrong end to, as boatmen say.

This sort of thing is not merely a habit, but due primarily to a lack of discipline. The fact that it is more common among uneducated, uncultured people shows quite conclusively where the trouble lies.

Untrained persons possessed of strong likes and dislikes are naturally impulsive, and naturally enough their impulses are apt to be wrong.

The truth may not hold at all times. This does not mean that falsehood may be substituted for it, but that the truth may be omitted. It is unwise to act in not all ways dependable, therefore the necessity for consideration. If you have been observant you very well know that it would never do for you to say or to do, the things that first come to mind.

Hasty speech and action are prime causes of social and business troubles. Nor does the fact that you didn't intend to make trouble either excuse you or change the results.

You are accountable for the things you say and do, because your words and actions alone guide other people in their conclusions concerning you, no matter what your motives may be, nor what you did not mean.

This little sermon is for the benefit of certain persons who are prone to gossip, or draw on their imagination; and particularly those who, through personal prejudice, put rumors into circulation that cause and wreck a business or cause untold and unnecessary suffering. The man who confidentially intimates to his friend that this or that banking institution is not safe and for no other reason than because he has a personal prejudice against some official or stockholders, is a dirty dog—a mongrel snarling at the light of day.

Say what you mean, but have a care to say it at the right time, in the right way and with a good motive.

FIRST PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION

The Commonwealth Land Party, formerly the Single-Tax Party, has placed candidates in nomination for President and vice-President. William J. Wallace president of the Eck Dynamo Company of Belleville, N. J., has accepted the nomination for President, and J. C. Lincoln, president of the Lincoln Electric Co., of Cleveland, is the nominee for vice-President. The platform declares that there is no justification for taxing business, industry, labor or thrift; that such taxes are a burden and breed evasion and dishonesty and drive wealth into hiding places and increase the cost of living. They contend that land is the birthright of all mankind, and if taken by the government the rents will provide for all expenses and a large surplus for public improvements. This one form of taxation would put an end to legalized robbery, fines and penalties on industry and thrift. The total sum raised annually on a moderate charge would be about $7,500,000,000. The party includes many leading men of the nation, and expects to poll 250,000 at the next election.

THE OBLIGATIONS OF THE BACHELOR.

The old leap year tradition permits women to make proposals of marriage. Like many other ancient customs, probably had its roots in certain ideas regarding life. It suggested that people felt that the custom by which men make the proposals of marriage is unfair to women, and that once in four years the thing should be evened up by giving the girls a chance.

The idea is so forcibly prevailed to some extent in Europe, that if a man should decline a leap year proposal, he ought to suffer a like dire to the lady as a consolation prize. This again suggests a feeling that the bachelor owes some obligation which he has not paid.

The old leap year tradition may be a joke, yet it suggests an ancient conviction that the men who remain single beyond a normal time are not usually taking their full part in the life of the community. Ancient sentiment evidently sought to dislodge them from their exclusive position, by placing the weapons of pursuit in the hands of the women folks, and here was some sound sense in that feeling.

At the recent Country Life Conference held in St. Louis a moving-picture film was shown of a farm boy and his prize flock of chickens. The birds were fine because the boy had a scientific knowledge of chicken culture and had applied his knowledge to the care of his flock. But the boy was a mouth breather and showed further effects of malnutrition. The chickens were better cared for than the boy.

JAIL SENTENCE IS GIVEN DUMPER IN CONTEMPT CASES

GROWERS WHO DEFIED ORDER OF LEXINGTON, KY. JUDGE NOT TO SELL TOBACCO SENT UP FOR ONE DAY AND FINED $30 EACH.

Lexington, Ky.—Judge Richard C. Stoll, in Fayette circuit court here, sentenced Alvin Clark and his wife, members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, to a day in jail and to pay a fine of $30 each for contempt of court in violating an injunction which Judge Stoll granted to prevent them from selling their crops outside the pool.

Clark and his wife defiantly went ahead and sold their tobacco in spite of the court's order. In imposing the penalty, Judge Stoll evidenced an intention to see that the lawful orders of his court are respected, even by tobacco bootleggers.

WASHINGTON SLATED TO BE HANDSOMEST CAPITAL

Washington, D. C.—That the city of Washington, District of Columbia, should be the handsomest Capital City in the world, is the unalterable belief of many high in the councils of the government. That public money should be spent for rents, rather than buildings, seems to be the opinion of a great many congressmen. Between these two extremes the Capital of the Nation receives such growth as Congress can give it.

President Coolidge approves the plan to expend fifty million dollars, over a ten-year period, for public buildings which the government must have, or continue to pay rents which are interest on a much larger sum than fifty million dollars.

One feature of the building program which has been suggested is a national gallery of art. That name is now and to a few rooms in the National Museum, where a five-million-dollar collection of paintings is housed as an adjunct to the Museum. Another suggestion is that if the government seriously considers the establishment of a National University, the buildings be erected on "the Mall" and not, as has otherwise been proposed, on a tract of land to be acquired on the outskirts of the city. Senator Smoot, chairman of the Public Building Commission has drafted a bill covering the government needs, somewhat along the lines suggested and approved by President Coolidge, which has been introduced and referred to a subcommittee.

SCHOOL FINANCES

School officials who are penurious in dealing with men and women engaged in the biggest work in this country—training the future men and women of the country, is beyond understanding.

Being miserly with school teachers or in maintaining schools is the poorest kind of business judgment. Shaving pennies when the question of the training of school children is involved is not economy.

The school boys and girls of today are going to be the men and women of tomorrow—the farmers and the framers' wives, the physicians and surgeons, the lawyers, the shoe merchants, the grocers, the dry goods dealers; in fact, they will be the people who will be in charge of all lines of activity when those now in the prime of life have died or retired.

It will be only two short decades hence. The future of those in whom responsibility will fall is being molded in the public schools. It is to the best interests of everyone that they have the best chance it is possible for the present generation to afford them.

They may be good citizens or they may be criminals who will steal into your house in the night and rob you, and shoot you down if you interfere. It depends largely on the kind of training they are receiving now.

When the possibilities of the school children of today are considered in this light, good judgment will dictate the greatest care in their training and not a penny-wise policy that seeks to shave a few cents off of the taxes.

The farm population of the Nation amounts less than 30 percent of the total, is carrying more than 35 percent of the child population, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The farm is changed with the duty of educating this excess of youth and turning it over to the cities at the producing age.

Farm products are often shipped great distances when they might be sold with great profit close at hand, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Surveys are now being made by the department in various parts of the country to determine the extent of this wasteful practice and to help farmers make readjustments in their farming and marketing to enable them to meet local market demands.

RENT RATES ARE TOO HIGH

A statement issued recently by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that the average charges for rent and medium priced houses and apartments throughout the United States now average approximately 80 percent higher than in the year 1914. It is further shown that during the last year rents increased 8 percent. The figures are compiled from surveys made in 151 cities throughout the country, including most of the municipalities with populations of 50,000 or over. It is interesting to note that even during the period between July and November last, when slight reductions were being recorded, rents in the cities in the eastern section of the United States were being advanced.

Generally speaking, not more than 25 percent of the income of the family should be paid for shelter, or not more than one week's wage or salary for one month's rent. It is an economic fact that undue increasing rents, when it affects the great mass of people, seriously restricts their purchasing power for other commodities and thus interferes with business as a whole, for 85 percent of the people are renters. Increase in taxes, insurance, etc., amount to half the increase demanded in rents.

THE SERVICE OF OUR BUSINESS MEN.

When our home folk go into one of the stores of Burlington do they quite realize all the brains and effort that has been made to select and assemble that stock to display it suitably, and offer it at prices that people can afford to pay?

Running a store may look like a simple proposition to folks who do not know about it. But actually it is an undertaking calling for a lot of brains and practical experience. The merchant and his helpers must investigate the markets of the world, they must become intelligent judges of the quality of goods, they must study the peculiar type of article demanded in their local field, they must deal with the public in a helpful manner.

There is no place in which a more earnest effort is made along these lines than here. When your neighbors are making such an earnest effort to serve and please you, it seems only half way decent to give them a chance by using their stores instead of buying elsewhere.

A TOWN'S PERSONALITY

Every town has a distinct personality of its own. Towns vary as much as people. Some are full of achievement and courage and have high standards of education and culture, while others accept things as they are.

This is especially true of country towns, since the people are thrown closely together and they are powerfully influenced by each other. The whole tone of a town may be set and created by a few leading people.

At first thought the power for achievement of a country town may seem limited. Its population is not large, its people are extremely busy, so-driven by daily cares and the struggle to earn a living and bring up a family, that civic achievement seems impossible. People of a sluggish or over conservative temperament, say that it is useless for a community to set out on any large enterprises. It has got along fairly well in the past, they argue, and if we can keep along equally well in the future, we shall do fairly well, they say. Half a dozen leading men are wiser to take that point of view, can place a stamp of that type of personality on a town for years, and prevent it from going ahead.

Yet if younger and more hopeful people come on who refuse thus to settle down into a rut, they can change the whole personality of a town in a fairly short time. They can spend every moment of their time just hustling for their own private interest.

They can make people believe that they will get more out of life and accomplish more in a business way, by promoting community enterprises, by making movements of a social and educational character. Inspired by a few hopeful and confident folks, such a town may go ahead and in half a dozen years than previously it had in two scores.

Speeding is dangerous, it matters not how good its condition. When men have a good condition, when they are driving along at twenty-five or thirty miles per hour something may let go and then—wrecked machine and people in it. This swift driving has become so common that at times it is hardly safe to take a drive on the main highways. No matter how careful you are you are liable to be crowded by some speed demon, or crowded into the ditch by some road bug. Accidents are, of course, likely to increase with the number of cars, and it therefore behooves every motorist to be careful particularly in rounding curves.

ANOTHER BIG SALE OF 1922 CROP MADE BY TOBACCO POOL

RICHMOND BRANCH OF UNITED STATES TOBACCO CO. PURCHASER OF CONSIDERABLE ORDER AT ASSOCIATION PRICES.

Representatives of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association in this county have been informed of the sale of a considerable order of fine tobacco of the 1922 crop to the J. G. Dill branch at Richmond, Virginia, of the United States Tobacco Co., of New York.

John Hayes, of Richmond, vice president of the company, and O. C. Hank, of Paducah, Ky., leaf manager, for Kentucky, negotiated the purchase for their concern and made it known that the tobacco was intended for use in their highest grade package smoking tobacco, and in other widely known advertised brands of the United States Tobacco Company.

The information also has been given that the Association still has on hand a considerable part of the 1922 crop and that the final distribution of funds to the growers for the 1922 crop will not be made until the rest of the high-grade tobacco is sold. It has been declared by manufacturers who have seen it the best tobacco in the United States.

BEING PROFICIENT

The coach of one of the best college basketball teams in the United States recently played a game of basketball in his life.

He is the exception, rather than the rule. The best athletic coaches are generally those who have played the game and have experience in it. That is a rule that almost invariably holds true in life.

The best ditch digger is the one who has been digging ditches all of his life—has made it a business and knows the quickest and best way to do the job.

The best doctor is generally the doctor who has studied the most, has had the most experience and has made the greatest effort to keep pace with the advancement of medical science.

The same is true of any profession, any business, any trade. To be proficient, we must "know our business." We must make a study of it and devote all of our energies to making the most of what we have.

Look around you and observe the men and women in this community who are regarded as the best in their line.

They are the people who have given the best they have to their chosen work. It makes no difference whether they are men who labor with their hands or men who are skilled in some profession; whether they are women whose chief aim in life is to have a good home or women who have chosen the business world for their activities.

To be recognized as a leader in whatever you are doing, is honor enough for any person, whether it be digging a good ditch or skill in one of the professions.

Proficiency in whatever you choose for a livelihood carries with it a certain sense of satisfaction and it ought to be recognized more than it is.

PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZENS

So many towns and cities are named after men. Why?

Because the men thus honored have done something for the good of the community, have left something behind so that their name will not be forgotten, have performed a public service that will benefit children yet unborn.

They did not live their lives in vain. They appreciated the fact that they were not put here on earth to live a selfish life, to hoard whatever wealth they chanced to accumulate, but that they were to share it with others less fortunate.

It's a sad commentary on Burlington that we have had so few men and women who held this point of view—who recognized their responsibility to the community when they were especially favored with this world's goods.

No town or city is going to develop very rapidly unless it has citizens of this class.

We need men and women who are willing to give for the benefit of everyone, who have enough pride in their home town that will make some sacrifice for it.

Who is going to be the first one to render a service of this kind?

Farmers in Carroll county, agent Clyde Watts says, are planning to build up their soils this year with plenty of legumes. They have over 25,000 acres of land in that county and are having good luck with them.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Now that the legislature has killed the bill seeking to abolish pari-mutuel betting at race tracks they will turn their attention to the budget, coal tax and bond issue bills which are the important bills now before that body. The bond issue bill should be passed by the legislature which submits to the people of Kentucky the question of issuing $50,000,000 in bonds for road purposes and an additional $25,000,000 to pay the indebtedness of the state and the remaining sum to be used for the benefit of the public charitable institutions and state university.

No man was ever made a stronger man or a better man by being found fault with constantly. Such things paralyze and brings defeat, ultimately ruining. When a man loses interest and confidence in himself he is about all in. Sunshine warms and makes the crops grow. A little sunshine let into a man's heart softens a bad feeling and is a wonderful panacea. Therefore about the most inexpensive thing anyone can do is to be friendly, be neighborly. No one enjoys a mutt.

During the first two months of leap year, which have passed into history, it seems from an examination of the marriage records at the county clerk's office, that the fair sex are not taking advantage of the honorable and glorious privileges that this good year imposes. The number of marriages brought about by their winning charms and persuasive influences appears to be no greater than of previous years, but things may change for the better when the weather gets warmer.

There has been the usual number of public sales this winter, which are reported to have been well attended. A sale elicits general interest, as everybody is watching for a place to bid on bargains. And the public is educated as to the best medium through which to advertise. A public sale, like everything else advertised in this paper, reaps big dividends for the amount of space used.

The small wooden bridges are a constant expense, and the county road man has more or less trouble with them all the time. There is nothing permanent about them. If every little stream which crosses our turnpikes was bridged with concrete or stone the work would be done, lasting for a life time with scarcely any or no repair at all.

The entertainment given by the students of Burlington High School at Burlington Theater last Thursday evening was enjoyed by a large crowd. The entertainment consisted of a number of vaudeville acts, and those who took part showed that they had given study to their respective parts. The entertainment was a success.

One of the old maids, who never knew the exhilaration of a kiss backed up by a man with a mustache, until she was taken for another girl that had been kissed and got kissed by a mistake. She is still smiling and if a kiss is mentioned before her, she has to go behind the door to powder her nose to keep it from turning red.

J. M. Barlow while visiting his daughter, Mrs. W. P. Beemon, in the Pleasant Valley neighborhood, last week slipped and fell injuring himself considerably. He was able to return home last Friday, but still complains of being sore, although able to be up and around.

While doing nothing else these wintry days it would be well to look after the hoes, plows and all necessary farming implements—get them ready, and don't forget the fishing pole line as spring is just around the corner and will be here before you are ready.

Postmaster Hickman is now residing in the dwelling he purchased of Elmer Kirkpatrick in Burlington and Mrs. Kirkpatrick and his family are now at home in the dwelling purchased of Mr. Walker in Park Addition.

Hubert Rouse has been awarded the contract to carry the mail between Burlington and Brainerd for the four-year term beginning July 1st 1924.

Mrs. Ida Balsly is now a resident of Burlington. She moved into her new residence she purchased of J. J. Kirkpatrick.

Candidates Blossom in the spring, dry up in the summer and get frost-bitten along about November.

Manly Rytle, of Union, was the guest of Grant Williamson and family last Friday night.

Owing to the slippery condition of the roads last week there was very little coming and going.

Deep growers in Boone county are having good luck with them.

WILL BE

DE LAVAL SERVICE DAY

For the benefit of our many customers and users of De Laval Cream Separators we have established a De Laval Service Day.

On this day we shall be glad to have any De Laval user bring his complete separator to our store for a thorough and careful inspection and adjustment, which will be made free of charge. Should any parts, due to unusual wear or accident, need to be replaced, this will be done, the only charge being for the price of the new parts used. No charge will be made for the service.

A De Laval representative will be with us to assist with this work. Bring in your De Laval Separator that day and receive the benefit of his advice on the care and operation of the machine, as well as the free service. It is our wish, and that of the De Laval Company, that every user of a De Laval Separator get the maximum of service at the minimum of cost, and we therefore urge you to avail yourself of this free and useful service.

COME EARLY

Also if you are in need of a good rebuilt separator at a price that makes it a real value, be sure and see our splendid assortment. These machines are sold subject to return of your money if not satisfied at or ten days trial.

Again Don't forget the date, March 7th, 1924.

SILVER CUPS AWARDED

BEST ACRE CORN

Lexington, Ky.—Two silver cups one for the largest yield of corn per acre and one for the greatest profit have both been won for the third year by Roscoe Kash, St. Helens, Lee county, and by the rules of the one-acre corn project become his permanently, according to a statement of J. W. Whitehouse, State Leader of Junior Clubs, Kentucky College of Agriculture, Roscoe Kash who is now sixteen years old and a Junior in the University of Kentucky obtained a yield from his acre last year of 112 bushels and 6 lbs., and a profit of $137 by selling high class seed corn which he selected from the acre plot. His yield is three times the average yield of corn in the state.

The cup awarded for the best written record of the project goes this year to John M. Bullens, Rockford, Rockcastle county, who is 13 years old and won the cup this year from Roscoe Kash. The cup will remain for two years. The cup will remain in the possession of John Bullens until awarded to another club member or won by him next year. The silver cups must be won three years in succession by the competitor, before becoming his property.

T. J. Clore, son of the late Michael and Minerva Clore, died Feb. 22nd, at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. M. Conner, in Cincinnati, and the remains were brought here Sunday by boat and interred by the side of his wife Florence (nee Walton) in the old cemetery. Brief services at the grave by Rev. R. H. Carter. Beside the mother the deceased leaves one son Joe and a daughter Fannie who were well known here and have the sympathy of their friends in their sad bereavement.

Nancy Jane Ryle, daughter of Elijah and Sallie Ryle, was born on Feb. 4th, 1847, died Feb. 20, 1924, aged 77 years and 16 days. She was a member in marriage to James L. McAttee Dec. 12th, 1869.

To this union six children were born, three sons and three daughters viz: F. R. McAttee of near Sparta, Indiana; Rev. J. W. McAttee of Saint Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Owen Blankenbaker, of Union; Coral McAttee (deceased); and James E. McAttee (deceased).

She was converted and united with the old Middle Creek Baptist church early in life, since that time she has been a faithful member of the Baptist church. After her marriage she removed her membership to Big Bone Baptist church and was a member there for several years, but at the time of her death she was a member of the Bellevue Baptist church.

Her husband died Dec. 28, 1913, and since that time she has made her home with her daughter Mrs. C. E. McNeely, who did everything she could to make her declining years comfortable and pleasant. With the two sons and two daughters that she leaves are six grandchildren, four sisters and a brother and a host of other relatives and friends who grieve over the separation from this loved one. She was loyal to her home, to her church, to her friends.

She was a most genial friendly woman with a desire for usefulness and service to her master and family. She lived modestly, quietly, righteously, because of a sincere heart and a deep sense of her dependence upon the great Father in every step of her life. She was highly esteemed by all who knew her and was held in the kindest affection by her friends and neighbors, and the wonderful influence for good that she had with her family was testified to by her son over her casket. Mother, the sweetest name of all, how she will be missed in that daughter's home and by the other children in their visits to and from, her place can not be filled but she will be comforted by the fact that her life's work was for good, that her daily walk was by faith and that she has gone to that eternal reward vouchsafed to the righteous and the just.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Robert McNeely, of Patriot, Indiana, Friday Feb. 22nd, at Bellevue Baptist church. Many were the comforting words he brought to the bereaved family and friends.

The following letter was received from W. T. Davis, who is located at Gadsden, Ala.:

Dear Sir: Find enclosed check for $1.50 for which you can continue sending the Recorder.

We had some winter here this time, it got as cold as zero once, but I think spring is here at last. Have heard the turtle doves, and the robins are plowing now, and the weather is nice. Farmers hauling out their fertilizer, a good many are buying their pool. The pool has caused fertilizer to drop considerable in price. I believe the cotton crop this year will be increased some on account of the high price it is bringing.

A large crowd attended the sale of Geo. Peon, last Saturday, and things went off very fair prices.

WINTER EGG LAYING CONTEST.

The Winter Egg Laying Contest is growing a little keener in spite of the disagreeable weather during the last month.

Mrs. Cecil Gainer's flock of Rhode Island Reds averaged highest during January with 8.5 eggs per hen.

Roy C. Luter's flock of White Leghorns averaged 7.5 eggs per hen.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor's flock of White Leghorns averaged 6.5 eggs per hen.

Mrs. A. G. McMullen's flock of White Leghorns and Barred Rocks averaged 5.2 eggs per hen.

E. G. Stephenson's flock of White Leghorns averaged 4.6 eggs per hen.

These averages are considerably higher than those for December and from present reports there will be far higher results this month.

Mrs. Jerry Fowler slipped and fell on the ice last Saturday morning and bruised herself considerably.

Mrs. Crandall (Iowa) Tells How She Stopped Chicken Lice

"Last spring, rats killed all our baby chicks. With I'd known about Rat-Snap before. With just one large package we killed swarms of rats. They won't get this year's hatchlings. I'll bet Rat-Snap is guaranteed and sells for 25c, 50c, $1.25.

WILL BE

DE LAVAL SERVICE DAY

For the benefit of our many customers and users of De Laval Cream Separators we have established a De Laval Service Day.

On this day we shall be glad to have any De Laval user bring his complete separator to our store for a thorough and careful inspection and adjustment, which will be made free of charge. Should any parts, due to unusual wear or accident, need to be replaced, this will be done, the only charge being for the price of the new parts used. No charge will be made for the service.

A De Laval representative will be with us to assist with this work. Bring in your De Laval Separator that day and receive the benefit of his advice on the care and operation of the machine, as well as the free service. It is our wish, and that of the De Laval Company, that every user of a De Laval Separator get the maximum of service at the minimum of cost, and we therefore urge you to avail yourself of this free and useful service.

COME EARLY

Also if you are in need of a good rebuilt separator at a price that make this a real value—be sure and secure our splendid assortment. These machines are sold subject to return of your money if not worked at for ten days trial.

Again, Don't forget the date, March 7th, 1924.

SILVER CUPS AWARDED

BEST ACRE CORN

Lexington, Ky.—Two silver cups one for the largest yield of corn per acre and one for the greatest profit have both been won for the third year by Roscoe Kash, St. Helena, Lee county, and by the rules of the one acre corn project become his permanently, according to a statement of J. W. Whitehouse, State Leader of Junior Clubs, Kentucky College of Agriculture. Roscoe Kash who is now sixteen years old and a Juniof in the University of Kentucky obtained a yield from his acre last year of 112 bushels and 6 lbs., and a profit of $137 by selling high class seed corn which he selected from the acre plot. His yield is three times the average yield of corn in the state.

The cup awarded for the best written record of the project goes this year to John M. Bullens, Rockford Rockcastle county, who is 13 years old and won the cup this year from Roscoe Kash who held all three cups for two years. The cup will remain in the possession of John Bullens until awarded to another club member or won by him next year. The silver cups must be won three years in succession by the competitor, before becoming his property.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brady and Mrs. H. D. Brady and son Sebern, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walton near Rabbit Hash.

Rev. C. L. Nicely and family, pastor of Bellevue Baptist church, moved from here to Harrodsburg, Ky., Feb. 18, 1924. Their friends here wish them God speed in their new field.

The new steamer Cincinnati, passing Bellevue landing Monday evening at 5 o'clock enroute to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras celebrations.

Capt. Jack and Henry Lindburn, former residents of this place, were aboard acting in the capacity of captain and pilot.

T. J. Clore, son of the late Michael and Minerva Clore, died Feb. 22nd, at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. M. Conner, in Cincinnati, and the remains were brought here Sunday by boat and interred by the side of his wife Florence (nee Walton) in the old cemetery. Brief services at the grave by Rev. R. H. Carter. Beside the sister the deceased leaves one son Joe and a daughter Fannie who were well known here and have the sympathy of their friends, in their sad bereavement.

Nancy Jane Ryle, daughter of Elijah and Sallie Ryle, was born on Feb. 4th, 1847, died Feb. 20, 1924, aged 77 years and 16 days. She was united in marriage to James L. McAttee Dec. 12th, 1869.

To this union six children were born, three sons and three daughters viz: F. R. McAttee of near Sparta, Indiana; Rev. J. W. McAttee of Saint Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Owen Blankenbaker, of Union; Coral McAttee (deceased); Mrs. C. E. McNeely of Grant, and James E. McAttee (deceased).

She was converted and united with the old Middle Creek Baptist church early in life, since that time she has been a faithful member of the Baptist church. After her marriage she removed her membership to Big Bone Baptist church and was a member there for several years, but at the time of her death was a member of the Bellevue Baptist church.

Her husband died Dec. 28, 1913, and since that time she has made her home with her daughter Mrs. C. E. McNeely, who did everything she could to make her life comfortable and pleasant. With the two sons and two daughters that she leaves are six grandchildren, four sisters and a brother and a host of other relatives and friends who grieve over the separation from this loved one. She was loyal to her home, to her church, to her friends.

She was a most genial friendly woman with a desire for usefulness and service to her master and family. She lived modestly, quietly, righteously, because of a sincere heart and a deep sense of her dependence upon the great Father in every step of her life. She was highly esteemed by all who knew her and was held by the kindest affection by her friends and neighbors, and the wonderful influence for good that she had with her family was testified to by her son over her casket. Mother, the sweetest name of all, how she will be missed in that daughter's home and by the other children in their visits to and from the place can not be filled but be comforted by the fact that her life's work was for good, that her daily walk was by faith and that she has gone to that eternal reward vouchsafed to the righteous and the just.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Robert McNeely, of Patriot, Indiana, Friday Feb. 22nd, at Bellevue Baptist church, and many were the comforting words he brought to the bereaved family and friends.

The following letter was received from W. T. Davis, who is located at Gadsden, Ala.:

Dear Sir: Find enclosed check for $1.50 for which you can continue sending the Recorder.

We had some winter here this time, it got as cold as zero once, but the spring is here at last. Have heard the turtle doves, and the weather is growing now, and the weather is nice. Farmers hauling out their fertilizer, a good many are buying their pool. The pool has caused fertilizer to drop considerable in price. I believe the cotton crop this year will be increased some on account of the high price it is bringing.

A large crowd attended the sale of Geo. Penn, last Saturday, and things went off fair prices.

The Recorder Stands For BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES

This and That.

It would seem as if the Better Farmers movement ought to boom the single trade a little.

There are many folks who never worry about their debts so long as they can borrow money.

Ninety-five per cent of the students of Garrett Biblical Institute work their way through the course.

It is announced that suspenders will be in style, but careful dressers will not wear them outside their coats.

Claimed the politicians should have a housecleaning, but they should not try to whitewash anything.

Every man, woman and child in the United States contributed on an average of $68.37 in taxes during 1922.

The statesmen who were formerly listening with their ears to the ground, are now engaged in smelling for oil.

One excellent way to have an automobile smash-up is to insist on your right of way at all street crossings.

A strong desire is expressed by the labor unions to have the farmers cooperate with them to get more money for the labor unions.

Hearing that the country is opposed to child labor, many of the kids will feel that this lets them out from going to school.

Formerly bread lines were reported in many cities, but now the principal line is the one formed before the soft drink counters.

More than 35 cities and towns in Ohio maintain special classes for mentally defective or backward pupils in the public schools.

Potent Moonshine whiskey, seized as evidence, poured down the intake of the sewers of Paducah, Ky., is eating the life out of the sewer.

The women are urged to dig their own marketing, and they would probably be willing to do so if you would give them all automobiles.

The Maryland man who hasn't missed Sunday school in twenty-five years is either a bachelor or his wife does the Sunday morning chores.

Another farm conference has been called, but most farmers think they can do more good putting in twelve hours a day on the farm.

Perhaps there would not be so many sub-normal people, if more of them would subscribe to and read good newspapers like the Recorder.

Europe is said to be full of ominous mutterings. Also this country, about the time the taxpayer sits down to make out his income return.

No wonder that the women folks feel that they are still being discriminated against, when custom does not yet permit them to put their feet on the desk.

Some one has figured out that there is one telephone for every eight farm houses in this country, but you wouldn't believe it when your tire is flat and you haven't got a spare.

The manufacture of corn cob pipes has long been a recognized Missouri industry. There is now a rival in the field. An Arkansas cob pipe factory sold 90,000 last year.

Mighty fine to sing "Home Sweet Home" in enthusiastic tones, but the logical action following that sentiment is to make your home town a little sweeter by patronizing the stores of Burlington.

During 1923 the F. W. Woolworth Company added 84 new stores, making the total number 1260. The average business turnover per store was $153,529, with average net earnings of 10.7 cents or nearly 32¢ per share on stock. The inventories were turned over eight times.

Superstitious folk in the Baltic States are alarmed over the appearance of the silk-tailed winter thrush, known as the "bird of disaster." They say that the birds were thereabouts in the winter of 1812, preceding Napoleon's Russian campaign and again in 1914, preceding the Great War.

From the beginning of American history to July 1, 1923, the government has received $39,411,874 for the sale of public lands. This seems a mere trifle compared with the vast mineral ores and timber wealth that the lands have yielded. The Tea Pot Dome might bring half that much if operated by the government.

KENTUCKY DOINGS.

Louisville, Ky.—Gov. William J. Fields has thrown down the gauntlet of battle to the opponents of his administration. He has ridden to the lists, sounded a blast on his trumpet and called upon those who have been trying to unhorse him to step up and have it out. He has done this in a way that makes it the most direct and forceful political action Kentucky has known in years.

There may last week be a day that brought a climax, political and legislative, in the course of the administration and the General Assembly. It was marked by the Governor's challenge to his enemies, open and covert, and to critics whose object, as far as the Governor is concerned, seems more destructive than constructive. It was marked also by the defeat in the Senate of the Bennett bill, aimed at the pari-mutuel system of betting, and therefore at racing in Kentucky.

This defeat, by the decisive vote of 24 to 14, ended for this session the biennial effort of the enemies of racing to put a stop to the sport in Kentucky. With the anti-racing agitation out of the way, the legislative decks are cleared for action on other matters and the opportunities for trading and strategy it afforded are done away with.

Governor Fields came from a sick room to take up the fight for the administration program. He had been indisposed for a week, but the manner in which he set about meeting his opponents would indicate that he had been preparing for the fray rather than playing the role of invalid.

The $75,000,000 bond issue which is the constructive work Gov. Fields has mapped out for Kentucky, afforded the opportunity for the Governor's action, and criticism of the Highway Commission contained in an editorial against the bond issue, published in Judge Robert W. Bingham's Courier-Journal, was the occasion. It was to Judge Bingham that Governor Fields addressed the open letter in which he quoted these paragraphs from the editorial, referring to the Governor:

"The backing of all bills in this department by the two Republican members of the Highway Commission indicated impressively how he has fallen into the trap. But there is no progressive Kentucky in the schemes which he is helping."

"What those schemes will bring, if they go through, is a life time burden of taxation to the Kentuckians now living, for which they may get an inadequate, jerry-built, pork apportioned system of roads at a cost twice as great as better roads might be provided by the pay-as-you-go plan. The Administration has now been in power long enough at least to encourage the hope, if it could have done so, that the $50,000,000 it asks for roads would be expended any more advantageously than the millions that has been passed for road construction under preceding administrations."

"But its plain now that there is to be no real reform in the road-construction system that has prevailed and it would be the extreme of folly to throw $50,000,000 more into the mud hole."

"Referring to this paragraph, the Governor wrote to Judge Bingham: 'The language quoted from your editorial is clearly a reflection upon the integrity of the members of the State Highway Commission, and since you have seen fit to cast such reflections upon these gentlemen, I insist that you publish in the Courier-Journal and the Times both the private and public record of yourself and each member of the State Highway Commission, giving specific facts, if you have any, to justify your imputation of corruption against these gentlemen.'"

Then came a brief passage which brought into the line of fire for the first time a leader of the opposition who has been directing operations without appearing openly. It reads: "These gentlemen were appointed by me after the most careful consideration, and without consulting you." Percy Haly. Is that one of the reasons why you attack them?"

This letter of Governor Fields is his first official notice of the campaign that has been conducted against the Democratic organization and the Democratic administration. It dates back to the primary, and is a big part of the political history of the fight against the late J. Campbell Cantrell for the nomination for Governor, of refusal to accept Governor Fields as Cantrell's successor to the nomination, and of opposition to his administration program.

The editorial from which Governor Fields quoted, was published during the week and attacked the $75,000,000 bond issue proposal, which carries $50,000,000 for roads and $25,000,000 for the University, charitable and penal institutions, and the payment of the state debt. Under the caption, "Reject the Bond Bill," it assailed the bond proposal as the work of spoliation. It sought to question the wisdom of submission with a fair election and then expressed its doubts as to the fairness in these words:

"Instead of there being any such assurance, there is everything to show that the election would be corrupt and crooked, that the bonds would be sold in disregard of the heaviest majorities against them, and that the money would be spent, not primarily in the interest of the Commonwealth, but in the interest of the politicians who are resorting to such desperate measures to make it available."

After charging that the "machine elements of both parties" are working for the bond submission bill and that the "spoilsmen" are back of it, the editorial says: "There is $75,000,000 in the pot. No such rich prize was ever before within their sight or smell. They will stop at nothing to get that prize into the ballot boxes.... It is apparent that the Governor has been hoodwinked by them into believing that he is attempting to further a great move for a progressive Kentucky."

PREFERENCES IN BUYING.

Some people, when they go into a store to buy household supplies, ask for the general article they want, without asking for any special brand. Others will ask for some particular make.

A concern that puts out a given article of good quality and which drums up business energetically, may be able to sell a fair proportion of that product without the name of that concern being well known to the public.

But if that concern can make its name well known to the public through advertising, and if the reasons why it claims its product to be superior are thoroughly set forth in the public prints, its business should largely increase. Merchants like to carry in stock the articles that are most frequently called for, and they are anxious that their stocks of such brands shall not run short, as they dislike to fail to supply customers with what they want.

Thus many well advertised products have gained a far greater share of the total business in their line than could have been had years ago when merchandise was not so thoroughly advertised. Business concerns have built up a trade far beyond what would have been dreamed possible 20 years ago.

The same principle can be applied in the matter of building up retail store business. The woman who goes into some store and asks for a certain brand of soap or tooth paste, because its merits have been thoroughly described to the public, can also be induced to choose certain stores as favorite shopping places, because they have similarly taken pains to set forth the advantages to be gained by patronizing those stores. The same principles that have built great business successes through national advertising, can also build big business successes in the field of retail trade through local advertising.

It is stated by Chinamen familiar with the history of their own country that American women are now doing four things that Chinese women did thousands of years ago, namely: wearing tortoise-shell glasses, casing their feet in high-heeled slippers, painting their lips and faces and playing Mah Jong. History does repeat.

Stubborn coughing is a needless waste of strength.

And it increases the irritation that is causing the cough. Stop it quickly with Bell's Pine-Tree Honey. It combines the very same medicines which the ablest doctors use with the old-time, well-tried remedy—pine-tree honey that generations have relied upon. It swiftly loosens the hard-packed phlegm, soothes the inflamed throat and lung tissue and restores normal breathing. Tastes good, too. Keep Dr. Bell's on hand for all the family.

Smartly Styled Coat

An especially stylish model in a utility coat is shown here. Note its length, the clever adaptation of the Raglan sleeve, the narrow close-fitting cuffs and cozy muffler collar, all contributing comfort and warmth as well as fine style. The design is adapted to the season's heavy coating, as camel's hair, tweed and mixtures.

PLANT SOYS AND CORN FOR HOGGING DOWN

Lexington, Ky.—Plan to plant soy beans in corn for hogging down next fall is the recommendation of Grady Sellards swine specialist at the Kentucky College of Agriculture whose demonstrations of this practice last year have proved the value of soy bean for fattening the fall crop of swine. Haberlandt an early soy bean which matures about August 25th and will therefore permit early fattening of the hogs is one of the best varieties to plant in this state. Emmet Long of Lancaster, Garrard county according to Mr. Sellards, on Sept. 1 last fall turned 102 pigs into ten and one half acres of corn planted at the rate of 7 pounds per acre and soy beans planted at the rate of one bushel to 12 acres.

He marketed the lot on October 4th with a total gain of 5105 pounds or two and one-half tons of pork. This is a daily gain of 1.45 pounds, and a total gain of 50 pounds per pig, while the pork was produced at a cost of $6.74 and sold at $7.50 per hundred leaving a net profit of 76¢ per hundred pounds. In no other way can the gain be made as cheaply, a factor which swine growers must consider in these times when the market price is close to the cost of production prices.

Water and a supply of mineral mixture kept before the hogs at all times, the mineral mixture used being made of 10 lbs. ground limestone, 10 lbs. acid phosphate or ground bone, 5 lbs. salt. About 0.8 lb. of this mineral mixture was consumed for every hundred pounds of gain.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Mary McMullen was absent from school several days last week on account of sickness. But all were glad to see her back at her place Monday morning.

Miss Jessie Jones spent the week-end with Miss Marie Stephenson and spent Saturday in town shopping.

The plumbers from Erlanger have completed our heating system. The pipes have been lined up properly so that the water drains back into the boiler and is not trapped. The school building is much more comfortable than it has been.

Coasting and snowballing are the sports of the day.

The Freshmen conducted the chapel program Wednesday morning and entertained the school very enjoyably.

MILTON BEEMON DEAD.

Milton Beemon, aged 87, died at his residence on the Burlington and Florence pike Monday morning, February 25th, 1924. Mr. Beemon fell from a ladder several months ago and broke his hip, and he had not fully recovered from the effects of that fall. He is survived by his widow and three children, William F., Alonzo and Hubert Beemon, and a number of other relatives and friends. He was buried Wednesday afternoon after services at the residence in the family grave yard just north of the dwelling. He had resided in the neighborhood all of his life, and was one of the oldest citizens in this neighborhood, and was well liked by all who knew him. He was one of Boone county's foremost citizens and his family has the sympathy of all.

A. B. Renaker and wife, L. T. Utz and wife Newton Sullivan and wife and Miss Nellie Martin spent last Friday with E. J. Matson and wife at Florence.

Wilber Kelly and family are now citizens of Burlington, having moved to their new home in Maple Grove subdivision, one day the latter part of last week.

BIG BONE.

It seems that moving is the order of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Jones spent Sunday with Mr. Jess Jones and family.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Carroll spent Sunday with R. N. Moore and family.

Mrs. H. E. Miller spent from Sunday until Tuesday with her son Russell.

Mrs. J. P. Hamilton has been suffering severe pain with a sprained back.

Mr. G. L. Pitcher and Joe Green made a business trip to the city, Friday.

Miss Christina Jones spent from Thursday until Sunday with relatives of this place.

Mr. Purdy and Miss Emma Clark spent Sunday with Mrs. J. J. Hamilton and family.

Mrs. J. G. Finnell has gone to Detroit to see her daughter Kate, who is very sick. The neighbors and friends wish Kate a speedy recovery.

MOST PEOPLE ARE HONEST

As one follows the daily news and reads of hold-ups, confidence games, swindles and burglary, maybe you occasionally get the notion that the world reeks with dishonesty. But 'tis not so. Honesty is so common and general that it is not considered 'new.' Dishonesty is the exception - therefore a matter of interest. Solomon Ulmer, a Cleveland bank president, intercepted in a new tuberculosis sanitarium at Los Angeles, picked a thousand names at random from the city directory. To each of them he mailed a letter, inclosing a dollar bill. He stated that he hoped the dollar would be returned with another one as a subscription to the fund but they could keep the dollar if so inclined, but hoped they would not. Over 600 returned the dollar with at least one more, and 200 sent the dollar back alone. The other 200 kept the dollar. This would indicate that four out of five are honest, and three out of five both generous and honest.

Next Monday is county court.

Geo. Penn and family left Tuesday, for their new home in Covington.

Earl Cropper, of Cincinnati, spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. Lorena Cropper.

Jerry Fowler and wife spent several days last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler.

Virgil Gaines, of Dayton, O., spent several days last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gaines.

The farmers who were not fortunate enough to have their tobacco walked were glad to see the rain.

A marriage license has been issued to Ben F. Slayback 22 and Blanche M. Williamson by the county clerk.

R. C. Greene, President of Walton Bank & Trust Co., was in Burlington on business Monday for his bank.

The county clerk has remitted to the state auditor $16,500 being the amount collected from the sale of automobile licenses.

The weather last week was real winter weather. The snow fall Sunday covered the ground to the depth of four or five inches.

Henry Fingate and family have moved to the residence owned by J. B. Rouse on the Florence pike about one mile east of Burlington.

Edward Baker, of the Limaburg neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Saturday. He made this office a peasant call.

Mrs. Emma Brown and son, Walter, of Covington, spent the latter part of last week with friends and relatives in and near Burlington.

Herman Buckler will have a sale of personal property at his residence on the C. H. Yousell farm, Monday, March 3rd. See adv. in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Thompson, of Laurel, Ind., and Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McKinney of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire.

Burlington Masonic Lodge raised L. L. Stephens and L. C. Weaver to the Master's Degree last Saturday evening. A large crowd was present which included members of Hebron, Bellevue and Erlanger.

Vance, the 18-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Perkins, died at his home in Nebraska Feb. 6th, after a four-days illness with influenza. He was in his senior year in Hi School, and well thought of by all who knew him.

M. I. Baker, the Limaburg blacksmith, was transacting business in Burlington, Monday. He called at this office and move his subscription up for another year, and also that of his sister, Mrs. Weaver, of Riverside, Ohio.

The output of motor vehicles in the United States during the year 1923 was 3,365,559 passenger automobiles and 376,257 trucks. These are the vehicles that tear up the roads. With only buggies and wagons as a means of transportation, the roads would be kept in fairly good repair with the work that is now being done on them.

Thomas J. Clere died at his home in Cincinnati last Friday and his remains were brought to his old home Bellevue, and interred last Sunday. He was one of the late Michael Clere and resided near Bellevue for a number of years, but of late he has been residing in Cincinnati. He is survived by two children and a number of relatives and friends.

Burlington had quite another stir in real estate last week. Postmaster Hickman bought of Elmer Kirkpatrick his house and lot on Jefferson street; while Mr. Kirkpatrick bought of R. H. Walker his house and lot in Park Addition adjoining the town on the north; O. R. Porter moved to the Add Robbins property and Elsie Poston is occupying the house vacated by Mr. Porter. As soon as a piece of property is offered for sale or rent it is taken up before you can say scat.

After a day's efforts of proponents of the Bennett anti-pari-mutuel bill, to obtain adoption by the Senate of a minority favorable committee report, the Senate failed to respond, 14 to 24, and the bill passed out of further legislative consideration during this session. The bill aimed to bar pari-mutuel machines on Kentucky race tracks.

The bill's doom as forecast by an adverse report of the Committee on Kentucky Statutes No. 1 when Senator R. C. Simmons, Covington, presented to the Senate a report, signed by all members of his committee, except Senator Walter D. Dyds, with expression of opinion that the bill should not pass. Signing this majority report were Senators Simmons, Chairman, Griffin Kelly, H. F. Green, Arch Hamilton, Lewis Ryans and J. S. Hazelden.

The Legislature will be called upon to either pass or refuse to pass a bill which by its terms will submit to the voters of the state the question whether they desire to issue bonds in the sum of $75,000,000. $50,000,000 to be used for the purpose of building the primary road system in the state and the remaining $25,000,000 to be used to liquidate the floating debt and make needed improvements on the hospitals of the state and at the State University. This question at the hands of the voters of the state and the members of the Legislature will make a serious mistake if they refuse to pass the bill and say to the people of the state "you are not qualified to vote on the Bond Issue." It seems a mistake to couple a road bond issue with a bond issue for other purposes. The voters may favor issuing bonds for one purpose and not favor issuing bonds for other purposes.

TAXES WILL BE REDUCED

The defeat of the proposed amendment to the Constitution forbidding future issuance of tax-exempt securities indicates that a bill may be separate tax reduction measures before Congress the Administration has been compelled to waive the demand for the Mellon reduction of surtaxes to 25 per cent, and from all indications will be satisfied with anything less than the 4 per cent. Under such a tax the bulk of the nation will undoubtedly continue to seek non-taxable investments, but an insistent demand from the public at large that wealth be compelled to pay its fair proportion of government expenses, may result in more radical measure and possibly the restoration of the excess profits tax. When the subject of taxes gets before the people, every man and every woman have an equal voice, and, as a rule, they make themselves heard. That's one of the advantages of democratic government—but there are those who earnestly protest.

PAYING HOMAGE

The death of Roosevelt, Harding and Wilson, all in a comparatively short space of time, has aroused a new sense of appreciation of the men who sit in the White House.

The strenuous days of the war and the tumult of the reconstruction period cost the nation two leaders whose endurance could not withstand the strain and duties of the presidency imposed upon them.

If these two have given their lives, that others may be saved, they will not have died in vain. If their sacrifice on the altar of duty awakens America to the fact that it asks of its presidents more than human mind and body can endure, it will result in a new understanding of the situation and a lessening of the demands upon the president.

Forty years ago this month the Ohio river was higher than ever known before or since.

HOW IT WORKS

Riding along the National road a few days ago a bus passed and then a traction car. The bus had a dozen passengers and the traction car had less than half as many. This is a common occurrence. At this rate there will be no traction cars in a few years.

The people paid $25,000 a mile for the roadway for the bus lines and maintain them out of taxes. The traction lines paid $25,000 a mile for their own roadway and pay more taxes a mile on their line than it costs for maintaining the paved road for the bus.

In other words the traction lines are forced to maintain a roadway for buses to put the traction lines out of business. Just the same as if a clothing merchant were paying rent for his competitor next door and also his heat, light and janitor service. Can you beat it?—Newcastl Times.

HOME COMING SENDS INVITATIONS BY AIR

Louisville, Ky.—Hundreds of absent Kentuckians will receive informal invitations to Kentucky's 1924 Home Coming celebration by air as the Kentucky Home Coming Association has just announced that it will conduct four radio broadcasting prize contests as a means of obtaining the greatest possible dissemination of the contest notices. Five hundred dollars in prizes will be awarded of which $450 will be divided among the managers of the broadcasting stations which participate.

In the first contest $175 will be divided between the three managers who obtain the names and addresses of the greatest number of absent Kentuckians while in contest. No. 2 a prize of $100 will be given the manager whose announcement brings a response from the greatest distance from his station. The four Kentuckians whose replies are sent from the greatest distances will be awarded prizes of $25, $15, $10 and $5 in this contest.

In contest No. 3, $85 will be divided between the three managers who obtain the names and addresses of the greatest number of persons who are related by blood to General George Rogers Clark and the same amount of money will be divided in contest No. 4 between the same number of managers who obtain the greatest number of names and addresses of persons related by blood to Daniel Boone.

Winners in the first two contests will be announced April 14 and in the remaining two contests on April 22. The judges will be Governor William Mason Fields, Mayor Huston Quinn and Judge Robert Bingham. Announcement of the contests will be sent out over W H A S, the radio phone of The Courier Journal and The Louisville Times.

One contest will be held each week beginning March 3rd.

COURT OF APPEALS KNOCKS OUT PLAN TO AVOID CONTRACT

LANTLORD'S LIEN HELD SUBORDINATE TO POOL AGREEMENT AND NON-MEMBER HAS NO CONTROL OVER POOL TENANT.

Lexington, Ky.—That a landlord's lien cannot take precedence over a contract of Burley Growers' Co-operative Association; that an agreement by which a tenant receives a cash consideration for his work on a tobacco crop cannot be permitted to evade an Association contract, and that section 18-C of the Bingham Co-operative Marketing Act does not give a non-member landlord any control over a member tenant's tobacco were decisions reached by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky unanimously in the Alonzo Q. White v. Douglas Smith and J. M. Holland cases appealed from the Shelby circuit court.

PLAN FOR HIGH EGGS HATCH NOW

Lexington, Ky.—Now is the time to plan for high fertility and high vitality, the two fundamentals of a good hatch from the eggs this spring according to J. H. Martin, head of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. He states that while faulty incubation will often prevent good eggs from hatching the questions of fertility and hatchability can be settled by proper care and feeding of the farm flock at this time of the year.

"Not more than 15 hens to one male bird of the general purpose breeds such as Plymouth Rocks, R. I. Reds, or Wyandottes, should be used," Mr. Martin continues, "and with the lighter breeds such as Leghorns and Anconas not more than 15 or 16 hens should be mated with one male. Small pens with one male bird to the pen are much better than large pens where two or more cockerels are used; but if the small pen cannot be provided then a good plan is to alternate the males, using one every half day or day and then replacing with the other."

"Experimental work conducted at several Experimental Stations shows that feeding will affect both fertility and hatchability of eggs," says Mr. Martin, "and the results prove that feeding a balanced ration increased the hatchability rather than decreased it. An ample supply of milk or dry mash containing tankage or meat scrap should be fed, and free rapeseed or green feed given the breeding flock will increase both fertility and hatchability. A ryegrass field near the poultry house will solve the problem, but if no ryegrass is available then some form of green feed such as germinated oats, lettuce or cabbage can be used."

"Germinated oats are probably the cheapest and most readily available. For 100 hens use four to five pounds of dry oats daily and get six canny buckets, boxes, tubs, or other containers. Have one which holds water in which to soak the oats and five with small holes in the bottom. These should be kept in a room where the temperature is 60 to 70 degrees F., a good place is in the furnace room or back of the kitchen stove."

"The oats should be put in bucket No. 1 (the water tight bucket) covered with warm water, and allowed to soak overnight. They should then be poured to bucket No. 2. In the same way other oats should be put to soak in bucket No. 1. The next day the ones in No. 2 should be poured in bucket No. 3, those in No. 1 to bucket No. 2 and more put to soak. They should be sprinkled with warm water twice each day. Continuing this method, a new bucket, watering, and starting a new bucket each day, on the sixth day the oats should be ready to feed. After that, one bucket can be fed each day and a new one started. The sprout on the oats should be from one quarter to one half inch long when fed and the length of time required to grow that long will depend on the temperature of the room where they are kept. If the above method does not give the right lengths sprout vary the number of containers until it works out satisfactorily."

THE INCENTIVE TO WORK

Country life has a wonderful influence on the nation as a whole because it gives young people such splendid incentives to work. The young people in the cities are inclined to spend their money as fast as they get it. The majority fail to make any effort to own their own homes, because they may not stay where they are six months.

Young people starting life in the country do it with more feeling of permanence. When they buy a farm on mortgage, or start in some business, they have an incentive for earnest labor. They get more satisfaction out of their gains each year than they could from the frothiest and most sparkling city sports. Thus their industry builds up the country, and pride in their constant gains fills their life with the glow of achievement.

March is the regular time for moving, and there will be a number seeking a new place of habitation, regardless of the weather and roads.

GERMANY'S AFFRONT

The German government, through its official representatives in Washington, recanted and decided to pay tardy recognition to the memory of America's war president.

Though the German's did fly their embassy flag at half-staff during the time that the funeral of Former President Wilson was taking place, they paid the delayed tribute only after it dawned upon them that they had blundered.

The former enemies of the United States did not realize the temper of American people—that Americans respect, honor and revere those who served in the highest office within their gift, regardless of any partisan feeling, and that they wish to cherish the memory of men of such ideals and rare attainments as those possessed by Mr. Wilson.

The first excuse given at the German embassy at Washington was that the German government regarded the former president as a private citizen and therefore did not deem it necessary to show any public respect for his memory.

Finding how its announcement reflected, the embassy then authorized the statement that "It having been officially announced this afternoon that there will be general mourning for the late President Wilson after 12:30 o'clock, the German embassy will join in expression of the nation's mourning by flying its flag at half-staff."

The incident means more than it outwardly appears to. It gives Americans a direct insight into the attitude of the German government, which reflects the state of mind in Germany.

It clearly demonstrates that Germany was a poor loser in the war and that she still harbors hatred for America. No other construction can very well be placed on the incident.

It portrays to this country a condition that no one imagined existed—at least to a very great extent.

America has been Germany's best friend. Even now two of its foremost citizens are in Europe trying to bring order out of chaos and to help restore German economic conditions.

Even while Germany's embassy officers in this country were laying themselves open to violent criticism, American friends of Germany were making a stirring appeal before a committee of the house of representatives for an appropriation of fifty million dollars from this government to help the starving people of Germany.

Citizens of the United States have already sent millions to Germany for relief work among the war survivors and a campaign is being conducted at this moment to raise more millions to feed the undernourished and starving children of Germany.

In the light of these facts, even though Germany did intend a studied insult to the memory of America's foremost private citizen, which Americans will not tolerate, especially from its former enemies, the affront will not soon be forgotten and will serve to reopen the war wounds, that were being healed by time and a forgiving people, who were led to believe that Germany had repented.

COLIC—THE RESULT OF OVER-FEEDING

One of the most frequent mistakes in caring for a nursing baby is that of over feeding. There are two reasons for this—giving him too much food and feeding him at short intervals. The grandmothers in many families are responsible for the frequent feeding of the baby. They retain the old-fashioned idea of their grandmothers and firmly believe that baby should be fed every time he wakes up or cries. They think if baby is restless, fretful and chews his fingers he is hungry—they do not realize that he may be suffering from over eating.

Child care has, within the past 20 years, become a practical science to an extent undreamed of in our grandmothers' days. It is now known that from 3 to 4 hours are required for the baby's stomach to empty itself. If another feeding is given before the stomach has had time to empty itself fresh milk is poured into the partly digested milk the result being that the partly digested milk must remain too long in the stomach and that the fresh milk will leave the stomach before it is digested. Constant feeding gives the baby's stomach no rest—it must work all the time to care for the food. No muscle can work continuously without becoming weak and unable to work to the best advantage. A tired stomach will cause pain. This pain in a baby is known as "colic."

Too much food gives rise to "colic," indigestion and bowel trouble. Frequently diarrhoea and fever may follow an attack of indigestion which is simply the result of taking more food than the stomach can care for. To prevent colic, nurse the baby by the clock. Pure water, or a tablespoonful of orange juice in equal amounts of water may be given. With these exceptions give the baby nothing between feedings.

The size of the baby's stomach should be the guide to the amount of milk he can take. Weigh the baby before and after feeding if there is reason to think he is getting too much at a feeding.

It can not be claimed that the fondness of the American people for chewing gum is due to a consciousness that they need jaw exercise.

GIRL SWINE GROWER

EARN $500.

Lexington, Ky.—Velera Sims, state champion swine grower has now learned the fundamentals of good feeding in her three years experience as a Junior club member, but in a letter to J. W. Whitehouse State Leader of Boys and Girls Club Work in Kentucky she tells how she earned over five hundred dollars from premiums and the sale of five of her six pigs.

"I became a club member in 1921," she writes, "and have completed a project each year. I made Duroc-Jersey my choice as I knew that 'pigs is pigs' but it takes a Duroc to make a real hog. This year I started my project with a litter of six. I began feeding at the age of two months on various feeds, such as ground rye and corn. They were kept in clean pastures and given plenty of water. I was ready for the first exhibit July 24, 1923 at Mercer county fair. In this exhibit I was successful, winning first, second and third prizes. My next exhibit was made at Lincoln county fair with equal results. At the Kentucky State Fair I carried away premiums amounting to $186; and I made my last exhibit at the Tennessee State Fair winning $80 in premiums. My work has been a real pleasure to me as I have gained much experience in hogs, have made many acquaintances, a neat little sum of $510 and have one pig left to be a hog new project. I feel that much of my success is due to our most efficient county agent, John R. Spencer, and wish to thank him for the interest he has taken in me and my work."

CUT FARM COSTS THIS YEAR SAYS EXPERT

Lexington, Ky.—The question of costs is the most pressing of all problems before the farmer at the present time according to W. D. Nichols, Head of the Farm Economics Department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. In times of prosperity and rising prices, the question of costs does not worry people or have as great business significance as it does in times of depression and falling prices he declares. And he points out further that it is during such times as we have experienced in the last three years that the pinch of high costs is felt.

"If we go to the bottom of the agricultural problem," Mr. Nichols says, "we are apt to reach the conclusion that the control and reduction of costs is the essence of the farmer's problem today, and the question for farmers is more pressing than for any other class of producers. This is so because of all lines of business the price declines during the post-war slump, were greatest in farm products, which has made it more difficult for farmers to pay their debts and keep going. Nor is it likely that we shall experience a condition of rapidly rising prices for this next year at least, and accordingly a constructive program for the farmer to follow in 1924 must contain means for keeping production costs at the very minimum."

"Not only is this a one year program but a long-time program," says Mr. Nichols, "and if the farm producer is to make expenses and an income this year he must cut down the cost of production."

THE BIG THINGS

Theodore Roosevelt once said of a consular agent, whose ability he recognized and whose friendship he prized:

"If a man disappoints me the first time, it is his fault. If he disappoints me the second time it is mine. I never blame a man who fails from accident. He is kindly, courteous and successful in all the small things but he fell down in the one big thing that came his way."

How true that is today as it was in the days when Mr. Roosevelt occupied the White House. But how many men measure up to the former president's standards?

So many of us fail to realize that when we disappoint our superiors, we lose their confidence, and when we find what our failure to meet the expectations of others has brought about, we are very apt to lose our self respect, our grip on ourselves.

The two thoughts expressed by Mr. Roosevelt link up together. Disappointing those who have confidence in us that we can do the right thing at the right time and falling down on the one big thing that comes our way.

Inability to recognize the big thing when it comes is the fault that is inherent with most of us and that causes us to fall down. Most any man can be successful in small things, little daily detail, routine work, but the man who gets ahead and rises above the ordinary type is he who sees the big thing when it presents itself.

You can pick out the men in this community who have been successful. Study their characteristics and most of them you will find to be very similar to other men's. But they have that one trait that has caused them to forge ahead—the ability to see their opportunities when they come and to make the most of them.

If Washington came back February 22 and saw all those paper hatches stacked up, he would probably want to know what they were calculating.

SAVE THE SOIL WITH SOYS

Lexington, Ky.—Although the soybean acreage in Kentucky in 1923 doubled that of 1922 with a total of 120,000 acres, this year's acreage should double again according to Ralph Kenney, specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. He declares that the soybean which has been used in China for thousands of years for human consumption has proved its worth here in Kentucky as a soil builder, a forage crop, and a cash crop.

Ten years ago practically no soybeans were grown in the state, but last year 11 counties produced over 1,000 acres and 10 more counties passed the 500 acre mark of beans planted separately or for hogging down with corn and minerals for cheap pork production. Reports not yet completed show that Allen county with 5,000 acres last year and only 125 the previous year made the largest increase in soybeans with Crittenden coming next with an increase of 1375 acres and Todd third with an increase of 1150 acres.

"We cannot plant too many soybeans," Mr. Kenney, "because soybeans fit into the general scheme of farming for diversification and profit excellently. As a legume crop they help maintain the fertility of the soil and whether planted in corn and hogged down or planted for seed or hay they are a valuable source of home grown protein. Soybeans are a great host plant for the nitrogen-gathering bacteria, and accordingly soybeans are planted an army of bacteria begins the gathering of nitrogen from the air in one of the most efficient nitrogen-factories known, the roots of the soybean plant. Plant soybeans for profit, for better soil, and for forage."

Forty-two per cent of the farmers feel that their financial difficulties are due to low prices of farm products, the United States Department of Agriculture says. Seventeen per cent attribute their condition to high taxes; 11 per cent to high freight rates; 10 per cent to high interest rates; 6 per cent to reckless expenditures during the boom period; and 4 per cent to too much credit.

Tax-exempt securities will be eliminated from American finances within 10 years, declares Henry F. Long, Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation of Massachusetts, who charges that within the last two years savings banks of the Commonwealth have put nearly $100,000,000 into Liberty bonds to escape taxation and that the total now invested in these non-taxable securities is $275,000,000.

It seems that most of us are riding for a fall, as everybody is dissatisfied with conditions. The man on the farm wants to get off, and the man in the city is dissatisfied because he is not making enough to live decently. The whole truth is that we are living too fast and it is almost humanly impossible to earn money to supply our needs and pleasures. It would not surprise us that we followed the example of every country in the old world with inflated currency. If this should take place it would be the downfall of all. Farm labor is almost impossible to secure, and the reason is that the wages offered will not support a man with a decent living. Hence we are steadily going up and manufactured goods are selling as high as they did during the World War. How can the average man make enough money to meet these high prices?

Robert T. Harrison, Harlan county agent reports that fruit growers in his county are planning to graft from 5,000 to 10,000 trees this year, and thus lay the foundation for better and larger orchards in that county.

NATIVE CHINESE

TO SPEAK AT PETERSBURG BAPTIST CHURCH, SUNDAY, MARCH 9th, B. S. DING, KAIHING, CHINA.

In the next few months, Baptists will face the greatest problem of their history. The honor of the Baptists of the south is at stake. This is a time when every loyal Baptist should be militant and aggressive; it is a time for prayer and sacrifice.

Five years ago, at the southern Baptist convention, a great campaign was launched to enlarge the program of missions. The Foreign Mission Board, with faith, have enlarged their program over 100 per cent. The Home Mission Board has established many schools and hospitals.

Baptists have accomplished a wonderful work, yet it is just a start if Baptists will stand by their Covenant. In the last five years Baptists have baptised almost as many people as they did the 75 years previous. At the beginning of our great campaign Baptists had but 600 native missionaries on the foreign field, today there are 2800 native workers.

On March 8th and 9th Mr. B. S. Ding, a native Chinese, will be with the Petersburg Baptist church. On the night of the 8th he will sing and speak in his native language, before the pastor will speak on "The Baptist Challenge." Sunday, March 9th Mr. Ding will speak both morning and evening, his subjects being "The Call of Foreign Missions" and "The National Hope of China," respectively.

On Friday night March 7th, the pastor desires that every man and boy belonging to Petersburg Baptist church be present for a Men's Meeting, at which time some very important matters, relative to the Campaign and the church, are to be considered.

The Petersburg Baptist church is going to be one of the many Baptist churches to meet their $75 Million Campaign quota. We have not as yet reached it, but we have faith and determination. Some of our members have told their pastor that they were going to borrow the money to meet their pledges. A well known doctor in Long Run Association just the other day mortgaged his home to meet his pledge. We owe God what we pledged Him, and there is only one way to be released from that pledge. Not by a church, a member or your pastor, but the member must search his conscience and see if God will release him.

Will Baptists fall short of what they owe God? Will they let the hundreds of consecrated young men and women who are prepared to go to the foreign field go back to their homes disappointed? Will they fail to hear the Macedonian cry? I do not believe they will fail at the crucial hour. Some of us must sacrifice for those who fail to do their duty. IN WHAT CLASS DO YOU BELONG?

O. J. CHASTAIN, Pastor.

EXPOSING CHILDREN TO DISEASES OF CHILDHOOD.

From the first to the sixth year the death rate of children drops from the high rate of infancy, but there is an increase in the sickness rate due to contagious diseases of childhood. The result of the increased sickness among the pre-school children is many damaged children. Physical defects soon develop from which the children suffer in after life.

Children at this period are particularly susceptible to the infectious disease such as measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and diphtheria. Mothers, too, frequently are heard to remark, "My children have not had the diseases of childhood—I will be glad when they have them and I will not have to worry over them catching everything." It is NOT necessary for children to have whooping cough, measles, etc., instead of allowing them to be exposed to such diseases every precaution should be taken to prevent infection. Fortunately the child who is able to go through the pre-school period without having had the infectious diseases. He will come into a healthy childhood because he is an undamaged child. Infectious diseases leave down a child's safeguards and leave paths open for other infection to enter. For instance, measles may seem a mild disease, but its complications are often severe and the end result is a damaged child, possibly with permanently injured eyes, discharging ears or the beginning of a throat condition which will cause endless trouble. Scarlet fever, too, may appear to be mild but a permanent injury to the kidneys may follow and the whooping cough, which may seem merely to annoy the child by the coughing attacks, often paves the way for tuberculosis to which the child of this age is especially susceptible.

Keep your child undamaged by protecting him from infectious diseases during the pre-school period.

Jno. L. Jones, of Lexington, was a business visitor to Burlington last Saturday.

SERVING TWO MASTERS

Notwithstanding the protestations for peace and outlawing of war, every government is bending every effort to invent deadlier devices, and Uncle Samuel is among the leaders.

For instance, our government has perfected a bomb weighing 4,000 pounds, to be carried by airplanes. This is ten times as big as the largest bomb used in the World War. It contains a ton of high explosives and makes a crater in the ground 57 feet deep and 150 feet across.

Another American invention is an armored caterpillar tractor with a speed of 30 miles an hour. It goes up a 45-degree slope easily, and can travel through water up to the driver's chin.

The famous "French 75" gun is eclipsed by a new American gun of the same caliber, but twice the range or shooting distance. Shoulder machine guns are taking the place of regular rifles. They fire bullets four times as heavy and send them three times as far as the Browning gun.

Poison gases have been perfected since the Armistice, many times more deadly than the worst gases used during the World War. It is asserted that with a very few airplanes New York, Paris or London could be wiped off the face of the earth in a single night and coast fortifications annihilated in an hour.

The people of the world should give serious thought to the fact that, while one faction of our leaders works to prevent another big war, another faction is toiling night and day to perfect more deadly devices of warfare.

The subjects to be discussed are: Foreign Missions, Home Missions, State Missions, 75 Million Campaign, Christian Education and Denominational Literature.

Lectures on Stewardship and Missions for 30 minutes each evening by the following pastors:

Rev. O. J. Steger, Rev. G. B. Bush, Rev. A. S. Stiles, Rev. Cecil Seel, Rev. J. A. Miller and Dr. H. D. Allen.

Dr. W. D. Powell will also speak at the Erlanger church Friday March 21st at 7:45 p. m.

At First Church Covington Sunday March 23d 11 a. m.

At Madison Ave., Sunday March 23d 7:30 p. m.

SCHOOL BOY LABORERS

Many people have been worrying because of the scarcity of men to do the rough work of the country. It has seemed to them as if it would be necessary to let in a great multitude of aliens in order to get our roads built and ditch dug.

But there are other sources of labor. About 20 high school boys, Cadillac, Michigan, were employed recently on the paving gangs in that city, and the city manager says they are excellent workers. It was interesting to see the husky youths racing with loaded wheelbarrows for the concrete mixer.

The country has not made all the use it could of the students who are idle through the summer. Many more of them would like work and they would not draw back from the tasks calling for overalls and muscle. They would work with more energy than many of the manual workers you see nowadays.

BACKING UP THE SCHOOL

Much of the success of a country school depends on the kind of home support it gets. The country school needs all the enthusiasm it can arouse, and if the children hear the home folks knocking the school and the teacher out, the youngsters are not going to feel much interest.

Whatever faults there may be in a school, the parents should never comment upon them in the presence of the children. Have the children feel that the school is the best ever, and they will show twice as much interest in it as they would otherwise.

But of 20, it will be a good school.

SALES OF TOBACCO UNDER FALSE NAME OR NUMBERS ENDS

NEW LAW PROVIDING HEAVY PENALTIES FOR OBJECTIONABLE PRACTICE GOES INTO EFFECT WITH GOVERNOR'S APPROVAL.

The new tobacco law of Kentucky was approved by Governor Wm. J. Fields, and as it carries an emergency clause, goes into effect immediately. Under the provisions of the new law no tobacco may be sold in Kentucky over auction warehouse floors except in the true name of the grower and heavy penalties are provided by the sale of tobacco by numbers or under assumed names.

The new law was introduced in the House by Representative E. B. Miller, of Mercer county, and in the Senate by Newton Bright of Henry county. It passed the Senate with only one dissenting vote and won in the House by a vote of 73 to 15.

The bill requires the posting in conspicuous place every day of the name and address of the persons selling tobacco on that particular day and the number of pounds each person has up for sale. This posting must be done a half hour before the sale starts and any failure to post the names is punishable by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100 each day.

False information given in such notices, or false names and addresses, make the warehouseman subject to indictment, and if convicted, to a fine of $500 for each offense.

CUTTING RETAIL COSTS

Complaint is sometimes made that the difference between the wholesale price of articles and the retail price is too great, that the percentage taken by the retailers for their expenses is too large.

There are some ways in which the public could co-operate to reduce the cost of retail distribution. If people for instance would make the usual habit to pay cash for their purchases, and if so far as possible they would carry their own purchases home instead of having them delivered, they could cut considerable items of cost out of the expense of distributing goods by retail.

There is another way in which people can help a lot to cut retail costs down. That is by watching very carefully the newspaper advertisements, and taking advantage of the special offerings that they see thus announced.

When they buy of an advertiser, they are helping to enlarge his business, which enables him to operate for a smaller expense, and therefore to sell on a low margin of cost. By accepting the opportunities thus offered, they help such dealers to turn their stock rapidly, which is one of the best possible ways to reduce the expense of retail distribution. If a store can double the speed with which goods are sold and cleared out of the store, it is obvious that the cost of handling such goods is going to be reduced by a large ratio, and the public will get the benefit of the lower expense.

The people who at this time of year neglect to note the many excellent opportunities to buy that are stated in the columns of the Recorder are not exercising due care for their own interest, and are allowing their living costs to mount up higher than they need to.

WOMEN WILL TAKE A HAND.

During the week beginning April 7, many a representative conference of the women of the United States will be held in Washington, to consider the general problem of law enforcement, with particular emphasis on prohibition. It is said the conference will be attended by delegates from nearly every woman's organization in the United States. None know better than the women of America the distressing results of the campaign which has been organized to hinder the enforcement of the prohibition law, and one is inclined to believe that the deliberations of this meeting will be far more important than those of some other gatherings which have discussed ways and means of enforcement. Coming as it does but a few weeks before the date set for the meeting of the national conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties, when platform declarations must state the attitude of political leaders toward the issue involved, the pronouncement of the name of the Women's Committee on Law Enforcement, cannot be carelessly regarded.

The bottom dropped out of the Burlington and Florence pike, near James P. Tanner's, last week, and speed in traveling for that thoroughfare has been checked somewhat. There are also several bad places in the Burlington and Petersburg pike.

"LEST WE FORGET"

As we turn from commemorating the natal day of one to whom we give credit for preserving the Union, we pause again to do honor to the first national hero—his whose convictions and determination won for the colonies the right to their independence and the chance to work out their own salvation.

True Americans should welcome the opportunity to do honor to Geo. Washington's memory because to his leadership of a cause that triumphed in the face of overwhelming odds, we owe everything.

Washington's halo is not that of a martyr whose efforts were unavailing, who strived in vain to right wrongs. To those who view world events in their proper historical perspective, without sentimentality and with love of justice and freedom in their breasts, the American Revolution fills the most encouraging page in the history of the centuries.

But for most of us, it is only in times of stress like those through which we passed during the World War and the reconstruction period, that we can realize our exceptional privileges as a nation and as individuals. It is only after the results of tyranny and the greed of might for power, that we have to come to appreciate that which the Father of our country made possible for us.

Since the world catastrophe, the Declaration of Independence has a clearer significance; we know as we did in former years, but did not fully appreciate, what it means to be free and independent states, removed from the dominance of foreign powers. We have come to a new sense of appreciation of the constitution of the United States and a realization that the farmers of that sacred document built wisely when they sought to protect the rights of the minority against the passing whims of the majority.

And, so this year, Washington's birthday should be no routine holiday, but a day of solemn reflection over the debt that we can never repay for the heritage of a free people that we enjoy.

Let us pay an unstinted tribute to him who made us a nation, that warrior who cut the bonds of foreign overlordship, the statesman who bade us, avoiding entangling alliances, to go our free way, an independent republic.

"With malice toward none," said Washington's greatest successor, "with charity for all," was a summary of Washington's own political creed. No lost cause, however glorious with the blood of martyrs, seems more noble today than the cause of American independence.

It is our duty to cherish and protect it and give honor to whom honor is due.

COMPLETED VILLAGE

Stopping in a small town a traveling man said to a prospective customer:

"It has been twenty years since I was here last. Many buildings gone up since then."

"Any gas or electric company here?"

"No."

"Planning for any?"

"No."

"Well," said said the traveling man, "I've been all over this country, and this is the first town I have seen that is what you might call actually finished."—Youngstown Telegram.

The marriage of Miss Beulah Roberts, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, to Mr. Harold Brown, of Ft. Thomas, was quietly solemnized on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Crescent Ave. The fair young girl never looked lovelier than in her wedding gown of blue crepe satin with garniture of gray and hat en-suite. The Rev. Sherwood Cutts, pastor of the Commonwealth Avenue Baptist church, officiated. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Brown, Misses Anne, Margaret and Velma Brown of Ft. Thomas; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hall, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Earle Gray, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Cutts and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown.

A man spitting on the sidewalk is not spitting at a crack for pennies or pretending to see how close he can come to hitting a fly. It is a minor evil and should be abolished. If the women do wear short dresses it is no reason to flood the pavement with tobacco juice. You may shoot crabs on the sly, peddle moonshine or run over a pedestrian with your automobile, but don't spit on the pavement, for it is a dirty practice.

R. O. Smith and brother, William, of Union precinct, were transacting business in Burlington, Monday. R. O. Smith made this office a pleasant call, and told us that he cut a honey locust tree on his place a few days ago, that was at least a hundred years old, and it measured 4 feet 4 inches at the butt and was 78 feet high. The tree, located in a place that was so numerous in years gone by are about extinguished.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

A company of citizens met at the Boone County High School building, last Friday afternoon, and organized a Parent-Teachers Association. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. B. Renaker, V-President, Mesdames B. C. Gaines and W. L. Cropper; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Estelle Huey. The object of this association is to bring the parents and schools closer together, and promote co-operation between parents and teachers for the good of the children. The next meeting will be held at the Court House, Wednesday, March 12th, at 7:30 p. m., at which it is hoped to have a speaker present.

Movers have been on the go this week. Alvan Franks has moved to C. L. Gaines' farm near Linaburg; Wm. Craddock has moved to N. W. Carpenter's farm and Lillian Stephens will occupy the house vacated by Craddock; Marshall Hall will move from the Asa Cason farm to Mrs. Lorena Cropper's farm at Bullittsville; W. S. Bush will move to Mr. Johnson's farm on the Petersburg pike and J. O. Boat will move to the Belleview pike. It is a big job to keep track of tenants at this time of year.

In a letter to Kirtley Rice from Charles Maxwell, who is now on the U. S. S. West Virginia, he says: "Edwin Duncan, (a B. H. S. boy) is the Ensign in charge of my division and that makes it more like home. He sure is a good officer to his men. He will do the last thing to keep his men out of trouble. A man can't do enough for a fellow like that." Charles Maxwell is a son of Mrs. Wm. Craddock, of this place, and has been in the Navy about two years. It is not often two young men from the same town meet under such conditions.

At a meeting of the Hog Wallow Debating Society, one evening last week, one of the members "radioed" the following: "They may talk about tobacco, gardens, farming all you please, they raise in winter at the store while sitting at your ease, but to have these things in earnest you must bustle about, and in summer plant and work 'em or you'll have to do without."

Reports from different sections of the county are very discouraging to growers of small grain. There has been practically no snow the past winter for a cover crop, and as a result the hard frozes have pulled the clover and other crops up. In many fields the roots have been pulled out of the ground from two to three inches.

There is no question but what we have experienced some real winter weather of which we have expressed a satisfaction of having enough. But winter began with the New Year and we have had only two months of it. Another month is yet due before we can hope to pluck many spring flowers in the woodland.

The horse which carries or hauls one to town should not be suffered to stand out in the cold all day unblanketed, unwatered and unfed. It is not a manifestation of the appreciative spirit for service rendered. Treat well the animal that does your bidding and apply unto it the Golden Rule.

Albert Underhill, of Erlanger, spent from Saturday evening until Monday with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Underhill, out on the East Bend pike. He reports his father in bad shape, suffering from asthma.

If the first three days of March control the weather for the next three months, as some of the old timers claim, you had just as well get ready to go to work, because the weather for the first three days of March was all that could be desired.

Payments of advances on the 1923 crop to burley tobacco growers who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association total slightly more than $15,000, according to a report from H. Lee Earley, Secretary-Treasurer.

The contractors, Billiter & Oliver Bros., have completed their contract and have been paid $163,149.80 for reconstructing with concrete, the Lexington pike, from Florence to Richmond, a distance of 5.11 miles.

Sheep raisers report that they have been quite successful in saving young lambs. There is money in sheep when properly handled and the lambs watchfully cared for.

The beautiful spring like weather of the past week has put the hens to work, and as a consequence eggs have dropped to 24 cents per dozen.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and two children, of Cincinnati, spent Saturday night and Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hickman.

AS A MAN THINKETH

Eternal Truth is changing the universe. As mortals drop off their mental swaddling-clothes? Self will, self love, self justification self satisfaction, self admiration, self indulgence, fear, doubt, anxiety, lust envy, jealousy, deceit, hypocrisy dishonesty, hatred, greed, ignorance. They seem a formidable array but may be classed under one head, namely, false belief in a power opposed to God.

Each day becomes more wonderful and beautiful to us as we utilize our opportunities to allow right thoughts to expand into expression in our lives. Each has a right to be beautiful and expressive of all that is good and true. The success of one's life in this direction is never a deterrent to the like proper development of any other life, since good is limitless. Growth, progress, the expansion of thought into expression, are laws of infinite life.

By putting them into practice daily and hourly we are given abundant occasion for overcoming the errors that would prevent the proper development of the activity that belongs to their right thoughts. As we relinquish the error, we have the joy of seeing the right thoughts unfold in expression.

"As a man thinketh so he is."

THE BROADER VIEW

People in former years used to work mostly for their own personal welfare, without caring much for community causes, and a spirit of jealousy and antagonism was the natural result. It held back business progress, since towns were so divided by personal differences that co-operation was difficult.

People who live lives just of selfish grasping don't get the higher satisfactions. They may get a certain amount of money, though probably not so much as if they were generous spirited. There is a law of life, that you must give if you want to get.

The time that people put in to work for community causes brings a reward of gratitude from people who have been benefited and helped by community gains. It gives people greater power and makes them more practical as organizers and executives. The time that is spent for the benefit of the community brings rewards not dreamed of when it was given.

SCHOOL BANDS

The Burton, North Dakota school has a band that has acquired a wide reputation. This band, as told in the St. Paul Farmer, has won the state high school music contest for several years, and it makes a lot of neighboring states each summer. It plays the best music, has had a many as 1,000 at its paid concert, and it has $16,000 invested in musical instruments and traveling equipment.

Some of the schools in Boone county would do well to see what they could do along this line. Such an organization helps young people acquire self confidence and ambition for self improvement. Conditions in country towns are favorable for such organizations, since the young people are not too much occupied by foolish distractions.

FARMERS HELP THEMSELVES.

It is found that more than two billion dollars' worth of business was done last year by organizations of American farmers.

It has long been said that the agriculturist is primarily a business man, but it is only of late that he has compelled recognition of this capacity by adopting the most up-to-date methods of business men in other lines.

Collectively, he is the greatest of capitalists, also the greatest of producers. His weak point has been distribution. When he learns to distribute his products as manufacturers do, he will have his business upon a rock. Through co-operation and the employment of skilled executives to handle his goods, he may do for himself more than the government can ever do for him.—St. Joseph Gazette.

MARRIED

Sherman Peeno, 20, of Constance, and Irene Arnold, 19, of Burlington, were married last Saturday at Covington, last Saturday. Mr. Peeno is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Arnold, who reside on the North Bend road about two miles north of Burlington. The young couple have the best wishes of all for a happy married life.

NOTICE

The Boone County Wool Growers Association and the Boone County Farm Bureau respectfully ask the Sheriff of this county to see that a license tag is purchased for each and every dog in Boone county, or else present the names of the delinquent owners of dogs to the next Grand Jury.

Clem Rondall, President F. B. L. T. Clure, Secy W. G. Ass'n.

While exports of the United States to Germany gained only three-tenths of 1 per cent in 1923, imports from that country showed an increase of 38 per cent.

COURT OF APPEALS KNOCKS OUT PLAN TO AVOID CONTRACT

LANDLORD'S LIEN HELD SUBORDINATE TO POOL AGREEMENT AND NON-MEMBER HAS NO CONTROL OVER POOL TENANT.

Lexington, Ky.—That a landlord's lien cannot take precedence over a contract of Burley Growers' Co-operative Association; that an agreement by which a tenant receives a cash consideration for his work on a tobacco crop cannot be permitted to evade an Association contract, and that section 18-C of the Bingham Co-operative Marketing Act does not give a non-member landlord any control over a member "tenant" tobacco were decisions reached by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky unanimously in the Alonzo Quire, Douglas Smith and J. M. Holland cases appealed from the Shelby circuit court.

PLAN FOR HIGH EGG HATCH NOW

Lexington, Ky.—Now is the time to plan for high fertility and high vitality, the two fundamentals of a good hatch from the eggs this spring according to Holman Martin, of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. He states that while faulty incubation will often prevent good eggs from hatching the questions of fertility and hatchability can be settled by proper care and feeding of the farm flock at this time of the year.

"Not more than 15 hens to one male bird of the general purpose breeds such as Plymouth Rocks, R. I. Reds, or Wyandottes, should be used," Mr. Martin continues, "and with the lighter breeds such as Leghorns and Anconas not more than 15 or 16 hens should be mated with one male. Small pens with one male bird to the pen are much better than large pens where two or more cockerels are used; but if the small pen cannot be provided, a good plan is to alternate the males, using one every half day or day and then replacing with the other."

"Experimental work conducted at several Experimental Stations shows that feeding will affect both fertility and hatchability of eggs," says Mr. Martin, "and the results prove that feeding a balanced ration increased the hatchability rather than decreased it. An ample supply of milk or dry mash containing tankage or meat scrap should be fed, and free range or green feed given the breeding flock will increase both fertility and hatchability. A ryegrass field near the poultry house will solve the problem, but if no ryegrass is available then some form of green feed such as germinated oats, lettuce or cabbage can be used."

"Germinated oats are probably the cheapest and most readily available. For 100 hens use four to five pounds of dry oats daily and get six candy buckets, boxes, tubs, or other containers. Have one which holds water in which to soak the oats and five with small holes in the bottom. These should be kept in a room where the temperature is 60 to 70 degrees F., a good place is in the furnace room or back of the kitchen stove."

"The oats should be put in bucket No. 1 (the water tight bucket) covered with warm water, and allowed to soak overnight. They should then be poured to bucket No. 2. In the same way other oats should be put to soak in bucket No. 1. The next day the ones in No. 2 should be poured in bucket No. 3, those in No. 1 to bucket No. 2 and more put to soak. They should be sprinkled with warm water twice each day. Continuing this method, transferring, watering, and starting a new bucket each day, on the sixth day the oats should be ready to feed. After that, one bucket can be fed each day and a new one started. The sprout on the oats should be from one quarter to one half inch long when fed and the length of time required to grow that long will depend on the temperature of the room where they are kept. If the above method does not give the right lengths sprout vary the number of containers until it works out satisfactorily."

THE INCENTIVE TO WORK

Country life has a wonderful influence on the nation as a whole because it gives young people such splendid incentives to work. The young people in the cities are inclined to spend their money as fast as they get it. The majority fail to make any effort to own their own homes, because they may not stay where they are six months.

Young people starting life in the country do it with more feeling of permanence. When they buy a farm on mortgage, or start in some business, they have an incentive for earnest labor. They get more satisfaction out of their gains each year than they could from the frothiest and most sparkling city sports. Thus their industry builds up the country, and pride in their constant gains fills their life with the glow of achievement.

March is the regular time for moving, and there will be a number seeking a new place of habitation, regardless of the weather and roads.

GERMANY'S AFFRONT

The German government, through its official representatives in Washington, recanted and decided to pay tardy recognition to the memory of America's war president.

Though the German did fly their embassy flag at half-staff during the time that the funeral of Former President Wilson was taking place, they paid the delayed tribute only after it was upon them that they had blundered.

The former enemies of the United States did not realize the temper of American people—that Americans respect, honor and revere those who served in the highest office within their gift, regardless of any partisan feeling, and that they wish to cherish the memory of men of such idealism and rare attainments as those possessed by Mr. Wilson.

The first excuse given at the German embassy at Washington was that the German government regarded the former president as a private citizen and therefore did not deem it necessary to show any public respect for his memory.

Finding how its announcement reflected, the embassy then authorized the statement that "It having been officially announced this afternoon that there will be general mourning for the late President Wilson after 12:30 o'clock, the German embassy will join the expression of the nation's mourning by flying its flag at half-staff."

The incident means more than it outwardly appears to. It gives Americans a direct insight into the attitude of the German government, which reflects the state of mind in Germany.

It clearly demonstrates that Germany was a poor loser in the war and that she still harbors hatred for America. No other construction can very well be placed on the incident.

It portrays to this country a condition that no one imagined existed—at least to a very great extent.

America has been Germany's best friend. Even now two of its foremost citizens are in Europe trying to bring order out of chaos and help restore German economic conditions.

Even while Germany's embassy officers in this country were laying themselves open to violent criticism, American friends of Germany were making a stirring appeal before a committee of the house of representatives for an appropriation of fifty million dollars from this government to help the starving people of Germany.

Citizens of the United States have already sent millions to Germany for relief work among the war survivors and a campaign is being conducted at this moment to raise more millions to feed the undernourished and starving children of Germany.

In the light of these facts, even though Germany did intend a studied insult to the memory of America's foremost private citizen, which Americans will not tolerate, especially from its former enemies, the affront will not soon be forgotten and will serve to reopen the war wounds, that were being healed by the act of a forgiving people, who were led to believe that Germany had repented.

COLIC—THE RESULT OF OVERFEEDING

One of the most frequent mistakes in caring for a nursing baby is that of over feeding. There are two reasons for this—giving him too much food and feeding him at short intervals. The grandmothers in many families are responsible for the frequent feeding of the baby. They retain the old-fashioned idea of THEIR grandmothers and firmly believe that baby should be fed every time he wakes up or cries. They think if baby is restless, fretful and chews his fingers he is hungry—they do not realize that he may be suffering from over eating.

Child care has, within the past 20 years, become a practical science to an extent undreamed of in our grandmothers' days. It is now known that from 3 to 4 hours are required for the baby's stomach to empty itself. If another feeding is given before the stomach has had time to empty itself fresh milk is poured into the partly digested milk the result being that the partly digested stomach or that the fresh milk will leave the stomach before it is digested. Constant feeding gives the baby's stomach no rest—it must work all the time to care for the food. No muscle can work continuously without becoming weak and unable to work to the best advantage. A tired stomach will cause pain. This pain in a baby is known as "colic."

Too much food gives rise to "colic," indigestion and bowel troubles. Frequently diarrhoea and fever may follow an attack of indigestion which is simply the result of taking more food than the stomach can care for. To prevent colic, nurse the baby by the clock. Pure water, or a tablespoonful of orange juice in equal amounts of water may be given. With these exceptions feed the baby nothing between feedings.

The size of the baby's stomach should be the guide to the amount of milk he can take. Weigh the baby before and after feeding if there is reason to think he is getting too much at a feeding.

It can not be claimed that the fondness of the American people for chewing gum is due to a consciousness that they need jaw exercises.

GIRL SWINE GROWER

EARN $500.

Lexington, Ky.—Velera Sims, state champion swine grower has not only learned the fundamentals of good feeding in her three years experience as a Junior club member, but in a letter to J. W. Whitehouse State Leader of Boys and Girls Club Work Kentucky she tells how she earned over five hundred dollars from premiums and the sale of five of her six pigs.

"I became a club member in 1921," she writes, "and have completed a project each year. I knew Duroc-Jersey my choice as I knew that 'pigs' but it takes a Duroc to make a real hog. This year I started my project with a litter of six. I began feeding at the age of two months on various feeds, such as ground rye and corn. They were kept in clean pastures and given plenty of water. I was ready for the first exhibit July 24, 1923 at Mercer county fair. In this exhibit I was successful, winning first, second and third prizes. My next exhibit was made at Lincoln county fair with equal results. At the Kentucky State Fair I carried away premiums amounting to $186, and I made my last exhibit at the Tennessee State Fair winning $80 in premiums. My work has been a real pleasure to me as I have gained much experience in hogs, have made many acquaintances, a nest little sum of $510 and have one pig left to begin a new project. I feel that much of my success is due to our most efficient county agent, John R. Spencer, and wish to thank him for the interest he has taken in me and my work."

CUT FARM COSTS THIS YEAR SAYS EXPERT

Lexington, Ky.—The question of costs is the most pressing of all problems before the farmer at the present time according to W. D. Nichols, Head of the Farm Economics Department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. In times of prosperity and rising prices, the question of costs does not weigh so heavily as it does in times of depression and falling prices he declares. And he points out further that it is during such times as we have experienced in the last three years that the pinch of high costs is felt.

"If we go to the bottom of the agricultural problem," Mr. Nichols says, "we are apt to reach the conclusion that the control and reduction of costs is the essence of the farmers' problem today, and the question for farmers is more pressing than for any other class of producers. This is so because of all lines of business the price declines during the post-war slump, were greatest in farm products, which has made it more difficult for farmers to pay their debts and keep going. Now we are likely that we shall experience a condition of rapidly rising prices for this next year at least, and accordingly a constructive program for the farmer to follow in 1924 must contain means for keeping production costs at the very minimum."

"Not only is this a one year program but a long-time program," says Mr. Nichols, "and if the farm producer is to make expenses and income this year he must cut down the cost of production."

THE BIG THINGS

Theodore Roosevelt once said of a consular agent, whose ability he recognized and whose friendship he prized:

"If a man disappoints me the first time, it is his fault. If he disappoints me the second time it is mine. I never blame a man who has been disappointed. He is kindly, courteous and successful in all the small things but he fell down in the one big thing that came his way."

How true that is today as it was in the days when Mr. Roosevelt occupied the White House. But how many men measure up to the former president's standard?

So many of us fail to realize that when we disappoint our superiors, we lose their confidence, and where we find what our failure to meet the expectations of others has brought about, we are very apt to lose our self respect, our grip on ourselves.

The two thoughts expressed by Mr. Roosevelt link up together. Disappointing those who have confidence in us that we can do the right thing at the right time and falling down on the one big thing that comes our way.

Inability to recognize the big thing when it comes is the fault that is inherent with most of us and that causes us to fall down. Most any man can be successful in small things, little daily detail, routine work, but the man who gets ahead and rises above the ordinary type is he who sees the big thing when it presents itself.

You can pick out the men in this community who have been successful. Study their characteristics and most of them you will find to be very similar to other men's. But they have that one trait that has caused them to forge ahead—the ability to see their opportunities when they come and to make the most of them.

If Washington came back February 22 and saw all the paper hatchets stuck up, he would probably want to know what they were celebrating.

SAVE THE SOIL WITH SOYS

Lexington, Ky.—Although the soybean acreage in Kentucky in 1923 doubled that of 1922 with a total of 120,000 acres, this year's acreage should double again according to Ralph Kenney, specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. He declares that the soybean which has been used in China for thousands of years for human consumption has proved its worth here in Kentucky as a soil builder, a forage crop, and a cash crop.

Ten years ago practically no soybeans were grown in the state, but last year 11 counties produced over 1,000 acres and 10 more counties passed the 500 acre mark of beans planted separately or for hogging down with corn and minerals for cheap pork production. Reports not yet completed show that Allen county with 5,000 acres last year and only 1250 the previous year made the largest increase in soybeans with the increase coming next with an increase of 1375 acres and Todd third with an increase of 1150 acres.

"We cannot plant too many soybeans," Mr. Kenney, "because soybeans fit into the general scheme of farming for diversification and profit excellently. As a legume crop they help maintain the fertility of the soil, and whether planted in corn and hogged down or planted for seed or hay they are a valuable source of home grown protein. Soybeans are a great host plant for the nitrogen-gathering bacteria, and accordingly soybeans are planted an army of bacteria begins the gathering of nitrogen from the air in one of the most efficient nitrogen-factories known, the roots of the soybean plant. Plant soybeans for profit, for better soil, and for forage."

Forty-two per cent of the farmers feel that their financial difficulties are due to low prices of farm products, the United States Department of Agriculture says. Seventeen per cent attribute their condition to high taxes; 11 per cent to high costs for farm labor; 10 per cent to high freight rates; 10 per cent to high interest rates; 2 per cent to reckless expenditures during the boom period; and 4 per cent to too much credit.

Tax-exempt securities will be eliminated from American finances within 10 years, declares Henry F. Long, Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation of Massachusetts, who charges that within the last two years savings banks of the Commonwealth have put nearly $100,000,000 into Liberty bonds to escape taxation and that the total now invested in these non-taxable securities is $275,000,000.

Coughs annoy unnecessarily

It seems that most of us are riding for a fall, as everybody is dissatisfied with conditions. The man on the farm wants to get off, and the man in the city is dissatisfied because he is not making enough to live decently. The whole truth is that we are living too fast and it is almost humanly impossible to earn money to supply our needs and pleasures. It would not surprise us that we followed the example of every country in the old world with inflated currency. If this should take place it would be the downfall of all. Farm labor is almost impossible to secure, and the reason is that the wages offered will not support a man with a decent living. Rents are steadily going up and manufactured goods are selling as high as they did during the World War. How can the average man make enough money to meet these high prices?

Robert T. Harrison, Harlan county agent, reports that fruit growers in his county are planning to graft from 8,000 to 10,000 trees this year, and thus lay the foundation for better and larger orchards in that county.

NATIVE CHINESE

TO SPEAK AT PETERSBURG BAPTIST CHURCH, SUNDAY, MARCH 9th, B. S. DING, KAIFENG, CHINA.

In the next few months, Baptists will face the greatest problem of their history. The honor of the Baptists of the south is at stake. This is a time when every loyal Baptist should be militant and aggressive; it is a time for prayer and sacrifice.

Five years ago, at the southern Baptist convention, a great campaign was launched to enlarge the program of missions. The Foreign Mission Board, with faith, have enlarged their program over 100 per cent. The Home Mission Board has established many schools and hospitals.

Baptists have accomplished a wonderful work, yet it is just a start if Baptists will stand by their Covenant. In the last five years Baptists have baptized almost as many people as they did the 75 years previous. At the beginning of our great campaign Baptists had but 600 native missionaries on the foreign field, today there are 800 native workers.

On March 8th and 9th Mr. B. S. Ding, a native Chinese, will be with the Petersburg Baptist church. On the night of the 8th he will sing and speak in his native language, before the pastor will speak on "The Baptist Challenge." Sunday, March 9th Mr. Ding will speak before morning and evening, his subjects being "The Call of Foreign Missions" and "The National Hope of China," respectively.

On Friday night March 7th, the pastor desires that every man and boy belonging to Petersburg Baptist church be present for a Men's Meeting, at which time some very important matters, relative to the Campaign and the church, are to be considered.

The Petersburg Baptist church is going to be one of the many Baptist churches to meet their $75 Million Campaign quota. We have not as yet reached it, but we have faith and determination. Some of our members have said their pastor that they were going to borrow the money to meet their pledges. A well known doctor in Long Run Association just the other day mortgaged his home to meet his pledge. We owe God what we pledged Him, and there is only one way to be released from that pledge. Not by a church, a member or your pastor, but the Pledge must search his conscience and see if God will release him.

Will Baptists fall short of what they owe God? Will they let the hundreds of consecrated young men and women who are prepared to go to the foreign field go back to their homes disappointed? Will they fail to hear the Macedonian cry? I do not believe they will fail at the crucial hour. Some of us must sacrifice for those who fail to do their duty. IN WHAT CLASS DO YOU BELONG?

O. J. CHASTAIN, Pastor.

EXPOSING CHILDREN TO DISEASES OF CHILDHOOD.

From the first to the sixth year the death rate of children drops from the high rate of infancy, but there is an increase in the sickness rate due to contagious diseases of childhood. The result of the increased sickness among the pre-school children is many damaged children. Physical defects soon develop from which the children suffer in after life.

Children at this period are particularly susceptible to the infectious disease such as measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and diphtheria. Mothers, too, frequently are heard to remark, "My children have not had the diseases of childhood—I will be glad when they have them and I will not have to worry over them catching everything." It is NOT necessary for children to have whooping cough, measles, etc.,—instead of allowing them to be exposed to such diseases every precaution should be taken to prevent infection. Fortunately the child who is able to go through the pre-school period without having had the infectious diseases. He will come into a healthy childhood because he is an undamaged child. Infectious diseases break down a child's safeguards and leave paths open for other infection to enter. For instance, measles may seem a mild disease, but its complications are often severe, and at the end the result is a damaged child—possibly with permanently injured eyes, discharging ears or the beginning of a throat condition which will cause endless trouble. Scarlet fever, too, may appear to be mild but a permanent injury to the kidneys may follow, and the whooping cough, which may seem merely to annoy the child by the coughing attacks, often paves the way for tuberculosis to which the child of this age is especially susceptible.

Keep your child undamaged by protecting him from infectious diseases during the pre-school period.

Jno. L. Jones, of Lexington, was business visitor to Burlington Saturday.

SERVING TWO MASTERS

Notwithstanding the protestations for peace and outlawing of war, every government is bending every effort to invent deadlier devices, and Uncle Sam is among the leaders.

For instance, our government has perfected a bomb weighing 4,000 pounds, to be carried by airplanes. This is ten times as big as the largest bomb used in the World War. It contains a ton of high explosives and makes a crater in the ground 57 feet deep and 150 feet across.

Another American invention is an armored caterpillar tractor with a speed of 30 miles an hour. It goes up a 45-degree slope easily, and can travel through water up to the driver's chin.

The famous "French 75" gun is eclipsed by a new American gun of the same caliber, but twice the range or shooting distance.

Shoulder machine guns are taking the place of regular rifles. They fire bullets four times as heavy and send them three times as far as the Browning gun.

Poison gases have been perfected since the Armistice, many times more deadly than the worst gases used during the World War. It is asserted that with a very few airships New York, Paris or London could be gripped off the face of the earth in a single night and coast fortifications annihilated in an hour.

The people of the world should give serious thought to the fact that, while one faction of our leaders works to prevent another big war, another faction is toiling night and day to perfect more deadly devices of warfare.

Dr. W. D. Powell will also speak at the Erlanger church Friday March 21st at 7:45 p. m.

At First Church Covington Sunday March 23d 11 a. m.

At Madison Ave., Sunday March 23d 7:30 p. m.

SCHOOL BOY LABORERS

Many people have been worrying because of the scarcity of men to do the rough work of the country. It has seemed to them as if it would be necessary to let in a great multitude of aliens in order to get our roads built and ditches dug.

But there are other sources of labor. About 20 high school boys at Cadillac, Michigan, were employed recently on the paving gangs in that city, and the city manager says they are excellent workers. It was interesting to see the husky youths racing with loaded wheelbarrows for the concrete mixer.

The country has not made any use of it could of the students who are idle through the summer. Many more of them would like work and would not draw back from the tasks calling for overalls and muscle. They would work with more energy than many of the manual workers you see nowadays.

BACKING UP THE SCHOOL

Much of the success of a country school depends on the kind of home support it gets. The country school needs all the enthusiasm it can arouse, and if the children hear the home folks knocking the school and the teacher, those youngsters are not going to take much interest.

Whatever faults there may be in a school, the parents should never comment upon them in the presence of the children. Have the children feel that the school is the best ever, and they will show twice as much interest.

It is a fact that feeling, in 19 cases out of 20, if it will be a good school.

SALES OF TOBACCO UNDER FALSE NAME OR NUMBERS ENDS

NEW LAW PROVIDING HEAVY PENALTIES FOR OBJECTIONABLE PRACTICE GOES INTO EFFECT WITH GOVERNOR'S APPROVAL.

The new tobacco law of Kentucky was approved by Governor Wm. J. Fields and, as it carries an emergency clause, goes into effect immediately. Under the provisions of the new law no tobacco may be sold in Kentucky over auction warehouse floors except in the true name of the grower and heavy penalties are provided for the sale of tobacco by numbers or under assumed names.

The new law was introduced in the House by Representative E. B. Miller, of Mercer county, and in the Senate by Newton Bright of Henry county. It passed the Senate with only one dissenting vote and won in the House by a vote of 73 to 15.

The bill requires the posting in conspicuous place every day of the name and address of the persons selling tobacco on that particular day and the number of pounds each person has up for sale. This posting must be done a half hour before the sale starts and any failure to post the names is punishable by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100 each day.

False information given in such notices, of false names and addresses, make the warehouseman subject to indictment, and if convicted, to a fine of $500 for each offense.

CUTTING RETAIL COSTS

Complaint is sometimes made that the difference between the wholesale price of articles and the retail price is too great, that the percentage taken by the retailers for their expenses is too large.

There are some ways in which the public could co-operate to reduce the cost of retail distribution. If people for instance would make it their usual habit to pay cash for their purchases, and if so far as possible they would carry their own purchases home instead of having them delivered, they could cut considerable items of cost out of the expense of distributing goods by retail.

There is still another way in which people can help a lot to get retail costs down. That is by watching very carefully the newspaper advertisements, and taking advantage of the special offerings that they see thus announced.

When they buy of an advertiser, they help a lot to reduce the expense of retail distribution. If a store can double the speed with which goods are sold and cleared out of the store, it is obvious that the cost of handling such goods is going to be reduced by a large ratio, and the public will get the benefit of the lower expense.

The people who at this time of year neglect to note the many excellent opportunities to buy that are stated in the columns of the Recorder are not exercising due care for their own interest, and are allowing their living costs to mount up higher than they need to.

WOMEN WILL TAKE A HAND.

During the week beginning April 7, next, a representative conference of the women of the United States will be held in Washington, "to consider the general problem of law enforcement, with particular emphasis on prohibition." It is said the conference will be attended by delegates from nearly every woman's organization in the United States. None know better than the women of America the distressing results of the campaign which has been organized to hinder the enforcement of the prohibition law, and one is inclined to believe that the deliberations of this meeting will be far more important than those of some other gathering which have discussed ways and means of enforcement. Coming as it does but a few weeks before the date set for the meeting of the national conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties, when platform declarations must be made, the attitude of political leaders toward the issue involved, the pronouncement of the conference, to be organized under the name of the Women's Committee on Law Enforcement, cannot be carelessly regarded.

The bottom dropped out of the Burlington and Florence pike, near James P. Tanner's last week, and speed in traveling over that thoroughfare has been checked somewhat. There are also several bad places in the Burlington and Petersburg pikes.

"LEST WE FORGET"

As we turn from commemorating the natal day of one to whom we give credit for preserving the Union, we pause again to do honor to the first national hero—his whose convictions and determination won for the colonies the right to their independence and the chance to work out their own salvation.

True Americans should welcome the opportunity to do honor to George Washington's memory because to his leadership a cause that triumphed in the face of overwhelming odds, we owe everything.

Washington's halo is not that of a military warrior whose efforts were unavailing, who strove in vain, to right wrongs. To those who view world events in their proper historical perspective, without sentimentality and with love of justice and freedom in their hearts, the American Revolution fills the most encouraging page in the history of the centuries.

But for most of us, it is only in times of stress like those through which we passed during the World War and the reconstruction period, that we can realize our exceptional privileges as a nation and as individuals. It is only after we have seen the results of tyranny and the greed of might against right, that we have come to appreciate that which the Father of our country made possible for us.

Since the world catastrophe, the Declaration of Independence has a clearer significance; we know as we did in former years, but did not fully appreciate, that it means to be free and independent states, removed from the dominance of foreign powers. We have come to a new sense of appreciation of the constitution of the United States and a realization that the farmers of that sacred document built wisely when they sought to protect the rights of the minority against the passing whims of the majority.

And, so this year, Washington's birthday should be no routine holiday, but a day of solemn reflection over the debt that we can never repay for the heritage of a free people that we enjoy.

Let us pay unstinted tribute to him who made us a nation, that patriot who cut the bonds of foreign overlordship, the statesman who bade us, avoiding entangling alliances, to go our free way, an independent republic.

"With malice toward none," said Washington's greatest successor, "with charity for all!" It was a summing up of Washington's own political creed. No lost cause, however glorious with the blood of martyrs, more noble people today than the cause of American independence.

It is our duty to cherish and protect and give honor to whom honor is due.

COMPLETED VILLAGE

Stopping in a small town a traveling man said to a prospective customer:

"It has been twenty years since I was here last. Many buildings gone up since then."

"Any gas or electric company here?"

"No."

"Planning for any?"

"No."

"Well," said said the traveling man, "I've been all over this country, and this is the first town I have seen that is what you might call actually finished."—Youngstown Telegram.

The marriage of Miss Beulah Roberts, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Roberts, to Mr. Harold Brown, of Ft. Thomas, was quietly solemnized on Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, on Wallace Ave. The fair young girl never looked lovelier than in her wedding gown of blue crepe satin with garniture of gray and hat en-suite. The Rev. Sherwood Cutts, pastor of the Commonwealth Avenue Baptist church, officiated. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Brown, Misses Anne, Margaret and Velma Brown, of Ft. Thomas; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hand, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Earle Gray, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Cutts and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown.

A man spitting on the sidewalk is not spitting at a crack for pennies or pretending to see how close he can come to hitting a fly. It is a minor evil and should be abolished. If the women do wear short dresses it is no reason to flood the pavement with tobacco juice. You may shoot craps on the sly, peddle moonshine or run over a pedestrian with your automobile, but don't spit on the pavement, for it is a dirty practice.

R. O. Smith and brother, William, of Union precinct, were in the practicing business in Burlington, Monday. R. O. Smith made this office a pleasant call, and told us that he cut a honey locust tree on his place a few days ago, that was at least a hundred years old, and it measured 4 feet 4 inches at the base and was 78 feet high. The oak tree locust tree that that use to be so numerous in years ago by are about extinguished.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

A company of citizens met at the Boone County High School building, last Friday afternoon, and organized a Parent-Teachers Association. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. B. Renner, V-President, Mesdames B. C. Gaines and W. L. Cropper; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Estelle Huey. The object of this association is to bring the parents and schools closer together, and to promote co-operation between parents and teachers for the good of the children. The next meeting will be held at the Court House, Wednesday, March 12th, at 7:30 p. m., at which it is hoped to have a speaker present.

Movers have been on the go this week, Alvan Franks has moved to C. L. Gaines' farm near Limburg; Wm. Craddock has moved to N. W. Carpenter's farm and Hiram Stephens will occupy the house vacated by Craddock; Marshall Hall will move from the Asa Cason farm to Mrs. Lorena Cropper's farm at Bullittsville; W. S. Bush will move to Mr. Johnson's farm on the Petersburg pike and J. O. Boat will move to the house on Joe Walton's farm on the Bellevue pike. It is a big job to keep track of tenants at this time of year.

In a letter to Kirtley Rice from Charles Maxwell, who is now on the U. S. S. West Virginia, he says: "Edwin Duncan, (a B. H. S. boy) is the Ensign in charge of my division and that makes it more like home. He sure is a good officer to his men. He will do the last thing to keep his men out of trouble. A man can't do enough for a fellow like that." Charles Maxwell is a son of Mrs. Wm. Craddock, of this place, and has been in the Navy about two years. It is not often two young men from the same town meet under such conditions.

At a meeting of the Hog Wallow Debating Society, one evening last week, one of the members "radioed" the following: "They may talk about tobacco, gardens, farming all you please, they raise in winter at the store while sitting at your ease, but to have one of the hard freezes have plucked the clover and other crops up. In many fields the roots have been pulled out of the ground from two to three inches."

Reports from different sections of the county are very discouraging to growers of small grain. There has been practically no snow the past winter for a cover crop, and as a result the hard freezes have plucked the clover and other crops up. In many fields the roots have been pulled out of the ground from two to three inches.

There is no question but what we have experienced some real winter weather of which we have expressed a satisfaction of having enough. But winter began with the New Year and we have had only two months of it. Another month is yet due before we can hope to pluck many spring flowers in the woodland.

The horse which carries or hauls one to town should not be suffered to stand out in the cold all day unblanketed, unwatered and unfed. It is not a manifestation of the appreciative spirit for service rendered. Treat well the animal that does your bidding and apply unto it the Golden Rule.

Albert Underhill, of Erlanger, spent on Saturday evening until Monday with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Underhill, on the East Bend pike. He reports his father in bad shape, suffering from asthma.

If the first three days of March control the weather for the next three months, as some of the old timers claim, you had just as well get ready to go to work, because the weather for the first three days of March was all that could be desired.

Payments of advances on the 1923 crop to burley tobacco growers who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, total slightly more than $15,250,000, according to a report from H. Lee Earley, Secretary-Treasurer.

The contractors, Billiter & Oliver Bros., have completed their contract and have been paid $153,114.98 for reconstructing with concrete, the Lexington pike, from Florence to Richmond, a distance of 5.11 miles.

Sheep raisers report that they have been quite successful in saving young lambs. There is money in sheep when properly handled and the lambs watchfully cared for.

The beautiful spring like weather of the past week has put the hens to work, and as a consequence eggs have dropped to 24 cents per dozen.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and two children, of Cincinnati, spent Saturday night and Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hickman.

AS A MAN THINKETH

Eternal Truth is changing the universe. As mortals drop off their mortal swaddling-clothes? Self will, self love, self justification self satisfaction, self admiration, self indulgence, fear, doubt, anxiety, lust envy, jealousy, deceit, hypocrisy dishonesty, hatred, greed, ignorance. They seem a formidable array but may be classed under one head, namely, falsified belief in a power opposed to God.

Each day becomes more wonderful and beautiful to us as we utilize our opportunities to allow right thoughts to expand into expression in our lives. Each has a right to be beautiful and expressive of all that is good and true. The success of one's life in this direction is never a deterrent to the like proper development of any other life, since good is limitless. Growth, progress, the expansion of thought into expression, are laws of infinite life.

By putting them into practice daily and hourly we are given abundant occasion for overcoming the errors that would prevent the proper development of the activity that belongs to these right thoughts. As we relinquish the error, we have the joy of seeing the right thoughts unfold in expression.

"As a man thinketh so he is."

THE BROATER VIEW

People in former years used to work mostly for their own personal welfare, without caring much for community causes, and a spirit of jealousy and antagonism was the natural result. It held back business progress, since towns were so divided by personal differences that co-operation was difficult.

People who live lives full of selfish grasping don't get the higher satisfactions. They may get a certain amount of money, though probably not so much as if they were generous spirited. There is a law of life, that you must give if you want to get.

The time that people put in to work for community causes brings a reward of gratitude from people who have been benefited and helped by community work. It gives people greater power and makes them more practical as organizers and executives. It is a law that is specific for the benefit of the community brings rewards not dreamed of when it was given.

SCHOOL BANDS

The Buxton, North Dakota school has a band that has acquired a wide distribution. This band, as told in the St. Paul Farmer, has won the state high school music contest for several years, and it makes a tour of neighboring states each summer. It plays the best music, has had as many as 1,000 at its paid concerts and it has $16,000 invested in musical instruments and traveling equipment.

Some of the schools in Boone county would do well to see what they could do along this line. Such an organization helps young people acquire self confidence and ambition for self improvement. Conditions in country towns are favorable for such organizations, since the young people are not so much occupied by foolish distractions.

FARMERS HELP THEMSELVES.

It is found that more than two billion dollars' worth of business was done last year by organizations of American farmers.

It has long been said that the agriculturist is primarily a business man, but it is only of late that he has received recognition in this capacity by adopting the most up-to-date methods of business men in other lines.

Collectively he is the greatest of capitalists, also the greatest of producers. His weak point has been distribution. When he learns to distribute his products as manufacturers do, he will have his business on a rock. Through co-operation and the employment of skilled executives to handle his goods, he may do for himself more than the government can ever do for him.—St. Joseph Gazette.

MARRIED

Sherman Peeno, 20, of Constance, and Irene Arnold, 19, of Burlington, were granted a marriage license in Covington, last Saturday. Miss Arnold is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Arnold, who reside on the North Bend road about two miles north of Burlington. The young couple have the best wishes of all for a happy married life.

NOTICE

The Boone County Wool Growers Association and the Boone County Farm Bureau respectfully ask the Sheriff of this county to see that a license tag is purchased for each and every dog in Boone county, or else present the names of the delinquent owners of dogs to the next Grand Jury.

23,000,000 SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The United States National Educational Association will convene an annual meeting in Chicago, February 24 to 28.

This simple statement of fact will probably suffice for millions of people who are content to "let George do it," and then conveniently forget the important matter of educating their children.

The day has come, however, when statesmen are honored in giving years to the promotion of constructive school legislation and business men spend small fortunes in special research for a more efficient education. The average American might assume that he can "let the thing take care of itself," that after the usual perfunctory sessions mixed with a few social dinners, the members of the department will return more or less unchanged to their usual isolated routines. If so, the average American has been denied the news that the chief school officials of the country, the recognized leaders of educational thought, outline future programs of education of national and international import, obtain visions of progress and carry away enthusiasms for finer efforts—effecting 23,000,000 persons who are soon to shape the course of the Nation which is composed of these average Americans.

THE INFLUENCE OF EXAMPLE.

People who go through life clinging to the false idea that what they do matters not a bit to others, and that what others do matters not to them, are due for a very rude awakening sooner or later.

Life in the age is so complex, with all of its frills and furbelows, that practically every act of each individual reacts either for good or for evil in the life of some other persons.

The man who drinks intoxicating liquor, who obtains contrary to law, may think he is deceiving every one, but he deceives few, and at the same time his disregard for law sets an example that doubtless leads others to follow in his footsteps.

So-called respectable citizens may be the pattern for the lives of less influential citizens, who commit petty offenses because they see those who are supposed to have good judgment, having a part in small infractions of the law.

Regardless of your station in society, you may rest assured that any thing that is not right, which you may do, will have a detrimental effect somewhere along the line.

Boys and young men and girls and young women, who are harshly criticized for some actions that are regarded as improper, need not invent all of the misdeeds in which they indulge.

They first had the example set by those who were older and should have known better.

The next time something not entirely within the law or the bounds of propriety occurs to you, would it not be such as well to consider the effect it might have on others?

No one can afford to be selfish, especially when the lives of others are concerned. Live and let live. Yes, but live right and let others live right.

Robert P. Kelly, father-in-law of Congressman A. B. Rouse, died in Washington, D. C., Sunday. He was for many years Assistant Superintendent of Mails of Cincinnati.

With a few weeks of sunshine the roads will be in good shape and the road knocker will have to take a back seat.

Miss Elizabeth Rogers spent several days last week in Covington, guest of her sister, Mrs. C. C. Roberts.

Miss Eunice Willis, of Cincinnati, was the guest of her mother, Saturday and Sunday, Mrs. Eunice Willis.

Mrs. M. L. Riddell visited her daughter, Mrs. F. W. Dempsey, in Erlanger, last week.

March 7th, next Friday, is DeLaval Service Day at Geo. C. Gooden's, Covington, Ky.

Rev. and Mrs. Jno. Garber, of Union, spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Uta.

Mr. and Mrs. James Beeson, of Morrow, Ohio, are visiting relatives in the county.

CHICKS WELL BEGUN ARE HALF DONE.

Lexington, Ky.—Proper care of the baby chicks during the first week means giving the future layers the right start says J. R. Smyth, poultry specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Many losses in the ranks of the baby chicks are due to improper brooding and feeding, and white diarrhoea, one of the diseases which ravages the baby chick flock. It is usually brought on by chilling or over-eating or by feeding too soon or by overfeeding during the first week.

"One of the first essentials," says Mr. Smyth, "is a good brooder stove which should be started before the chicks are ready in order to secure sufficient heat and constant temperature. A thermometer should be used and placed near the edge of the canopy with the bulb about one or two inches from the floor, and the temperature should be kept between 95 and 100 at the start and decreased gradually as the chicks become older. The behaviour of the chicks, however, is a better guide to heat requirements than a thermometer. They should hover in a uniform circle just at the outer edge of the metal canopy; if they crowd under the canopy and chirp as if they were cold more heat is needed. If they crowd away from the stove the temperature is probably too high. During the day the chicks should be comfortable in all parts of the brooder house and at night remain in a small circle around the outer edge of the canopy.

"Proper feeding is essential," Mr. Smyth continues, "and the chicks should not be fed until at least 48 hours old, because just before hatching the chick takes the yolk of the egg into its body; this supplying food for the first two days. The first feed should consist of four skim milk or butter milk and chick grain. Any good commercial chick grain may be used or a grain mixture made of equal parts by weight of finely cracked corn, cracked wheat and steel-cut or rolled oats. Feed the grain mixture five times each day during the first week, but only t he amount that the chicks will clean up in fifteen minutes. Keep the milk before the chicks at all times.

"Naturally the chicks should be let out on the ground as soon as possible, but not until the weather is reasonably warm. Most poultry raisers leave the chicks inside too long. They need sunshine and the run on the ground. Experiments conducted at various experiment stations show that the direct rays of sunshine will aid materially in the growth of the chicks; baby chicks will grow more rapidly in the direct rays of the sunshine than when the rays come thru glass."

PORK PRODUCERS ENTER CONTEST.

Lexington, Ky.—Pork producers throughout Kentucky are being enrolled in the ton-litter contest which calls for the production of a ton of pork from one litter in 180 days. All pork producers may enter the contest whether they have one litter or several according to Grady Sellards specialist in swine of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, who has charge of the contest. The awards will be made on the basis of the greatest amount of pork produced at the lowest cost per pound in the time allowed.

The rules for the contest are as follows: The litter when 7 days old (and sow if unmarked) shall be marked with a notch on the outer or lower side of the tip of the left ear.

A memorandum shall be kept of the feed consumed and other expenses involved in carrying the sow from breeding to farrowing, from farrowing to weaning of litter, and in carrying the litter from birth until 180 days old.

Litter shall be weighed on the day they are 180 days old, if possible, but may be weighed 3 days before or 3 days after 180 days old and the 180 day weight adjusted on the basis of average gain. The county agent or representative of the College of Agriculture, shall be present when the initial and final weights of the pigs are taken.

The contest shall include only litters farrowed between Feb. 1 and May 15.

Dr. E. W. Dunan, of Walton, was in Burlington Monday.

RABBIT HASH.

Frank Hightower moved Monday. W. J. Hodges has a sick cow. Edgar Clure has the chicken-pox. Wilber Acra is sick with mumps. Mrs. Annie Ryle has moved back to her farm.

There is an epidemic of measles in this neighborhood. Mrs. Nellie Ryle was poorly several days last week.

Ivan Ryle has a radio installed in his home last week. W. D. Kelly and family of Burlington, visited at Colin Kelly's last Sunday.

Lorin Abdon entertained the young people with a dance Saturday night. Angero Hodges and wife entertained the young folks with a party Saturday night.

Mrs. Rastus Rice, of Rising Sun, spent a short time in Rabbit Hash Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Kenneth Ryle, of Burlington spent Sunday with his parents, Filmore Ryle and wife.

Russell Stephens of Rising Sun, was visiting relatives near here Saturday night and Sunday.

Thadde Ryle and family and H. M. Clure and family dined with Lavine Stephens and wife, Sunday.

Mrs. Bennie Clure and children Paul and Zelma spent Saturday with her parents L. L. Stephens and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig, of children Sydney, Josephine and Melvin, were the guests of her parents S. J. Stephens and wife, a few days last week.

Eugene K. son of William S. and Margaret C. Witham, was born near Hartford, Ind. March 15th 1922, died near Petersburg Ky., Feb. 23 1924.

He was twice married, his first wife was Anna Wright to whom he was married Dec. 23 1885. To this union were born seven children, of whom six survive, the wife and mother passed away Dec. 12 1915. He was again married to Mary A. Snyder Dec. 31, 1918. Eugene Witham was a man whom to know was to admire. His every quality as of the purest and the hearty grasp of his hand was an index to his honest and faithful heart. He lived a quiet life, seldom going away from home except on business. His neighbors always knew where to place him on all public questions, the right side.

He was a kind and loving husband and neighbor who was always ready to lend a helping hand where assistance was needed. He was a faithful member of Morning Star Lodge I. O. O. F. He joined the East Bend Methodist church Nov. 29th, 1879, and he loved his church and always managed to attend whenever possible. The deceased leaves two brothers, one sister six children and his wife who was a daughter of the late Orlando Snyder, besides a host of friends to mourn his death. Truly a good man has gone to his reward.

Card of Thanks—We wish to thank our many friends and neighbors for their many kindnesses shown to us in the death of our husband and father, Mr. E. K. Witham. Also Bro. Trainer and Bro. Tanner for their words of kindness and consolation. We also thank Mr. Stier for the efficient and thoughtful manner in which he conducted the funeral.

Mrs. E. K. Witham and Children.

SERIOUS CHARGE BY AN EMINENT JURIST

With more than 200 fortunes in the United States estimated at over $50,000,000 apiece—one of them amounting to $1,800,000,000—and with many annual incomes exceeding $5,000,000, there is little wonder that the modest worker, straining every effort to make both ends meet, feels somewhat abused at having to contribute his or her mite toward the country's income taxes. At that, however, if these vast fortunes were all being used profitably to the Nation's welfare, there would be little that could be said. Chief Justice Walter Clark of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, in commenting on this subject, is quoted as having recently declared: "These enormous fortunes control politics. They corrupt public life, destroy equality, and debauch morality and public opinion by systematic propaganda." If one-tenth of this is true, it is time that the American people set up and took definite notice.

The warm sunshine brought a fair size crowd to court Monday, and people stood around the streets like good old summer time had come.

Radio wires are getting so thick in Burlington that you can almost get the news from different sections of the country walking along the streets.

RED CROSS NEWS.

The Red Cross Courier is issuing during 1924, a series of special numbers showing the methods by which various chapters have achieved outstanding success. The first deals with Barre, Vermont, and its very extensive program is maintained chiefly by volunteer service.

Thirty chapters in the Washington Division are now doing Braille work. This enables the blind to read through the medium of their fingertips many books they would otherwise miss.

Dr. Paul Monroe, of Columbia University was so impressed with the educational value of Junior Red Cross international school correspondence, that he has asked for a permanent exhibit of this work to be used at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Modern Woodmen.

Albert Rouse was initiated into the mysteries of Woodcraft last week by Patriarch Camp.

The lecture delivered by one of the members last Tuesday night was very much enjoyed by the members of Patriarch Camp, and it is the intention to use this lecture in all the work in the future.

Arrangements are now being made for the anniversary celebration of Patriarch Camp at Burlington on the night of March 25th. Other Camps in the county are being invited and a large crowd is expected.

The Boone County Electric Service Company Bonds are now ready for delivery by the Peoples Deposit Bank, Trustee.

If you have not paid your subscription please do so as soon as possible as all material has to be paid for before it can be placed on the ground.

Poles are being set between Florence and Linaburg and the wire is on the way. We will have light in Burlington and Hebron before you know it. It takes money before we can have light, so see the Trustee and get your bond.

Mr. N. E. Riddell, Burlington, Ky.
Dear Sir:—I am one of those fellows that came here, as what the Floridian calls a snow bird, in 1908, just to make a visit and spend the winter. I am employed in a Veterinary Hospital. City meat inspection takes place here also making it busy and interesting. Continue the Record. It is the best magazine I read.

Hoping every one is well and happy.

Getting seed corn ready to plant is too important to be left until the last minute. After the seed ears are finally selected the irregular kernels on the butts and tips of the ears should be shelled off and discarded. Hand shelling is best. Sometimes an ear will look all right before shelling but will have a large number of kernels with damaged tips. Each ear therefore should be shelled separately and the kernels inspected before mixing with the general supply.

Farm Agent Matson and M. L. Riddell left Burlington last Friday evening to attend the Farmers Banquet at Lawrenceburg, and no doubt they would have enjoyed the banquet if the ferry had not ceased operation in the middle of the afternoon.

The work of erecting the poles for the electric lights between Florence and Burlington, is progressing nicely, and citizens of Burlington will soon do away with the old coal oil lamps.

F. H. Rouse and wife expect to leave the latter part of this week for Dallas, Texas, where they expect to spend the month of March with Mrs. Rouse's brother, Cleveland Hedger and wife.

Melvin Jones, of Hebron neighborhood having sold his farm to W. E. Jones, will have a sale of personal property on Tuesday, March 11th. Mr. Jones will move to Erlanger.

J. O. Bonta and family spent Sunday afternoon with relatives in Ludlow. Mrs. Kate McDonally, an aunt of Mrs. Bonta, returned home with them for a week's visit.

Miss Sarah Crisler, after a few days visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Crisler at the Forks of Gunpowder, returned to her work in the city, Sunday evening.

Quite a number of our good friends while at court Monday, called in and renewed their subscription for another year.

M. G. Martin and wife, of Florence, spent Sunday with W. R. Rorer and sisters, Misses Sallie and Elizabeth.

Ed. Hawes of Covington, spent last week in this community hanging paper for some of the citizens.

BETTER SEED CORN BRING HIGH YIELD

Lexington, Ky.—With an average yield for the state of 26.8 bushels a summary of the results and yields obtained from 37 corn variety demonstrations throughout the state just announced by Ralph Kenney, specialist in crops of the Kentucky College of Agriculture gives seed of standard varieties and seed selected carefully by corn growers the lead over all others with over twice the average. In the contest, the highest local variety averaged 57.2. Pride of Saline 54.7 bu., Boone Co. White, 54.8 and Reid's Yellow Dent 50.0. This is the only one of 3 years which Pride of Saline has not given the highest yield.

A further summary of the tests shows that Pride of Saline was first in 15 and second in 6 tests; Boone County White was first in 6 and second in 16 tests; Reid's Yellow Dent was first in 3 and second in 4 tests; while some local variety was first in 13 and second in 11 tests.

Other corn varieties entered in the demonstrations were Golden Rule, Neil's Paymaster, Red Cob Willis, Gate Post, Prolific, Calico, 90-day, Dark County Mammoth, Tennessee Red Cob, Fred's White Dent, Johnson County White, and local selections of Boone County White, Iowa Silverline and Reid's Yellow Dent.

Three corn growers topped the list with 112 bushels of corn an acre; Theodore Alford, California, Campbell county made the record with Pride of Saline Edward Boyers, California, Campbell county made the record with his own improved strain of Reid's Yellow Dent; and P. P. Paris, Marion, Crittenden county yielded 100 bushels an acre for Mr. Alford, and Henry Rahe, of Alexandria, Campbell county obtained 105 bushels an acre from Pride of Saline; while Edward Sullivan, of Trinity, Lewis county produced 102 bushels an acre from Sullivan's Yellow Dent.

MILLIONS OF AUTOS REGISTERED.

From state figures compiled by the American Automobile Association four states have passed the million mark in car registrations, namely: New York, with 1,214,090; Pennsylvania 1,084,695; Ohio 1,074,000; and California 1,086,940. Illinois comes very close to the mark with 969,234. Iowa with its claim of a car for every member of the population has 540,120. Texas claims 689,136, while five states are fairly well bunched, Massachusetts 483,150; New Jersey 423,000; Minnesota, 448,688; Wisconsin 452,717; and Missouri 475,028. Michigan registers 728,327, while Delaware has but 29,977, while Nevada hits the bottom with 15,700. In proportion and size Massachusetts leads the list in registrations.

The old saying, "water and oil will not mix," and from reading the daily papers, it would seem that potatoes and oil have mixed.

KENTUCKY DOINGS.

The 1924 session of the Kentucky Legislature will have passed into history before the month is out, and two interests which lie close to the heart and the welfare of thousands of Kentuckians—coal and racing—seem to have run the gamut that was prepared carefully for them by those who would like to see racing legislated out of existence and a heavy tax imposed on coal.

The crisis of the season for both has been reached in the last two weeks, and they have passed it successfully. There may be other shots at them, but their friends believe they are out of range of any ammunition that can be obtained at this legislative day.

Defeat of the Bennett anti-racing bill in the Senate by a vote of 24 to 14 marked the collapse of the main action against racing, and the failure in the House of the coal tax advocates to take the Vaughn mineral production tax bill, the coal tax measure, away from the Committee on Revenue and Taxation and give it a first reading marked the route of the coal tax forces.

The union of strength by the up-holders of the breeding interests of the Blue Grass and those who stand for the coal interests of the Eastern Kentucky section prevented the opponents of the administration from achieving any more success than they did on the two measures on which they concentrated.

The effort to bring out the Vaughn bill failed by a vote of 43 to 43. The representatives from the Blue Grass region voted with the Representatives from the coal section against the coal tax. The vote showed 18 Democrats and 25 Republicans thus aligned, while 39 Democrats and four Republicans voted for the bill.

While their efforts may be made to bring about a coal tax or to hit racing, the results of the two measures that have been considered are said to have been a test of the strength for and against them, and it is not likely that any change will be shown. Coal and racing have done their Eliza-crossing-the-icestunt and while they won't be on the other shore exactly until the time limit for action by the Assembly is up, they seem out of danger from the pursuers.

The $75,000,000 bond submission bill, which is the project for Kentucky on which Governor Fields has set his heart and which is his plan for Kentucky's development, still is in the Senate as a result of the failure to bring about an enactment of the measure this week.

Ever-ready readiness to bring the measure to a vote but all except two Republican Senators failed to vote with the Democrats to bring it up. Senators Hiram Brock and White Moss voted to bring the bond issue to a vote but it required seven of the 13.

As many of the Republicans are known to favor the bond issue submission it was believed that everything was in readiness for enactment during the week and that it failed indicates a "nigger in the woodpile" which in this case seems to be the "ripper" bills from Jefferson county. These bills are fostered by the Jefferson county Democrats.

Governor Fields and Judge Robert
W. Bingham, publisher of the Courier-Journal and Times, are engaged in an exchange of letters. So far the Governor has had the preponderance of ammunition on his side, as he has sent his broadsides from Frankfort Louisville that have brought only mild rejoinder.

The first letter from Governor Fields to Judge Bingham was set forth last week. The Governor took exception to an editorial in Judge Bingham's papers which, he contended, reflected on the integrity of the members of the State Highway Commission. The Governor demanded that Judge Bingham publish the record of himself and the Commissioners and give specific facts to justify his imputation of corruption against the members of the commission.

Judge Bingham in his letter in answer denied that the editorials quoted charged or imputed corruption to the members of the Highway Commission. He said that what he intended to imply was that the state could not hope for a wise expenditure of $50,000,000 on the state road system under the conditions existing in Frankfort. He asserted that the Legislature was organized by "an interlocking group of Politicians." He declared that "one of your allies in the Senate," referring to Senator Allie Young, "has launched and is pursuing an attack upon the State Board of Charities and Correction" and that "another of your responsibilities," referring to Dr. Milton Board, "has launched an attack upon the State Board of Health."

As to the appointments on the Highway Commission Judge Bingham said: "I have confidence in the personal character of Messrs. W. C.
Montgomery and W. C. Hanna, of the present Road Commission, and refrain from either praise or criticism of the other two members because of lack of information about either. However, no one has claimed that any one of your appointees has any practical knowledge of road construction or road materials."

The letter then referred to Governor Fields' message to the Legislature calling for the abolishment of the position of oil inspector, and made the charge that Gov. Field's supporters had obstructed the passage of the legislation thus advocated. In conclusion the letter said that Governor Fields had been made a victim of "false friends."

The answer Governor Fields sent was the most vigorous letter that has been addressed by a Governor of Kentucky to one he classes as an opponent of his administration. The Governor said in part:

"The untruthful assertion and the unfair conclusions relative to me and my administration, voiced in your letter to me of date February 22nd, calls for no answer, and if I alone, were involved, I would make no answer. But other questions are involved. You are attempting at the suggestion, or perhaps at the dictation of Mr. Percy Haly and other political guerrillas, to break down my administration and deny to the people of Kentucky good roads, good schools, a state university and adequate plants for the prisons and insane hospitals. For this reason I will reply to your letter and will speak plainly, as that is the only way I know how to do."

"I stated in my letter to you of February 20 that in an editorial you had made unfounded reflections upon the integrity of the men appointed by me as members of the State Highway Commission and invited you to publish the records of yourself and the gentlemen you attacked. You now write that you did not reflect upon the integrity of the Highway Commissioners. My only conclusion from this is that you do not, as I have often thought, understand what is printed in your paper. It is true that the reflections upon the Highway Commission were couched in the form of insinuations rather than specific charges. It was for that reason that I asked you to be specific."

"But there is no question among intelligent readers that a deliberate effort was made to imply dishonesty against the State Highway Commission. You simply put your opinion as an indictment of the character and the ability of Messrs. Montgomery, Hanna, Helburn and Owens. I feel, therefore, that I am justified in asking the state to judge how much your opinion is worth."

"I do not believe that there are in the ranks of Kentucky four men of better character than the men I have chosen to superintend the building of roads and the expenditure of the large sums which will be entrusted to their care, with or without a road
bond issue."

"Referring to me in your letter you say, 'You have been made a victim of false friends, who have sought to use your high office for their own purposes.' This charge is false, basely, coarsely false. Since I have been Governor I have talked with many men and earnestly sought support in many quarters for bills I considered of advantage to Kentucky. This is the thing that Theodore Roosevelt did and Woodrow Wilson did, and I have no apologies to make to the people of Kentucky for a single one of my official acts. I have no false friends about me. The men to whom I give my entire confidence are worthy of it and have never abused it. And I am able to decide for myself relative to public acts."

"I do not shrink from the contest you and Mr. Haly have forced upon me. For myself I care little. But I know the needs of Kentucky. I know how long our state has waited for real progress. I know the tremendous benefit to Kentucky that would come with the good roads you are seeking to keep blocked in mud, with the schools that you would keep closed, with a real State University and with safe insane hospitals. For these things I intend to fight and I ask the people of Kentucky to judge between me and my traducers."

Judge Bingham in a brief answer to the Governor's letter said:

"There were no untruthful assertions in my letter. If there had been you would have pointed them out.
Your statements that I am trying to block good roads, to injure the schools, the university, the insane hospitals are false. It is the interlocking bi-partisan machine which is seeking to destroy the penal and charitable institutions, the schools, the roads, the State Board of Health.
You and your supporters are keeping Kentucky in political mud."

WEDDINGS AND BIRTHDAYS CELEBRATED

On Monday eve, Feb. 25, at six o'clock Wayman, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Stephens, was united in marriage with Miss Leona Shumaker, youngest daughter of Mr. Henry Schumaker.

The impressive ring ceremony was said by the Rev. Dunkin, of the First Baptist church of Aurora. The bride looked charming in white crepe, the groom looked neat in a suit of blue. An elaborate dinner was served. The ceremony took place at the home of the groom, known as the Holmes homestead. This date marks the twenty-second birthday of the groom, the fiftieth birthday of his father, L. M. Stephens and the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. F. McCrory, who were guests at the wedding. Just fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. McCrory were united in marriage in the same room, standing in almost the same spot. About eight o'clock Mr. and Mrs. McCrory were called home where they found Rev. W. E. Fisher, of the M. E. church of Aurora, with a goodly number of his flock gathered to greet them.

A special musical program of music had been prepared. Delicious refreshments were served.

March came in like a lamb.

A WORLD LANGUAGE

A great world telephone system, making necessary to all nations the use of a common language, or a common understanding of language, will some day join all the people of the earth into a common brotherhood. Sunh is the logical conclusion of John J. Carthy, Vice President, American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The ultimate system of providing the communication of the world will consist of both wire and radio, each supplementing the other in proportion to its capabilities, for each has its limitations, he says. "This science and industry will ultimately annul war and bring about an era of peace and good will."

The recent action of the Federal Trade Commission in attacking on the ground of monopoly, the radio, telephone and electric manufacturing companies which are trying to develop world wide communication will not encourage expansion along these lines.

NOTICE

All persons indebted to the estate of Cynthia Mason will come forward and settle same. All persons having claims against said estate will present same proven as the law requires.

SERVING THE HOME FOLKS

FIRST

Some men who entertain political ambition are not willing to begin at the bottom rounds of political preferment. They would dislike to take a municipal office or serve in the lower branch of a state legislature. They would like to begin in higher up.

People who do begin such a career at the bottom have a great advantage, in the knowledge gained of political life, and in their familiarity with the needs of the people and the best ways to do public business. President Coolidge, for instance, was willing to begin as a councilman of his home city, and from there he worked his way up.

It takes something of a man's time and attention to serve in a city government position, but good citizens who are willing to accept such office perform a great service to their townsmen, and fit themselves to go higher if they have the ability and desire for public work.

The $75,000,000 bond bill has passed both the Senate and House of Representatives and will be submitted to the voters of the state for their approval or rejection at the regular election to be held in November 1924. In passing the act submitting this momentous question to the people who will receive the benefits that may be derived under the provisions of the bill and who also must bear their part of the burden imposed on them for the benefits they may receive, the members of that body have taken the proper step. The question of issuing bonds should be thoroughly studied and considered by all people before they cast their vote either for or against the proposition.

The bill provided that bonds to the amount of $75,000,000 be sold and that the funds arising from the sale of the bonds be used for the following purposes:

Public Roads	$50,000,000
State Debt	$6,000,000
Charitable Institutions	$5,000,000
State University	$15,000,000
State Board of Education	$5,000,000
Normal Schools	$2,000,000
Colored Normal Schools	$1,000,000
Geological Survey	$400,000
School for Blind	$150,000
School for Deaf	$100,000
Board of Health	$350,000

These bonds are to be paid from the money received from the license tags on automobiles and chauffeurs, a three cent tax on each gallon of gasoline and the present road tax. The bonds are to be issued as needed and paid in installments. The present revenue with anticipated increase will pay the interest on the bonds and retire the bonds in thirty-two years.

A BETTER TAX SYSTEM DEMANDED.

Up to the last decade, taxes were regarded by most people merely as a necessary evil. The public view was expressed by the proverb that "nothing is certain except death and the tax collector."

Many were the rebellions in olden days against excessive taxes, and the devices of rulers to increase their revenues and keep peace led to the policy of concealing the actual amount paid by any one person. Thus arose indirect taxation, described by a French king's treasurer as "The art of getting the most feathers from the geese with the least squawking." This policy has certain advantages which have commended it to politicians of the present day.

But people are beginning to understand that the manner in which taxes are levied is more important than the amount.

They see that the attempt to tax every form of property in the same way results in discrimination, injustice, evasions and hardships.

They realize that the burdens of government fall too heavily on some people while others escape.

The countries where people are poorest and where industries languish are all suffering from oppressive taxation, but not as much from the total amount levied as from the foolish methods used.

If production and trade are hampered by foolish taxation, it is obvious that improvements in taxation will have the opposite effect, and increase the general prosperity.

The indirect taxes shifted on the workers thru increased prices may be borne, even though unequal and unjust, while wages are good and employment steady.

But with reduced earnings, the shifted taxes become a serious item, and curtail purchasing power.

This in turn holds back industry, since the workers are the great consumers.

When public revenues decrease because of slackening in business there is a hunt for new kinds of taxes rather than for economy. And in keeping with the old maxim, there is usually an effort to put the new taxes on some one who can shift them.

Just at this time the question of taxes is receiving more attention from the general public than ever before, and it is very probable that the day is not far distant when some entirely different system will be adopted.

The New York Tax Reform Association, organized twenty-five years ago, composed of some of the largest manufacturers and financiers in the country, contend that there should be only direct taxes; mortgages and capital in trade should be exempt; corporations should pay taxes only on a fair value of their franchises; real estate should bear the main burden because they bear least heavily on the farmer and the worker.

GROWERS OF 1922 CROP TO GET CASH RECEIVED TO DATE

CHECKS TO BE IN HANDS OF GROWERS BY MAY 20—STEPS TO END SPECULATION IN CERTIFICATES AND FOR BANK TO LEND TO MEMBERS.

Lexington, Ky., March 6.—Decision to distribute to growers of the 1922 crop of tobacco all the money realized, up to date from the sale of the old re-dried tobacco grown that year was announced today by the board of directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, instead of waiting until the remainder of the 1922 crop is sold before making a distribution. The amount of this distribution the third to be made on the 1922 crop was not obtainable but it was said that checks would be in the mail to each grower interested by May 20.

The board of directors, in regular monthly session here, also authorized President and General Manager James C. Stone to take steps toward the establishment of an agricultural bank in the Burley district for the purpose of loaning money to the members of the association on their participation receipts, free of some of the restrictions under which state and national banks operate. The proposed bank, it was stated, will not invade the field of the local banks in any way, nor will it accept deposits, being purely a loaning enterprise in the interest of the Burley farmers.

By unanimous vote of the board notice was served that Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Barley has been directed "not to keep or undertake to keep any record of such sales of participation certificates" as may be made by speculators, brokers or others, in view of reports reaching the directors of the association that systematic speculators in these certificates "do to the great injury and harm of all its members." The "Yankee" in various parts of the Burley district. Under the terms of this resolution, the association will not accept or record transfers of certificates under such circumstances.

WHAT IS A "YANKEE"?

A "Yankee" is a New Englander and a descendant of several generations of New England descent. New Englanders, not some special strain of blood is the criterion. Many "Yankee" families bear German names. Many of the original New Englanders were British, and many more were Irish—not all Presbyterians, either. The Huguenot French were a very big element. The "Yankee" owes some of his traits to his surroundings. He lives in a land of long winters, and the habit of saving the abundance of summer to support life in the cold season has made him frugal, perhaps parsimonious. Economy was a necessity with him. Learning to use the most of what he had, adversity overcame him, sharpened his wit, made him ingenious, full of "Yankee tricks." He has become opulent through sheer force of unremitting industry, intellectual and physical effort. No sudden endowments of nature helped him, no mines or precious metals, scarcely even of the baser metals, no oil wells or no soil stuffed with the riches of the decayed verdure of ages, as in the prairie states. What he won he fought for against hard odds, and as has always been the case throughout history, when a race conquers resisting nature instead of supinely receiving largess, reached a high mental development.

THE BAD BOY PROBLEM

There are not many bad boys in country towns. The interests of rural communities usually provide outlet for active fellows who in a city would get into trouble. Still once in a while you find a kid who is not satisfied to settle down in the ordinary rut.

Usually all such a boy needs is to get him interested in some good form of activity. Perhaps competing in an agricultural club would do it. Possibly winning a place on the home town ball team would take his attention. Perhaps what he needs is a lot of tools to get his mind away from harmful thoughts. Such boys are not usually cured by lectures or reproaches. What is needed is some activity that will keep him occupied.

A Jersey cattle club of 27 members has been organized by county agent W. D. Sutton, Hopkins county, and the Public Health League Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis Club, and Farm Bureau cooperating. Twenty-three members have planned to purchase Jerseys, two loads of cattle are being shipped into the county and in cooperation with the Illinois Central Railroad air R. of M. sire are to be placed in as many communities of the county.

A small town can generally size up a man a lot quicker than a big city.

RADIO AND SCOFFERS.

To be able to sit at home on the dreary winter days and hear a sermon from across the continent, a musical entertainment a couple of thousand miles away or an important address by the president of the United States, is a pleasure that cannot be measured in terms of ordinary enjoyment.

Radio is truly the marvel of the age and its uses are broadening so that it has come to be an accepted means of communication.

There was a time when the scoffers laughed at the Wright Brothers for trying to fly without wings; when they ridiculed the idea of a buggy running down the street without a horse hitched in front of it; when they scorned the suggestion that anyone should communicate with another many miles away without the use of wires.

The scoffers are still having their inning. They haven't been convinced yet that radio is here to stay, but knowing their propensities to see only the dark side of every effort at progress, those of us who believe that modern inventions are the best we have conceived, will not be dismayed by their predictions of failure.

Radio is a wonderful invention and it will be improved immeasurably. There is no doubt about that. It will be perfected just as automobiles and airplanes have been made more practical year by year.

THE COUNTRY TOWN BALL TEAM.

One of the best features that you can develop in a country town is a good ball team, which may either be a school team, or one drawn generally from the town's young men. Many country towns have very successful teams, and they are a big factor in making a country town seem attractive.

The old timers looked at sports to some extent as a waste of time. But that point of view should have gone by now. A good ball team in a town inspires a lot of energetic young fellows with a spirit of ambition. Were otherwise they might be getting discontented with their home surroundings and complaining about the dullness of their life, the idea of getting on the school or town gives them an object to work for. After they get on the team they have an incentive to practice.

When the games are held, the townspeople have interesting events in their own community and do not have to go roaming in other neighborhoods to find things going on. A good home ball team helps "keep money at home, and when people go to other towns to see games they are pretty sure to spend considerable money there. Otherwise would be kept at home. And if you can develop a good ball team in your own home town, it must help to develop considerable trade from people who come in to see the games. It will pay the business men of a town to back up a home ball team.

A good team can be developed anywhere if the players will take time to practice. Perhaps no form of organization that could be devised will do more to promote home town contentment and make young men satisfied with their home surroundings. Let's do everything we can to build up and support a strong team here in Burlington for the summer season.

THE COUNTRY SCHOOL.

An expensive school building is not the most vital thing in school work. The main thing is to have a cheerful building. The building may be old, but it is absolutely necessary to keep it well-painted, to have it neat and well cared for within and without.

A few shrubs and flowers and trees around a school building, making it seem pretty and homey, would do more to make school life seem attractive than a structure of costly construction that had not been built. A building and furnishings that look dilapidated give a decimal impression that must hurt the morale of a school. Children brought up in such a school are more likely to be careless in work and personal appearance. But a neat and well kept building teaches a silent lesson in thoroughness every hour of the school session.

The Kentucky Home Society for Colored Children, located at Louisville, Kentucky 825 S. Sixth Street, is an institution receiving homeless, neglected, dependent Negro children from the counties of the State, committed by the County Judge, through the juvenile courts and other welfare organizations.

The management of the Institution is launching a State wide campaign to make the housing facilities more adequate to receive a larger number of children whose applications are pending for admittance. The generosity of the public in this financial appeal will be greatly appreciated.

FIRE DESTROYS DWELLING

The dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Underhill, about three miles south of town was totally destroyed by fire Saturday. The fire originated from a defective flue and was discovered about 10.30 a. m. A number of the neighbors responded to the alarm but by the time they arrived the fire had gained such headway but little could be saved. Mr. Underhill, who was a soldier in the Civil war, had kept his uniform and army gun which he treasured very highly in the dwelling, and they were destroyed. Mr. Underhill was slightly burned on the face when he came to the second floor to investigate regarding the origin of the fire when flames met him on the stairway and burned his face and whiskers. Mr. and Mrs. Underhill have passed the three score and ten mark, and it was a great shock to them to lose their home at this time in life. No insurance was carried on either the dwelling or furniture. Mr. and Mrs. Underhill are staying with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hughes where they were brought shortly after the fire. Mrs. Hughes is the grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Underhill.

PEACE IN COAL INDUSTRY.

If the three-year soft coal miners wage scale contract, approved at Jacksonville, Florida, for the central competitive field, really becomes binding, it ought to bring peace in the coal industry as well as peace of mind to the consumer.

During the war and ever since that hectic period, we have been in suspense from year to year, never knowing when the coal miners would throw up the sponge and leave us flat.

The old plan in the central competitive field was a one-year contract. The new scheme is to make the contract binding for three years. It ought to give some stability to the coal industry and also have the effect of settling prices.

Other coal-mining states will undoubtedly follow the lead of the central states miners and operators in signing three-year contracts.

EFFICIENCY IN INDUSTRY.

The winter automobile shows are proving the truth of the assertion that automobile manufacturers today are giving the greatest dollar-for-dollar value of all the leading industries.

With prices in general 72 per cent higher than they were 10 years ago, motor car prices are at least 20 per cent lower than they were 10 years ago. And the cars, as everyone knows are better. The buyer of any make of car nowadays expects more miles per gallon, longer life, more comfort and convenience in driving, and less trouble in caring for his car than he did before the war.

It is a remarkable thing that this record for growing cheapness and economy, combined with higher quality, should have been attained in a time of greatly increased costs for materials and labor and high taxes. It is a triumph for the scientific efficiency which masters the art of quantity production and makes cheapness possible.

The automobile industry has accomplished its remarkable results, placed itself at the head of American industry in progress and prosperity, by a rare combination of brains and enterprise which ought to be an inspiration for industry.

Editor Recorder, Burlington, Ky.

I am a Boone county Kentuckian. Left the old county and the state in October 1855, then in my 19th year, and since that time have spent my days in other lands.

On mother's side of the house my grandfather James Mathews, the neighbors called him "Uncle Jimmy." Grandmother Mathews was Col. Abner Gaines' sister. Col. Abner Gaines' wife was grandfather Mathews' sister.

If the records in my possession are correct, John P. Gaines, perhaps a son of Col. Abner, was at one time Governor of Oregon Territory. My records further indicate that the Mathews and Gaines families came from Virginia to Kentucky about the year 1800.

If anyone who may read this letter should have a different and more complete record of these two families I would be glad to see it. I am now in my 88th year, and am mourning the death of Mrs. Masters, my life companion, who passed away January 7th, two months ago. My thoughts still go back to "My Old Kentucky Home."

We now snow today in Illinois.

MRS. H. D. BRADY.

Mrs. Hubert Brady died at her home near Bellevue Saturday evening, March 8th. She had been suffering with pneumonia for about eight days. The funeral was held in Bellevue Baptist church last Monday. She is survived by her husband and three sons. Another good, christian woman has been called home, she was held in the highest esteem by all and it was her delight to make home a place of joy and happiness for her family, whom she so dearly loved. C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Root Rot Resistant Burley Proves Best.

Lexington, Ky.—In over 500 demonstration plots on which records were obtained last year by Ralph Kenney, extension specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture with the help of many county agents with the Kentucky Experiment Station Root Rot Resistant Burley tobacco proved its value as a good strain of tobacco for the Kentucky Burley district. A total of 2985 packets of seed was sent out last year among 72 counties of the state and 553 reports on trial plots grown alongside the local strains were received.

A tabulation of the statistics shows that in 275 cases or nearly 50 per cent, the root-rot resistant strain was superior in rapidity and uniformity of growth to the local strain; in 225 cases of 40 per cent it was equal to the local seed; and in only 53 cases out of the 553 or less than 10 per cent of the trials did it prove inferior to the ordinary tobacco. So satisfactory was this resistant tobacco that 10,000 acres were grown in the state last year although the first seed was distributed in 1921, and the acreage this year will be much larger due to the fact that many growers saved seed last year for this year's planting, and several seedmen have saved considerable quantities for sale.

Reports from county agents show a general advantage for this seed. Chas. E. Miller, county agent of Boyle county, writes "the resistant seed has proven very satisfactory, some outstanding results were found on land which had been in tobacco recently and also on land which had had clover intervening between tobacco crops. In nearly all demonstrations the growers expressed themselves as pleased with both the yield and quality and in many cases have saved seed for the coming year. The root-rot resistant strain of tobacco will be of value on lands infested with black-root and should be of value on other lands free from disease in preventing the introduction of the disease."

DON'T PLAY POLITICS

The two most urgent public questions at present time are tax reduction and dealing with corruption which has been unearthed in official circles in Washington.

President Coolidge feels with all his fellow countrymen a depressing sense of humiliation at the gross betrayal of public interest that has been disclosed.

The taxation question as well as lax or criminal action of officials performing public duty is a problem for both Republicans and Democrats. The people of the whole U. S. have an interest from the standpoint of lessening tax bills and securing honest administration of public affairs regardless of what party is in power.

The pity is that self-seeking politicians will attempt to use present situation to further political ends rather than to advance the best interest of our government.

We must register our approval of honest public officials and demand tax reduction if we expect to eliminate dishonesty in public office, or increasing tax bills.

MARCH.

The month of March varies so widely in different localities that it is impossible to get any general agreement on its characteristics. It is not on the whole a popular month. It has been commonly considered a disagreeable interlude between winter and summer, a time of fierce and blustering winds, when comfort loving people should stay in doors.

Byrant said: "Ah, passing few are they who speak, wild stormy month, in praise of thee." But Helen Hunt Jackson had a truer note, when she wrote: "Ah, March, we know thou art kindhearted, spite of ugly looks and threats."

Some people in colder localities who want merely calm and placid weather, may feel it necessary to avoid its searching winds. But no matter how chill its blasts, the cheer of coming spring is in the bright rays of its warm sun, which day by day comes nearer and nearer, bringing birdsongs and the life that will soon burst forth in summer's full bloom.

Randal may be all right in its place, but it has no place in a respectable community.

FRIENDSHIP

There are men who go thru life with the idea that they need no friends—that they are better off without anyone in whom to confide. They are so engrossed with their business that they take no time to cultivate acquaintances. They do not seek friendships. They walk down the street staring straight ahead or with their eyes on the ground, paying no attention to anyone whom they may pass.

They succeed in their business not because of their personality, but in spite of it. They do not attract customers, but rather repel them. Their success is due to their close application to their business and their knack of buying what people want.

But there comes a day in the lives of such men when they realize their folly, when they awaken to the fact that one of the joys of life is the friendships that may be formed and strengthened as time goes on.

When it dawns on this type of men that they have made a mistake, they turn to those who should have been their friends, for friendships, and find that it is too late.

After they have passed the meridian and begin to slip backwards, when they should have rich treasures stored up, they discover there is no place for them in friendship's circle.

The mistake of this kind of a life is so apparent that there is no excuse for it. The man who thinks he does not want friends is all out of tune and he deserves what he gets when he arrives at the point where his mistaken viewpoint in life is realized.

Making friends is easy with some men; with others it is difficult, but he who wants friends needs only to be friendly.

Friendly men, like friendly communities, attract friendly men. No place is going to advance very far unless its people have a sympathetic understanding of each other's problems, co-operation and mutual helpfulness is impossible.

SAVE THE ROADS

The time of the year is here when stone and gravel roads are undergoing the hardest strain and enforcement of the law regarding the use of the roads when the ground is thawing is essential.

But law enforcement will not solve the problem by any means. There must be a desire on the part of users of the roads to do the right thing regardless of the inconvenience that they may be caused. Some owners of heavy motor trucks communicate with road officials before driving on the roads, when they feel that heavy travel may damage them.

If this spirit were shown by all who use the roads for hauling heavy loads, there would be no problem and taxpayers would be saved thousands of dollars which are spent annually to repair highways that are cut up in the late winter and early spring.

SUNBURNS IN WINTER

No more trips to Palm Beach for a sunburn in the winter time! No more colds to worry the human family!

Sounds good, almost as good as the prediction that the span of life in time will be increased to 165 years.

A physician is reported in a newspaper article to have exposed himself to the rays of a mercury vapor lamp when he felt a cold coming on. Presto change, and the cold disappeared.

A mercury vapor lamp, he says, concentrates all of the beneficial rays of the sunlight and some others besides.

Contemplate the possibilities of this thing, the "local color" of a winter resort during the cold months and a summer resort in the warm months, all for the price of a mercury vapor lamp.

For the weaker sex, of course, it might put on a permanent rouge just as the permanent wave is manufacturer in every well regulated shop.

First, of course, it is necessary to get your mercury vapor lamp. Until they become as common as automobiles, the common people very likely will not feel free to invest.

But let them once be offered on the installment plan, and no home will be complete without one.

The latest models of mercury vapor lamps will sell like wildfire.

TUESDAY - THE WILD PARTY

DAIRY

Some Requirements for Right Start of Calves

The dairy calf six to eight months old should be provided with salt. It is best to keep a small box in the calf pen or stall with salt in it at all times. The calf will then take just what is needed.

More than 56 per cent of the calf's body is made up of water; and for digesting the feed, regulating the body temperature, and other body purposes, the calf needs 4 to 6 gallons of clean, fresh water every day. So the club boy should see that his calf has all the water it wants and that it is watered during warm days three times.

Sunshine is necessary for normal growth of the calf, but like most good things the calf can get too much; therefore, see that your pasture has plenty of shade to which the calf can go to lie down and chew its cud during the heat of the day.

When the dairy calf is weaned from skim milk, it should be eating grains and hay well. A good legume hay, like alfalfa, peavine, soy bean, or lespedeza, should be fed. This day is necessary to furnish minerals to build bone, to supply protein for muscle building, and to furnish bulk for developing large feed capacity.

During the "fly season" a liberal use of the curry comb and brush will help keep the hair silky and the skin oily, both of which will tend to keep off flies.

Teach the calf to lead by the halter this summer. The best way to do this is to lead the calf to pasture each morning and back to the barn at night.

Tuberculosis Introduced Into Healthy Dairy Herd

Tuberculosis may be introduced into a healthy herd by any of the following means:

By the addition of an animal that is affected with the disease; therefore animals should be purchased only from herds known to be free from tuberculosis, or from herds under supervision for the eradication of the disease.

By feeding calves with milk or other dairy products from tuberculous cows; this frequently occurs where the owner purchases mixed skim milk from the creamery, and feeds it to his calves without first making it safe by boiling or pasteurization.

By showing cattle at fairs and exhibitions; reports have indicated that numerous herds have become infected through mingling with infected cattle at shows or by occupying infected premises.

The shipment of animals in cars which have recently carried diseased cattle and which have not been disinfected properly.

Community pastures; pastures in which tuberculous cattle are allowed to graze are a source of danger.

In most cases the outward appearance of the animal bears no relation to the degree of infection. The disease frequently develops so slowly that in some cases it may be months or even longer before any symptoms are shown; therefore be on the safe side and have your herd tested.

Cows Require Material for Production of Milk

To keep the summer milk checks up to normal, the cows require a little special attention at this time of the year. In spite of good pastures, grass is apt to be tough and not nearly so appetizing as it was in May or June. Hence the cows are going to stand around in the shade instead of putting away material for milk production.

This all means that the cows need a little grain at milking time during the late summer months and a little silage, too, if you have it. Green oats and peas or green corn are very good, as well as many other forage crops, cut green and fed during milking time. Here's a good grain mixture to be used while the cows are on pasture:

200 lbs. cornmeal
150 lbs. cottonseed meal
150 lbs. ground oats
150 lbs. gluten feed

Feed the grain mixture according to the way the cow responds. If a cow will not respond to grain feeding in the summer, she isn't worth keeping.

At the New Jersey agricultural experiment station the cows are being sprayed with and worming with a reliable spray that kills the flies. As a result, the cows stand better for milking and since they are not bothered with the flies they have time to eat their grain. Furthermore, when the milker is swatting flies and the cow is switching her tail around in his face he isn't apt to take much interest in how much milk the cow gives.

A good fly spray is a good investment by all who keep cows.

Unprofitable Cows Kept Simply for Amusement

Not over a third of the so-called dairy cows of the United States are profitable to their owners. Ten million "loser" cows are milked whose yield is worth less than their feed. Their owners seem to keep them for the sole purpose of milking them four times a week, cleaning out after them, and otherwise enjoying their society.

The maximum use of roads can only come when they are made safe for maximum use. A dangerous road will always be less used than a safe one, and a road dangerously used by some will be less used by others than a road wisely used by all.

At the present time two States give licenses to drivers without any examination of any kind. Ask for it, pay a fee, and get it. Drive anyway—safely, dangerously, drunkenly; these States apparently do not care! Ten States have no age limit on drivers; you can give a child of a car and let him drive to town, without violating the law.

Naturally, these States do not have roads as safe as other States which insist on ability to drive before granting a license and recognize the fact that a ton and a half of steel at speed is no missile to put in the hands or the judgment of a small child.

One of the great benefits which will result from the establishment of national highways throughout the Nation will be uniform laws for their use. Such laws will not in any way conflict with State laws, for the States through which the highways pass will have equal voice in the making of national highway laws. It is evident that when a road is national property the Nation is responsible for who shall and who shall not drive upon it and the speeds at which driving shall be done. More and more coming to be believed that great trunk line highways must be more than single roads; that they must have a central spine for fast going and other spurs for slow going. The way to make speed safe is not to hold it down but to make a place for it. But the immediate question is not so much safety from speeding as safety from the incompetence of driving as well as incompetence of road building, which permits the dangerous curve, the unfenced bend near a bluff, the too narrow road, the absence of illumination, etc.

These, and the problems of no laws or poor laws, may be solved in time, under any system, but will be solved speedily and solved well by the establishment of a system of national highways, great trunk lines built and forever maintained by the National Government, which will also supervise their use and police their length.

EMERGENCY CROPS FOR HAY AND PASTURE

Hay and pasture crops to meet the emergency caused by the killing off of fall-sown grain, clover and alfalfa by the severe winter heaving are recommended by L. J. Kinney, crops specialist of the Crops and Soils Department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The most important consideration in planning crops for the land is to use those which can be readily established as little as possible with care of other crops.

"If it is necessary to make provision for next year's pasture," Mr. Kinney says, "one of the most practical things will be to sow clover and grass alone on part of the grain land. Without the competition of the grain crop, the clover and grass will make a rapid growth, and will furnish a great deal of pasture during the summer. The seed should be sown when the soil is in condition to work, using a clover seed drill or covering with a harrow after sowing. The legs of the surface is disturbed, the less trouble will be given to weeds."

"Another portion of the land can be sown to spring oats such as an early variety as Burt of Fulghum for grain, and a larger variety like Silver Mine if grown for hay. If clover and grass are to be sown also from five to six pecks of oats will be sufficient, for it is almost hopeless to get a stand of grass or clover in heavy seed of oats. If the oats are cut for hay, chances of clover surviving are improved. A more satisfactory method from some standpoints is to sow the oats alone at the usual rate and sow the clover and grass in August."

"Probably a good part of the land where clover has been killed should be utilized for growing hay. Where the land is fairly fertile soy beans are undoubtedly the best annual hay crop we have; for thin land, cow peas are the best. Soybeans ought always to be inoculated when grown on land for the first time, and good hay varieties such as Lexington, Virginia Haberlandt, Midwest and so on should be used. The latter is late and usually ready to cut for hay as early as October. By planting at different dates, the harvest of soybean hay can be prolonged over quite a period thus making the crop easier to handle. Cowpeas can be cut at almost any stage of their growth, but are easiest handled if cut when part of the pod has ripened."

MR. FORD'S SUCCESS AS RAILROAD OPERATOR

The annual report of the Detroit Toledo & Ironton Railroad, owned by Mr. Ford, shows a net earning for 1923 of $1,784,924. Financial experts and directors of other railroads are inclined to greet this report as nothing unusual—nothing but what other roads have accomplished—but don't. In 1920 Mr. Ford paid some $6,000,000 for 97 per cent of the stock of this railroad. Two years later it pays him better than 38 per cent on his investment—notwithstanding the high wages paid to employees. Railroad "experts" may decline and explain their heads off but the average layman will not be convinced that this remarkable showing is not entirely due to Mr. Ford's measures of business efficiency.

The people of the United States are deeply interested in problems affecting transportation. At no time in the history of the country has the solution of these problems been a matter of greater popular concern than at the present moment. It is not a sufficient answer to state that Mr. Ford has done no more in finding this solution than others. The figures indicate that he has done much more.

THE COST OF WHEAT AND BREAD.

For several years there has been the conviction that between the granary of the wheat grower in the middle west and the table of the consumer of bread there has been too great a spread of profit to the manufacturers of flour and the bakers and distributors of bread. Retail prices are practically the same as the high point caused by demands for feeding men in all armies.

It is alleged that we are paying more than $1,000,000 a day too much for bread, and the farmer is not getting it. The price of wheat is so low that those who grow it are subject to government aid. It is shown that whereas the price of wheat has declined to 93 cents a bushel last September, a decrease of 55 per cent since 1917, bread prices have declined but 5.4 per cent. In other words, the price of wheat has been reduced ten times as much as the price of bread. Despite the frequent flaunting of the slogan "Eat More Wheat," it appears that the per capita consumption of bread in the U. S. has decreased forty-four loaves a year from the average in pre-war period.

An illuminating exhibit in the report of the People's Legislative Service is that which states that $1 invested in the common stock of one of the larger baking companies in the year 1916 now represents a value of $909. This simple compilation, if verified, would seem to tell the whole story in few words.

FEED EWES TO PRODUCE MILK.

Lexington, Ky.—Inquiries and letters being received at the Kentucky Experiment Station indicate that sheep men from all parts of Kentucky are experiencing difficulty with their lambs this season, because the ewes do not produce enough milk. One flock owner over in Fayette county states that in his section as many as forty per cent of the lambs are being lost while other parts of the state report similar losses.

"The chief difficulties this year," says L. J. Horlacher, Asso. professor of Animal Husbandry Kentucky Experiment Station, are the lack of green feed and the high cost of feed which must be purchased. Those men who sowed barley last fall find that it could not stand the hard freezes which we have had this winter. Those who depend upon rye pasture did not get a good growth of rye because the dry weather at sowing time gave it a late start. The result was that during the period of pregnancy a great many ewes did not have enough food nutrients to develop the unborn lamb and at the same time build up a reserve to be used for the production of milk after the lamb was born.

The only way to help this situation now is to feed the ewes. This feeding should begin at least two weeks before lambing time. During that time each ewe should be fed 1-4 lb. oats, 1-4 lb. bran each day, in addition to 1 to 2 lbs. of clover, alfalfa or soybean hay. Eliminate the grain one day before lambing and do not feed any more grain until the lamb is two days old, but give a liberal allowance of hay. During the next four or five days feed 1-4 to 1-2 lb. of bran. When the lamb is a week old change the ration of the ewe to equal parts by weight of bran, oats and barley. This should be fed at the rate of 3 1/2 lbs. a day, in addition to 2 to 3 lbs. of legume hay. When the lamb is three weeks old increase this to 1 lb. If silage is available it makes an excellent substitute for bran. Two and one-half pounds of silage is sufficient for such ewes. The important thing to remember is that the ewe is doing three things at once: Producing milk, growing wool, and maintaining her body, and that she must have feed in it to do all of these things.

ALL INTERESTS UNITE TO STANDARDIZE LAMB

Lexington, Ky.—In connection with the preliminary campaign to eliminate the bucky lamb from Kentucky markets and to improve the quality of lamb in general, ten sectional lamb improvement conferences have been held at centers of sheep production with a total attendance of 1400 lamb producers and six other representatives are scheduled, according to R. C. Miller, sheep specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The most important meeting of those still to be held is the big conference of Kentucky shippers, breeders, commission men and packers at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville, Saturday, March 6th.

Stockyard men at Louisville and Cincinnati, local dealers, the U. S. Government Livestock Supervisor, editors of agricultural journals and local newspaper men have cooperated to make the present spring lamb standardization campaign one of the most successful ever carried on in the state. While this is the fourth year of the campaign Mr. Miller declares it is the first time that all interests have stood so firmly behind the campaign to improve the quality of the product and keep the Kentucky spring lamb in the forefront on the eastern markets where the Kentucky ewe and wether lamb is already known as a luxury. Over fifty per cent of the growers present at the conference thus far, have signed the roll to trim their lambs and to use nothing but purebred sires in their flocks hereafter.

The conference to be held at Louisville this week is planned to enlist all shippers who ship to the Bourbon stockyards in the standardization drive and thereby cut down the large number who go to market from central and western Kentucky. At this meeting also steps will be taken to plan for an increase in the number of sheep in certain western Kentucky counties where there are few flocks at present. While this meeting is primarily for shippers, commission men, butchers and packers are also cordially invited.

Packer representatives from Chicago and the East, speakers from the College of Agriculture representatives of the stock yards at Louisville, the Livestock Improvement Association, the Kentucky Bankers Association, the Agricultural representatives will be on the program. The meeting will be held in the Stockyard Exchange Building; the program will begin at 9:30 and continue to 3:00 p.m.

THE FARM HOME

In selling his products, the farmer should consider appearances like anybody else. Many farmers in the past thought it made no difference what kind of a looking place they had. It never occurred to them that it would be beneficial to plant trees and shrubbery about their home or to keep the buildings well painted and disorder removed.

Yet as a result of the disorderly condition that for their products might pass along the road, and that might get the idea that such a slovenly looking place indicated that the man's business was not being well run.

Today a vast improvement has been made in the majority of farm homes, though some do not yet realize all the advantages they might gain by giving a better impression.

If a visitor was looking to see where he could buy farm products to best advantage, he would be likely to choose the neighborhood where the farm property was well kept up, rather than one that looked run down.

It may be said that the bulk of farm products are bought by professional buyers who are "hard boiled" fellows, who are not affected by appearances, and who judge a product for just what it is worth without regard to external surroundings.

Yet that principle does not work in selling other kinds of goods. The man who tries to run a store in disorderly looking quarters usually finds that it will pay him to spruce up. So it is likely to prove true that the farmer who makes his place look well commanded that he could afford to be more independent and stick out for what his stuff was worth. Putting your best foot forward pays in most walks of life.

POULTRY MEMBERS WILL MEET HERE

There will be a meeting of the Boone County Poultry Association on Wednesday March 19th, to be held at the Court House Burlington, at 1 o'clock.

Mr. J. R. Smyth Poultry Specialist from the College of Agriculture, Lexington will be with us at that time. Mr. Smyth is very enthusiastic about poultry work in this county and will have many interesting things to tell the members of the Association.

All members are urged to attend as many business matters of considerable importance will be taken up that time.

According to R. J. Matson, County Agent, the Association has already sold more than 11,000 eggs for hatching purposes. Considering the market price of eggs at this time and the price the Association is receiving for eggs from pure bred flocks there will undoubtedly be many interested flocks started this year and many to join the Association next winter.

MANY SPECIALISTS SCHEDULED HERE

County Agent R. J. Matson, has been successful in scheduling many state specialists from the College of Agriculture for the spring and summer season.

Last week W. W. Magill, Field Agent in Pomology, spent two days in this county attending orchard meeting with the County Agent in different communities of the county. Sixty-eight men attended these meetings and all profited from the meetings and talking with a man who has been in all sections of the state. Mr. Magill spends his entire time in fruit work and running up against all kinds of problems, he is well prepared to be of help to any fruit grower. He is scheduled to make four more visits to this county during the year. On one visit an orchard tour is being planned when orchard men will visit different orchards where he and the County Agent have started projects. At that time the tourists will be able to see just what the recommendations of the specialists amounted to.

On Wednesday of this week E. E. Fish Field Man in Club Work, will be here to help out with Boys and Girls Club Work. Mr. Matson has already organized twelve Junior Agricultural Clubs and is planning several more. Club work is part of the boy or girls education, which they receive right at home and every father and every mother should see that their boy or girl, if between the ages of 10 and 18 becomes enrolled in one of these clubs.

On March 17th J. S. Gardner, Field Agent in Horticulture will spend the day here visiting the truck growers of the Petersburg district. A meeting is being arranged for that afternoon, to be held some where in the community. All that are interested in that meeting can learn where it will be held by calling Mr. John Klopp.

On March 18th Richard C. Miller, Field Agent in Sheep Husbandry, will spend the day here putting on demonstrations of how to dock and castrate lambs. In the morning meetings will be held at Rod P. Hughes' Verona at 9:30 and at Mr. Townsends, Union 11:30. One other meeting will be scheduled for the afternoon in the Burlington precinct.

On March 19th and 20th, Mr. J. R. Smyth Field Agent in Poultry work will be here to check up on certified flocks, go over some select pens discuss pedigree work and to promote poultry work in general. The dates of the visits of other specialists will be announced later.

A. B. Renaker, Newton Sullivan, Jr., and R. E. Berkshire who attended the initiation ceremonies of the K. of P. lodge at Petersburg last Friday night report having a good time. MAKING PUBLIC OFFICE ATTRACTIVE

A public office is attractive to some men who are not qualified to take its responsibilities. It is merely necessary to repit to the draft or any form of pressure to fill a public position. Somebody is always willing to take it. But if people were asked to name the one man who would be best qualified in a community or a state to take a certain position, the chances are that he would say he was too busy and could not afford to leave his private affairs.

It is a big question as to how public office can be made so attractive to our very ablest citizens that they shall be willing to take their share in carrying on the work of the federal, state, and local governments. Some say that the trouble is that the pay of most of these positions is too small.

Yet even if these salaries were doubled, it is doubtful if they would then be sufficient so that the financial reward would attract men of the highest grade of ability. But if the pay was largely increased, the scramble among unqualified candidates would become still fiercer than it is now.

Men of first ability do not always realize all that they gain when they accept a public office and put their brains and energy into the public service. There is a form of advertising in this service, which in many callings has very large value. A man who has made good in a public job becomes better known in a year than he would in five years of ordinary business life.

After a man has been successful in business, it is a fine thing if he can give his mind to some of the ends of life better and higher than money making. If he can take a public office and serve the community well, he has created a record for himself that ought to be worth more than a very large heap of dollars. His whole life should be broadened by the experience.

PAINT TO CHEER UP KITCHEN WORKSHOP.

Lexington, Ky.—The old gloomy kitchen can be turned into a light, cheery and sunny one with a little paint applied at this time of year according to Miss Mary May Miller, food specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The color of the paint or stain used on the walls, floors, and furniture will either make the kitchen close and dingy or light and cheery, the specialist says. "Light colors," Miss Miller explains "make the kitchen a cheerful room in which to work, and reflect the light in such a way that there are no dark corners. A pleasing effect can be secured by painting the woodwork and furniture two shades darker than the walls. If the ceiling is finished in cream or white, the walls a pale tone of the chosen color, and the floor some what darker than the walls, a good relation between the surface will result. Pale greens, blues and grays are suitable for sunny kitchens because they are the cool colors, while the warm colors such as creams, buffs and tans can be used in kitchens that lack sunlight. Once it is thought best to use dark colors so that the dirt would not show so easily, but light colors require no more work, the dirt is taken off in smaller amounts and often instead of being allowed to accumulate.

Especially good color combinations are: Ceiling, cream, walls pale apple green, woodwork and furniture in light gray, floor painted in dark gray or covered with green and light linoleum, ceiling in white, walls cream, woodwork and furniture buff floor covered with brown and buff linoleum or painted a soft gray or a good shade of brown; ceiling cream or buff woodwork and furniture a light gray, floor dark gray linoleum or a brown and buff linoleum.

Do not criticize unjustly. Those who criticize unjustly can always be distinguished from others because they never offer any remedy by which the conditions of which they complain may be cured. Criticism is a good thing if used in the right way, but the right way is for the complaining one to offer a method of improvement.

MILK AS A FOOD

The following is taken from a radio talk made by the late Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, New York, State Department of Health.

"While milk long has been recognized as one of the most important foods, it is only recently that we have found out just how important it is. Not only does it contain all the elements for body growth and repair in a readily digestible form, but apparently it is only from milk that the necessary amount of lime for the proper growth and development of the teeth can be obtained without overeating.

It has been clearly shown by test on growing children that without plenty of milk and leafy vegetables in the diet, the jawbones to which the teeth are attached fail to develop properly, thus causing soft, porous teeth which decay easily and which often are irregular, imperfect or protruding. Dentists have even said that if people would use as much milk as they should, dental work would be reduced 50 per cent.

"But what is the proper amount of milk for children and for adults. Children should have not less than a quart of milk per day. This includes of course milk that is consumed in cooked form such as custards, milk puddings, etc., and the milk taken with cereals and on other foods. For adults the amount per day in one pint or its equivalent. A noted economist has even said that no family of five can afford to purchase any other food until they have provided themselves with 3 quarts of milk a day.

"One apology has to be made for milk. It is low in iron. The prolonged, exclusive use of milk after early infancy tends to produce an anemia or lack of iron in the blood. Again, fruits, vegetables, especially green vegetables, and coarse cereals, will make good this deficit. With all the evidence in, then, it is impossible to escape the conviction that milk is not only a cheap food, but it is a food whose value can hardly be measured in terms of dollars and cents."

Norris and Walton Berkshire, who are in North Carolina mountains, report a blizzard in that locality, leaving over a foot of snow on the ground. Something very unusual for that State.

Louisville, Ky., March 3.—Kentucky's milkly way has been scoured, scrubbed and sterilized.

Or rather in the words of the scientifically inclined, a thorough survey of the State's milk supply has been completed, this work being pushed on a nation-wide scale by the American Child Health Association, of which Herbert Hoover is president.

During last month, the traveling laboratory of the Child Health Association was lent to the State Board of Health for the survey making it possible to speed up the work of making Kentucky's milk supply clean and safe. The work was done under the direction of Miss Sarah Vance, director of the Bureau of Foods, Drugs and Hotels for the State Board of Health.

Along the larger cities where surveys were made were: Henderson, Monganfield, Madisonville, Burlington, Nortonville, Providence, Princeton, Marton Mayfield Murray Hickman, Fulton and Clinton and splendid cooperation and interest was shown by the dairymen and the consumers.

The Extension Division of the University of Kentucky, through the county agents, the Live Stock Sanitary Board, the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry, the local Health Officers all lent their aid to make the work a success in every county.

The conditions found give great room for improvement according to Miss Vance but showed the farmers ready to make every effort to put out a clean and safe milk and eager for the information and assistance to improve their farms and methods. The director of the nation-wide survey visited the work in Mayfield and left Kentucky enthusiastic in regard to the work being done.

MILK DRINKERS INCREASING.

Hogkinsville, Ky.—As a result of the milk campaign in Christian county, milk drinkers among the school children have doubled and fifteen times as many pupils are bringing milk to school with their lunches than was the case before the campaign began, according to Miss Fannie Cooke, home demonstration agent. Reports from 56 schools throughout the county show that 1619 pupils have been enrolled, 418 posters made and used, and general enthusiasm regarding milk drinking has resulted. Before the milk study began only 23 pupils brought milk with the school lunch, at the conclusion 316 were bringing milk; and although only 441 pupils have been drinking milk regularly before the campaign as a result of the educational program 949 were regular milk drinkers. In some of the schools where the weights were taken every week the gain by the milk drinkers in one week varied from one fourth to one and one fourth pounds. At one school where pupils were underweight when weighed by the county nurse in October, the weight in January showed that only 15 out of 49 were underweight and only 2 as against 14 in October were more than 10 per cent under weight.

T. J. Dian and wife of Bullittsville neighborhood, give the young folks a dance last Friday night.

When John Loudon Macadam, in 1810, began to experiment with broken stone for building roads, he met with much opposition from the "stand-pat" road builders, who contended that the expense would be prohibitive and that anyway, broken stone in courses of assorted sizes was no better than broken stone of one size in one course.

Time proved the merit of Macadam's idea, although the century and nine years which have elapsed since his first practical experiment was tried at Bristol, England, in 1816, have greatly altered the practice of macadamized road building.

Up to the advent of the automobile, Macadam's principles were employed in their entirety, the broken stones being bonded with rock dust and water, the former replaced by the impact of iron shod wheels and hoofs, the latter by the rain.

When the automobile, with its rapid movement and broad rubber tires, sucked the rock dust from between the stones in spite of the gentle bonding effort of the water, it was realized that something was lacking in the roads used for fast, steel-shod traffic, which lack was not felt under slow and steel-shod traffic. That "something" was a better bond than water. It was found in oils and tars and bituminous compounds. Luckily for the millions of dollars invested in macadamized roads, an oil, tar, or bituminous binder could, and was applied with success to existing roads thus saving to the taxpayer miles of highways which were otherwise doomed.

Today, all macadamized roads are built with the bituminous oil or tar binder applied during the building, but the basic principles of larger foundation and smaller upper course topped by a wearing surface of fine crushed rock and dust, bonded in place by something is still employed. Macadam's greatest monument is the dropping of the capital letter in his name and making it the label for all roads built of crushed rock laid in courses of different sizes.

BEING INDEPENDENT

No man can go through life living entirely independent of others with whom he is thrown in daily contact. No woman can live sufficiently alone in our present civilization to be wholly independent of her neighbors and friends.

Yet we find men and women who take these attitudes that whatever they do concerns no one else and who believe that they should be permitted to follow solely the dictates of their own judgment.

When a reformer or radical agitator starts out to rule the world, he finds certain established rules and practices developed because of the inborn traits of human nature, and he does not do just as he pleases.

Individuals find themselves in the same plight when they attempt to go their own way without regard for the rights or wishes of others.

Adopting a policy of respecting the opinion of others, and at the same time being firm in your own convictions, need not crush initiative or kill imagination.

Some of the most courteous people are at the same time the most pronounced in their own views, yet they do not attempt to enforce them on others, neither do they try to travel their willful way through life, crushing and stamping all who disagree with them.

Human rights are human rights, the world around, whether it be in the seats of the mighty or the humblest homes of the smallest community.

And where human rights are respected and where people are friendly and considerate of others—that's where we like to live.

That's the kind of a place that attracts desirable people and that's the kind of a place we all want to make our home communities.

VALUE OF T POLAR TRIP

Some people have been asking what value there would be in the trip over the North polar regions which had been planned for the ship Shenandoah under the auspices of the United States Navy, and which was estimated to cost $350,000 or more.

A suggestion of its possible value is given by the fact that Norway has taken more than 300,000 tons of coal from the Arctic island of Spitzbergen during one recent year. Probably other Arctic islands have valuable resources. Our country will want to get its share of them. The possible value of territory already discovered and claimed would seem to justify the cost, the only question being as to how much risk the men in charge of the craft would take.

The Kentucky Experiment Station Root-Rot Resistant tobacco is so popular in Marion county that agent R. E. Gloppe estimates that the acreage of 600 last year will be increased to over 1500 this year. Many growers saved last year, have supplied their neighbors, and the demonstration this year will be so distributed that no one can enter the county seat unless he sees the tobacco demonstration placards.

Louisville, Ky., March 8.—Governor William J. Fields has won the great battle of his first legislative campaign. Victory perched on the gubernatorial banners when the Howard bill for a $750,000 bond issue for vital needs of the commonwealth was passed by the Senate by a vote of 22 to 16. It marked triumph for the Governor in the first stage of the plan he presented to the General Assembly to bring about the advancement of Kentucky.

The $750,000 bond bill provides for the state the finest opportunity it has ever had to go ahead, according to its advocates. Funds derived from the bonds, if approved is voted in November, will provide $50,000,000 for a primary system of roads for Kentucky. These highways would remove the stigma of "debtors state," which has been fastened to Kentucky by motorists from better paved regions who have passed around the Commonwealth rather than be mired in its mud.

From end to end of Kentucky will be found highways that will bring the people of the state closer together, afford quicker access to markets, enhance the opportunities for social life, for attending schools, for finding wholesome amusements and in every way adding to the prosperity and the happiness of Kentuckians.

The remaining $25,000,000 will pay off the floating debt of the state, which is in the neighborhood of $8,000,000. This has been hanging on for years. Administration after administration has tackled the problem of its elimination, promises to pay it have marked every campaign, but it has flourished like the green bay tree. The bond issue will lay the financial ax to the root of it and after that it will be only a question of the state living strictly within its income.

The bonds also will provide enough millions for the state's university to make it the institution Kentucky should have, one capable of receiving thousands of students and giving them a course equal to any in the country. It also will provide the money necessary to bring the common schools of the state to the highest standard, will take care of the normal schools and will make liberal provision for the advancement of negro education.

On the side of mercy the bonds will give the prisons and the asylums the most modern plants to replace the ramshackle, insufficient buildings that now are in use, which in many respects are reminiscent of the dark ages and which afford risks of disasters that would make the state bow its head in shame.

These are the things for which Governor Fields asks the state to approve the expenditure of $750,000 without delay. It is the substance of the proposal to the vote of the people that he has just wrung from the Legislature. The fight has been a bitter one even though the Governor's margin of victory in House and Senate was gratifying. Opponents of the Administration program have been tireless in their efforts to prevent submission. Certain of them are sincere advocates of the "pay-as-you-go" plan. They have contended that the $50,000,000 or roads could be provided from current revenues in time enough to complete the system. For the rest of the program they have not offered a substitute.

The Administration's opponents have gone to extremes in their attacks. The State Highway Commission named by the Governor will have charge of the expenditure of the Road Fund. It was a call to defeat the bond submission bill in the Bingham papers of Louisville, containing what Governor Fields considered reflections on the honesty of his Highway Commission, that caused Governor Fields to write to Judge Robert Worth Bingham, the most scorching letters that have expressed the indignation of a Governor of Kentucky.

Supporters of the Governor and the advocates of bond submission have charged that many who opposed submission did so merely because they hoped to make the Fields' Administration a failure. "Bumwhackers" is the term that has been applied to them.

The advocates of bond submission have made the argument that the improvements provided by the bond issue are necessary, that the bonds afford the only way to obtain them and that the people are entitled to a vote on the plan. The $750,000,000 compared to Kentucky's three billion resources they say, is like a man worth $3,000 borrowing $75.

The vote will be taken at the November election. It will be the biggest financial proposition the people of Kentucky have ever been called upon to decide. An earnest campaign will be waged on behalf of the bonds and it is certain that a determined opposition will try to defeat them.

POULTRY

Fowls Will Respond to Proper Care in Summer

"It may be stated without fear of contradiction," says A. C. Smith, chief of the division of poultry husbandry at University Farm, "that under average conditions farm flocks yield no more than 25 per cent during the summer months, while, if well managed, the yield will practically be doubled at small additional expense."

The reasons given by Professor Smith for the failure of farm flocks to maintain April production are than at the season advances the supply of insects and young, tender greens become insufficient to supply more than the needs of the body; that external parasites become abundant during the hot weather; that coops are poorly ventilated, and that broody hens are mismanaged.

To maintain production, he says, flocks must be plentifully fed with a balanced ration of grains and animal food and with an unlimited supply of greens, grit and oyster shells. War must be incessantly waged against mites and lice. Houses must be kept cool and comfortable by regulating the ventilation to suit the day and the weather. Broody hens must be broken up at once by removing them from the nest and putting them where there are no nests and no places to set. With good treatment and ample feeding the hens will soon return to work. All sick hens must be removed while those that are healthy and in good flesh but do not lay should be culled out at least once a month and sent to market.

Some of the university flocks are now giving 50 and 60 per cent production as a result of proper care and management, according to Professor Smith.

Popular Geese and Ducks for Market or Feathers

Farmers are realizing more and more that nothing but purebred geese should be considered. For heavy geese, either for market or feathers, there is little to choose between the Toulouse, Emmentaler or African. For quick growing, heavy laying, small geese, either the White or Brown China is good. For market, Pekin ducks are grown; for laying, Runner ducks are one of the best, and for home table ducks there is only one superlative duck, the Muscovy. Why this duck is not more generally kept by farmers is a mystery. Certainly, were it more generally known what good eating they are, how easily they propagate themselves, a great many more would be grown. Although the size of a large duck, they are not really ducks but geese. They will not, though, interbreed with other ducks or geese.

They are silent or quackless. They do best if allowed to make their own yards and hatch and rear their own young and are remarkably successful at this. Muscovy ducks come in two colors (black and white) and white. Their principal faults are that they are inclined to be pugnacious with other poultry and on being moved may not be good breeders the first year or two, or may not breed at all. They are very hardy and long-lived.

Most Effective Plan of Keeping Flock Healthy

Systematic whitewashing of the inside of a poultry house winter and summer is one of the most effective means of keeping the flock healthy. Whitewashing makes the quarters lighter and purifies, transforming dark, dingy, smelly houses into light, clean rooms. To clean and disinfect effectively, pour half a pint of formaldehyde into each gallon of whitewash. This purifies the air.

POULTRY NOTES

Breeding ducks lay more fertile eggs if allowed bathing water in a pond or small stream. The breeders should be given plenty of pasturage.

When a hen leaves her nest, or when the temperature of the incubator gets too high or too low weak chicks will result. A chick that needs to be helped out of the shell isn't worth saving.

A healthy turkey loves to roam and should be induced to do so by not being fed too liberally in the morning. When about time for them to come home to roost, have feed, water and grit near their roosting places.

If the chicks are puny, look up the cause at once. Something is most surely wrong with their care or ancestry.

A record of 29 flocks of scrub hens showed that during 120 winter days they averaged laying one egg apiece each week. This is an awful record.

Turkeys are seldom sick and should not be continually dosed with nostrums or medicines. If one is sick investigate and treat according to symptoms.

If one is fortunate enough to have a few mushrooms and sweetbreads, by combining the two a most tasty dish will result. Sauté the sweetbreads in a little butter until well cooked—five minutes will suffice. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour, and pour on gradually one cupful of chicken stock. Clean, parboil and cut into dice the sweetbreads and mushrooms and season well; add one-fourth cupful of whipped cream and one-half teaspoonful of beef extract. Add a dash of lemon juice and serve in tangle cases or covered with buttered crumbs in ramekins. If the latter, brown in the oven and serve hot from the dishes.

Date Fluff-Duff.—Stew a cupful of stoned dates until tender. Put through a colander and mix with a cupful of sugar that has been sifted with a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Beat the whites of five eggs until stiff, adding a pinch of salt, and when perfectly stiff add the yolks of two eggs and whip again. Mix lightly a little at a time with the dates and sugar and place in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle the top with finely chopped nuts and bake fifteen minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Salad Rolls.—Scald one and one-half cups milk, add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one-half-teaspoonful of salt; when lukewarm add one-half cup cake; when this is dissolved add four cupfuls of flour. Mix thoroughly and add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Cover and let rise, turn into buttered gem pans made in small biscuit, three in each; have the pans half full. Let rise and bake in a hot oven. These are called cloverleaf rolls.

A recent London dispatch says the doctors of England are astonished to note how much more strength and intelligence the babies born at present have than those born before the war. It is claimed that the modern child just born is as far advanced as the pre-war baby aged from three to six months. This is attributed to physical training enjoyed in war time by the young men who were in the army. About 4,000,000 of America's young men got the benefit of similar training, and it should enable them to transmit more vigorous traits to their descendants.

If your young men can produce a stronger grade by physical training in war time, why don't they get the same benefit by other forms of exercise, in peace time as well as in war period? Also why should not young women fit themselves to bear harder children through greater attention to physical exercise?

Also why should not young women fit themselves to bear harder children through greater attention to physical exercise?

ROAD DEVELOPMENT.

One of the factors retarding road development is lack of appreciation of the modern science of highway building and using.

We know too many things about roads which are not so!

Many of our highway ideas are twenty years behind the times. We haven't caught up with the engineer. For instance "all roads wear out. The enormous money invested in them is thus a capital loss."

Roads do not wear out. The surface of a good road wears of course. So does the roof of a house. But replacing the house roof doesn't mean that the rest of the house isn't good. The surface of a road is its roof. If it wears out it must be replaced. But that doesn't mean that the right of way, the grade, the foundation and all the material is any less valuable than at first.

Trucks destroy roads. Therefore trucks should pay for roads. That, to, is a fallacy. A truck no more destroys a road when truck and road fit, than a baby carriage destroys a garden path. It is lack of maintenance which destroys roads, it is allowing too light a road to be built for the traffic, it will wear, which destroys roads; it is failure to enact wide tire maximum load laws which destroys roads.

There isn't money enough to pay for national highways. We will all be bankrupt! More fallacy. There are fourteen million motor cars in the United States. If they are worth, on an average of $500 each (which is an underestimate), they represent an investment of $7,000,000,000. Did we get bankrupt buying them? We did not! Why should we get bankrupt buying seven billion dollars' worth of roads... and the interest on seven billions will build today more national highways than we have as yet engineers and machinery to build.

Transportation has been, for Americans, nothing but rail and water for all our history. Now we are compelled to translate the word into "highways" and "motors." Motors we understand... highways, at yet, we only partially comprehend, and "motor transport," as a whole, is yet a sealed book to most of us.

The vast state in opening it is to get rid of fallacious thinking... to realize that what used to be, is no more true today, than what is proper road width and cost today, will fit conditions fifty, a hundred years hence!

DOG TRAVELS 3,000 MILES

Fiction is outdone by fact in the devotion of a collie dog that was lost somewhere in Iowa, followed his master's auto to Wolcott, Indiana, and not finding the owner, returned from Indiana to his home at Silverton, Oregon. The faithful collie literally traversed three states searching for his owner, and arriving at Indiana too late to overtake him, took the long hike back across seven states to the Pacific Coast. He arrived in Silverton, Oregon, Feb. 15th, having traveled nearly 3,000 miles, flanks worn thin, toes-nailed worn to the quick and feet bruised from his long race to reach home.

The owner G. F. Brazier, a restaurant man motored to Iowa to visit relatives, carrying the collie puppy along in his motor car.

The dog was lost in Iowa and the owner advertised extensively but could not recover him. When he entered the restaurant in his home town he gave a joyous yelp and made a leap for his astonished owner.

How he negotiated nearly three thousand miles over highways and bridges across rivers, streets and viaducts in cities is a mystery. The collie will be presented with a silver medal by the Oregon Humane Society.

BREAKING TURKEYS' WINGS

A Chicago woman writes the Oregon Humane Society that each one of the last three turkeys she has bought has a wing that had been broken during its life time in about the same place. The turkey she bought last Christmas came from Texas and the broken wing had not healed; the bones piercing the flesh.

Both Texas and Oregon are great turkey-raising states, and she asks if it has not become a practice to break one wing, making them easier to catch for.

If such cruelty can be established humane people should be warned against buying turkeys from states that tolerate this form of cruelty to dumb creatures.

Mrs. Janie Cree Boss Coming

The spring conference and Campaign Rally of the W. M. U. of North Bend Association will be held in the Ludlow Baptist church Friday March 21st, at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Janie Cree Boss, State Corresponding Secretary will make an address and reports from the Laymen's meeting will be given. Come in large numbers and let us make this meeting a rally, indeed.

MRS. E. B. SAYERS, Rpt.

TEACHING KINDNESS TO CHILDREN

The enactment of a state law in Oregon requiring that kindness to animals be taught in all the public schools from 15 minutes to one hour each week is attracting nationwide attention.

F. Rivera Barnwell, Field Worker of the American Education Society, enclosed a statement from S. M. N. Marrs, State Superintendent of Education, Austin, Texas, to the school children of Texas as follows: "I take pleasure in directing your attention to the fact that education in its broadest sense includes the training of the individuals in order that good character may be the main result. We cannot have good character unless we observe the 'Golden Rule' and the observance of the 'Golden Rule' should be made prominent in its application to include animals as well as people.

"To this end I wish to endorse teaching of humane treatment of animals as a means of installing into minds of children proper regard for feeling of others. If we can have the conviction that the word 'Other' includes all animal life we will have taken a long step toward world peace, for the individual who has this feeling and will apply the 'Golden Rule' will not be found advocating harsh treatment of individuals. It is the function of schools to make this contribution to education and the organization of local societies which have for their purpose the protection of animals and children will contribute very largely to the uplift of social conditions."

TO RAISE $769.

The Florence and Burlington Circuit of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Rev. Paul C. Gillespie, pastor, has accepted $769 as a minimum quota to raise within five years for the cause of Superannuated Endowment of that denomination. The goal for the entire circuit of this movement is $10,000,000, of which income from which is to be used for support of the aged and infirm ministers and widows and orphans of ministers.

The campaign for the fund is being directed by the Board of Finance of the Southern Methodist Church, St. Louis, Mo., Bishop W. F. McMurtry, chairman, and Dr. Luther E. Todd, secretary. The latter has issued and sent to all pastors a booklet, "The Call of the Forgotten Man," which tells the pathetic story of the great need, asks the church to remember him with substantial giving and outlines plans for raising the sum sought.

According to reports received by the board, over 2,000 pastoral charges have up to this time accepted minimum quotas asked of them and many have voluntarily increased the amounts. Several large individual gifts have already been announced and others are expected. There are here 900 of the old preachers, many of them pioneer circuit riders who rode through storm and sunshine, winter and summer, day and night, to serve humanity and the church, 1,300 widows and 600 orphans, many of whom are living in little better than poverty. They never forgot duty and the church for a single moment, and there is now evidence on all sides that the church is at last thoroughly awake to its belated duty to its forgotten servants.

CARELESSNESS

The Dead Letter office in Washington stands as a testimonial of common human failing—carelessness.

If everyone were careful in a dressing mail, there would be little need for this branch of the postoffice department.

More than two hundred million pieces of mail matter pass annually through the postoffice improperly or carelessly addressed, and seventeen million of these ultimately go to the Dead Letter office.

If there is such a loss in the postoffice department through carelessness, it is difficult to imagine what vast sums can be charged up against this besetting sin of practically every individual.

Material loss through carelessness might be estimated, but what of the irreparable loss which affects the destiny of lives and souls.

The careless deed or word that costs a life or causes human wreckage on the sea of life would probably have been left undone or unsaid, if they had been given more thought.

Addressing mail carelessly or illegibly is bad enough, but infinitely worse is the careless act or words that lead to tragic results.

The past winter has been a very severe one for aged people from the fact that the weather has been very changeable. Sometimes a change from 30 to 40 degrees in 24 hours. As a result we have chronicled the death of many of our old-time citizens. In the passing of these time-honored landmarks, it makes us sit up and take notice of the fact that ere long we will be referred to as the oldest man in town.

YOUNG AUTO THIEVES.

While conducting a funeral in Florence last Thursday afternoon Rev. Paul Gillespie, Methodist minister of that place, left his Ford roadster alongside the Dixie Highway, from where it was stolen by two boys. The theft was immediately discovered and the culprits run down by Town Marshall Willis Grant, assisted by Charles Craven, who brought them before County Judge N. E. Riddell. The boys claimed residence in Cincinnati and gave their names as Arthur Stahl, age 15, and Carl Kuhlman, age 14. They had started to school on bicycles, but being killed by their own admission, to the habit of playing "hooky," they decided to take a trip. Accordingly they crossed the Ohio river and traveled out the Madison pike and came on to the Dixie Highway at Devon. One of the bicycles having broken down when they arrived at Florence they took the Ford as an easier mode of travel, they said. Their parents were immediately notified of the occurrence and the boys placed in the county jail to await their arrival. Their parents came out on Friday and took them back to Cincinnati.

WHAT DO WE MEAN?

Most people speak almost reverently of "Our Country." We all sing "My Country 'Tis of Thee," with great enthusiasm. What do we mean by such expressions of our supposed patriotism.

Are we thinking of the service which our country, of the love we have for it, or are we thinking only of the protection which our country can afford us, only of the personal benefits we may derive from it? Are we thinking of what we may do for our country, or of what our country may do for us.

Our duty to ourselves as well as our country demands positive as well as negative action. We must be constructive, as well as passive supporters of everything good in our home community, if we would fulfill the obligations incumbent upon us as citizens of this great republic.

We do exercise our right to vote, and when we do vote, do we always place intelligence, efficiency and patriotism in government ahead of every other consideration? In other words, do we feel an individual responsibility for our government—our government!

We can't delegate our responsibility in government to someone else any more than we can delegate our responsibility in any matter. There is no substitute for individual interest in government and individual responsibility for government.

The greatest duty of the banker is not to loan money but to loan himself to the service of the community and help build up an integral part of the country in which we all take pride.

The greatest duty of the business man is not to sell goods, but to sell himself to the community and discharge his obligation as a resident of it.

The greatest duty of the professional man is not to charge a liberal fee for his services, but to write on the balance side of the ledger constructive service for the common good.

The greatest duty of every citizen is to put his home community first and thus perform a real service for our country of which we sing and speak with reverence.

DELIVERING THE GOODS.

We all know plenty of smart fellows who never get anywhere. They always made the best grades in schools and were always ready with an answer to every question. Yet they never accomplish much.

We all know plenty of dull fellows who take home so much money on Saturday night that if they were paid in silver, they would have to call a fine ton motor truck. In school they were slow to learn. The teacher told them they would never amount to anything, but they did.

The answer is plain. We are all paid in proportion to the ability we use, not what we possess. The man who buries his talents finds they have rotted when he goes to dig them up. The man who uses his to their maximum develops them and keeps them working to the maximum.

Human ability is purchased C. O. D. Delivering the goods is the main thing in life and is the true measure of any man. The person who pays for it, if he is not interested in what is in the other fellows' head, but what comes out of it.

Are you delivering the goods?

On Wednesday of last week J. O. Bonta, moved from Bert Gaines' place on the Petersburg pike into the house on Joseph Wain's farm recently vacated by W. S. Bush. Mr. Bonta will plant a large crop of tobacco this year in the raising of which he became very proficient in "Old Bourbon" before coming to Boone—God's Country.

GOING THE PACE

"It takes money to make the mare go," a truism of some age, although relegated by the advent of the automobile is just as true today as it was when we depended on actual horsepower to get some place.

People who want to "keep pace with the times" and never want to allow another community to outstrip them in public improvements, need not be surprised when the bill shows up on the tax duplicate.

You can't sign every petition that is presented to you and expect taxes to be reduced. You can't agree to help every other fellow get his road through, by signing his petition, that they will sign your petition when you want a new road by your place, and at the same time not expect taxes to mount.

The expenses grow in exactly the same proportion as the people spend the money.

Some of us, looking for an alibi, like to blame public officials, for apparent exorbitant taxes, but we need only to come back to our own doorsteps to get at the seat of the trouble.

We are not opposed to public improvements, but we do believe that if a man signs a petition for a new road or bridge, he should stand up and take his medicine in the form of higher taxes, and not whine about it.

SPRING POETRY

About this time, as the almanacs say, the spring poet used to walk into the newspaper office and drag out some laboriously wrought verses, which with a kind of hopeful diffidence she presented to the editor. That authority was not commonly impressed with their new value, but in many cases he printed their "out of sympathy for a kindly soul."

We have more poets than ever before now, the majority highly accomplished and cultured. Most of them seek less obvious subjects than spring. However the romance of the spring, time appeals to many people who still preserve simplicity of heart amid a complex age.

The familiar old measures about birds and sunshine and budding flowers may sound commonplace, dished up in the usual rhymes. But millions of people feel the poetic inspiration of the season, even if they can not put the sentiments into words that comply with the rhetoric books.

LASSING WINS $1,000 TROPHY.

Local Golfer Gets His Name Engraved on Bouton-Cermak Cup

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 17, 1924.

R. W. Lassing, of St. Petersburg, Fla., won the $1,000 Bouton-Cermak cup Saturday at the Jungle golf course by defeating H. F. Graves, Lowellville, N. Y., in the final 36 holes of the first flight, three and two. Lassing's name will be engraved on the cup as its first winner and to gain permanent possession he must win it two more times in succession. It was the third tournament of the season won by Lassing.

William McIntyre, of Providence, R. I., defeated Glenn (Pop) Warner in the final 36 holes of the second flight and three, winning the club prize.

In the third flight E. S. Purdy, Jersey City, defeated A. W. Kelley, of Fair Haven, four and three, over 18 holes.

Mr. Lassing is a son of Judge and Mrs. J. M. Lassing.

THE NEIGHBORLY SPIRIT

It is one of the blessings of country life, that the rural people as a rule show the neighborly spirit. Innumerable instances could be named in Boone county where people had taken hold to do needed jobs of work for sick neighbors.

But in ordinary times, country people may be so busy that they forget the social end, and keep too much at home. They perhaps finish work at night with such a feeling of weariness that they lack spirit to make a call on neighbor whom they have not seen for a long time, or attend some social meeting. But it pays people to make a little effort to enjoy the social side of life. A country neighborhood where the neighborly spirit prevails is likely to be united and prosperous and happy.

A COMMENDABLE PLAN

A movement has been inaugurated in Lexington, Ky., whereby the local gasoline dealers are to collect one cent on each gallon of gasoline sold, and contribute the fund derived therefrom towards the completion of a bad stretch of road in Knox county. This road is a link in the Dixie Highway and is causing south bound motor traffic that would pass through Lexington to be diverted in other directions. If all cities on the Dixie Highway so affected would join this link in the chain would soon be mended.

WASHINGTON COMMENT.

Washington, D. C.—Justice James C. Crosey, of the New York Supreme Court, believes that the criminal problem cannot be solved without the cooperation of many men willing to become companions to boys during the impressionable age. He says:

"Over 80 per cent of the criminals are less than 25 years of age. The vast majority of all the youthful offenders commit crimes because they had bad associates and were not under the proper influences in the years when their boyhood was turning to manhood—between the ages of 12 and 18."

"In those years every boy needs to be under the influence of the right kind of a man. He needs such a man's life to supply his ideals and such a man to become his hero. Every boy is a hero worshipper. Many become criminals because they follow the wrong leaders."

Tens of thousands of boys are nightly on our streets looking for amusement, seeking adventure, and yearning for companionship. Many of them have no fathers, and the parents of many others give little heed to the places their boys visit or the companions they choose.

"Do we men owe no duty to those boys? Should we not provide places where such boys may meet and play and be under the influence of men of the right kind?"

"This is a practical thing. It can be done. It has been done in a small way and with results. Why should not we undertake it in a big way? We can lessen the crime in our midst by giving our attention to the youths. They need a real man's guiding hand and helpful personality. They need the example of a true man's life in forming their character."

TOO MUCH SPEED

Deaths due to organic diseases of the heart increased during the past year and now exceed those due to any other cause.

It is becoming more apparent that there is too much speed in life today. Men in the prime of life suffer nervous breakdowns just when they should be the most proficient.

Competition in every line of business activity is so high developed that men have to draw on all of their stored up nervous energy to shoulder continually mounting responsibilities.

Women, in addition to discharging their duties, at home, find so many demands upon them in their time in meeting their social and civil obligations, that they have little time for relaxation and rest.

The pace that the twentieth century has set or is so strenuous that it is little wonder the heart wears out and ceases to function.

It is about time that we were calling a halt on the modern tendency to put full steam and leave none in reserve for emergency use.

If we do not take time to degenerate into a mistle people, broken physically, and incapable of carrying on for the betterment of future generations as it should.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

Some Sunday school workers recently reported that it has been estimated, that only one fifth of the rural population attends church. The source of the statement was not given but it seems incredible, for there are many neighborhoods where the churches are well attended. But also there are many where the churches are very poorly supported.

In these times when the majority of farmers have automobiles, it should be easier for the country families to attend church than ever before. But church services must be made attractive. The people in the centers of population must give financial aid to many struggling societies, so that they can afford to hire ministers who are adequate for their great task.

Radio "Fans" must pay to "listen in" in Australia. Every purchaser of a receiving set must present a license showing that he has subscribed and paid for the service of the station operating on the wave length to which the instrument being purchased is adjusted. For every broadcasting station he wishes to use, he pays separately. The sets are sealed and government inspectors investigate and check up the subscriber to see that seals have not been tampered with.

J. C. Acra, of Idlewild neighborhood, was in Burlington on Thursday of last week and called at the Recorder office. While in he ordered his subscription moved up another year, also taking advantage of the joint bargain offer of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Bible tells how King Solomon gave King Hiram 20 measures of pure oil, but he would have got into trouble if he had done it in these times.

The Legislature has passed the bill putting the following roads in Boone county in the primary system: From Florence to Dan 38 via Burlington and Bellevue. It is expected that the United States Government will participate in the construction of this road.

From Covington to Decoursey, Nicholson, Walton, Florence, Burlington, Bellevue, Pettibone, Idlewild, Bullittville, Hebron, Constance Bromley, Ludlow, Covington.

From Glencoe to Napoleon to South Fork, to Beaver to Richwood. There is another bill in the Senate that is expected to become a law that makes the road from Louisville to Florence, via Bedford, Milton, Carrollton, Warsaw, Big Horn, and Union, and also another that may route this road from Warsaw via South Fork Beaver and Union to Florence. These roads are now built on paper. If the legislature should put all of this mileage on the primary system Boone county could maintain her other roads and keep them in fair traveling condition. After these roads have been built on paper, before they can be constructed, the projects must be financed, as roads can not be constructed on paper or hot air, it takes real money and large amounts of real money.

Roads to stand the traffic that they are subjected to must be constructed of the best materials, and the cost of such roads run into the thousands of dollars per mile. You, Mr. Voter will decide at the coming November election whether these roads that have been built on paper will become roads which you may use and enjoy. The foundation has been laid, funds must now be provided for the structure, and if funds are not provided road conditions will go from bad to worse not only in Boone county but all over the state.

people who wonder why it is that so many accidents occur nowadays, might get an idea if they would take a position in the front seat of a trolley car in some thickly populated district.

Looking from the viewpoint of the motorman, one will be likely to see revelations of public carelessness. He is likely to see people crossing the tracks close in front of a rapidly moving car, when the road is in the front seat of a trolley car in some thickly populated district.

The ground may be slippery and they might catch their feet in the protruding rails, but that would not bother some folks. The way automobiles will race with trolley cars on narrow streets suggests how little caution some folks have. The public was never more inclined to gamble with hazards than it is today.

Charles Utz, colored, died at his home in Burlington, Tuesday March 11th. He was a son of Charles and Felicia Utz and was 54 years of age and a bachelor. He was a hard working colored man, and until the beginning of his sickness about two years ago, he was found always at work. Brights disease was the cause of his death. He was buried Thursday after a funeral service in the church of which he was a member for a number of years. He is survived by a brother and sister.

Their many friends wish them a long, happy and prosperous life together.

Something will have to be done, according to reports from every quarter, to prevent the influx from country to the city. It is feared that the food supply will run short. Country folks should worry. He who produces the food should be the last to do without, and when the world-city gentleman gets hungry enough he will return to the land of promise. We have noticed it often.

Used to be said that the politicians wanted to get in the limelight, but some of them are finding it is a little too bright for their complexion.

There was no school here this week, owing to the teacher, Miss Sadie Ruman, having been called to Rising Star by the serious illness of her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Collins and Mrs. Fred Seikman and children Wilfred and Miss Bessie, attended a surprise party at Leyman Goodridge's at Taylorsport, Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Manlius Goodridge had as guests Sunday Mrs. Sadie Goodridge and son Manlius Raymond, of Taylorsport. Misses Mary Frances and Dollie Goodridge and Miss Amanda Koons.

UNION.

Miss Fannie Utz called on Mrs. Belle Jones, Friday afternoon.

Mrs. J. W. Criswell of Goodridge Drive, was the guest of Mrs. R. Feldhaus Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Utz, of Burlington, spent Friday evening with Rev. Garber and family.

Most circles of the W. M. S. will meet at the Paragone Wednesday all day for the purpose of quilting.

Mr. and Mrs. James Head and Miss Anna Mae Bristow spent Sunday with Mr. A. M. Holtzworth and family.

Several from here attended Mr. Arthur Dean's funeral at Walton last Sunday. Was very sorry to hear of his death.

A few of Mrs. Sallie Anderson's friends surprised her Sunday, it being her 84th birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Smith; Rev. J. H. Garber and daughter Mary Frances; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Rachal, Sr.; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bristow; Mrs. Belle Jones and daughter Gladys. All enjoyed the day very much and departed in the evening wishing Mrs. Anderson many more happy returns of the day.

Miss Viola Crespi is still improving at Speers hospital.

We are glad to see Anna Mae Bristow out after a severe case of scarlet fever.

Several from here attended the funeral of Arthur Dean, Walton, Sunday. Mrs. Dean has a host of friends here who sympathize with her in her hour of trouble.

Those having subscribed to the cemetery pike fund are asked to kindly pay same to Miss Lillian Bristow at Union Deposit Bank. We are planning to start this work as soon as the weather permits.

Ed. Sayback and wife, of Crescent Springs, broke bread with R. E. Tanner and wife last Sunday.

Miss Emma Welsh, who underwent a surgical operation at a hospital, is not improving very rapidly.

J. O. Richards of Covington, called on Mr. and Mrs. John Beall last Sunday. Mr. Richards is always a welcome visitor at our burg.

Our manuscript failed to reach its destination last week for some cause or other. Our R. D. carrier failed to take it out of the mail box.

There has been nothing done here in the way of farming, and the farmers will be a busy set when the weather conditions are favorable.

A fairly good sized crowd attended the sale of Aylor and Rouse last week, and everything sold for satisfactory prices. The horse was sold to John Aylor, of Hebron, for $25; the cows brought from $36 to $100, and other things in proportion.

After an illness of several weeks Mrs. Isabelle Jane Rouse died on Monday the 10th inst., at the advanced age of 86 years, five months and 10 days. She was married to J. W. Rouse August 2, 1865. The remains were taken to Hopeful Wednesday the 12th (she having been a member of that church since 1882) where an appropriate service was conducted by her pastor Rev. Royer.

Her husband, two sons B. A. and M. F. Rouse and one daughter, Mrs. R. F. Snyder and 19 grandchildren survive to mourn her departure. After the service at the church the remains were placed in the vault in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement. Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral.

To those who so kindly assisted during the illness and death of our mother and companion, we tender our heartfelt and sincere thanks.

J. W. Rouse and Family.

Annabel Brady was born April 1, 1872, entered into rest March 8th, 1924, at the age of 51 years eleven months and seven days. She was the youngest of a family of seven children of Geo. H. and Harriet Walton. Geo. H. died in 1888. One sister Mrs. Ida M. Wilson preceded her to the grave in 1911.

On August 12th, 1890 she was united in marriage to H. D. Brady and to this union were born three sons, Robert, Joe and Sebern, who with their father remain to mourn the loss of her, they loved so well. Others that are saddened by her death are three sisters, Mrs. Susan M. Ryle and Mrs. Frances Fisk of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. G. W. Ward of Waterford, Ohio, two brothers J. H. and G. H. Walton of this county, two daughter-in-laws, two little grand-daughters, her husbands mother Mrs. R. A. Brady and two sister-in-laws Mrs. J. M. Lassing and Mrs. Emma Brown and a number of nieces and nephews and a host of friends who will sadly miss this precious one who has been taken from their midst. Mrs. Brady united with the First Baptist church Nov 6th, 1887, at the age of 15 years, and later transferred her membership to Bellevue church, of which she was a faithful member. She was also a member of the W. M. U. and Rebekah Lodge and always did her duty well, always patient, cheerful and kind. She endeared herself to all who knew her, and had many friends. Her death is a great loss to the Christian church. How much she will be missed in the community cannot be realized, for none knew her but to admire her, in her church and lodge her wonderful influence for right will live on in their memories, and in the home there is a vacant place that can never be filled, mother, kind tender and loving, she has enshrined in the hearts of her loved ones a monument that will ever stand throughout their lives. Then do not weep dear ones, for she has gone to her heavenly home, and has received a crown of righteousness, for those who die the death which die in the Lord—they rest from their labors and their works do follow after them.

Card of Thanks—While our hearts with sorrow over the recent loss of our loved one, the dark cloud is pierced with a ray of sunlight by the loving ministrations of kind and loving friends. We wish also to thank Dr. Yelton and the nurses for their untiring efforts, Rev. Robt. McNeely for his words of comfort, the W. M. U., Rebekah Lodge and friends for the beautiful floral offerings and C. S. Chambers for his tender and efficient manner in conducting the funeral.

Remove Spots on Ceiling

Rain spots on the ceiling can be removed with a little unlabeled lime dissolved in alcohol, says Popular Science Monthly. The lime is thoroughly shaken up with the alcohol until it crumbles into a fine powder. The mixture is then brushed over the spot. When dry the ceiling can be painted.

Expensive Wives of Rome

So expensive were the wives of Rome that Julius Caesar was induced to offer premiums to encourage marriage. He allowed married women to dress more superbly than the unmarried and he relieved of various taxes the married man who was the father of three children.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RE CORDER

Secretary Mellon's war reduction plan is as dead as slavery, but no Administration official from the President down will admit it—officially. The President decided to compromise with the Republican insurgents in the House to approve the compromise income tax rates adopted by that body, but, on second thought, he changed his mind and the "compromise letter" was suppressed. When this began to be noted about the Capitol, it was denied as the White House that the President had retreated one iota from his original position that the Mellon tax plan must be adopted "as is." Regardless of the President's attitude, Administration leaders at the Capitol tell me that there is not a chance in the world of putting over the Mellon rates.

Some announcement has been offered this morning by the Administration which most of the correspondents have paid to the maximum surtax rate in the tax bill. About much emphasis on the rates which the average tax payer has to contend with—that is, nothing much is said about the rates on incomes below $5,000. It has been repeatedly stated that regardless of the high surtaxes fixed by Congress, they will not be paid, because the persons with annual incomes running close to a million dollars will find some way to get out of paying the tax. The man with a small income will have to pay, however, and no one seems to be interested in the rate affecting his income. Recent indications are that the minimum rate will be two per cent—half as much as under the existing revenue law.

Information reaches us that Senator Walsh would like to drop the oil scandal investigation if any way could be found to call a halt gracefully. The difficulty is that the Democrats in the Senate are hopeful of getting more Republicans involved in the oil mess, and the Republicans are just as hopeful of catching some more Democrats. So the game continues, and the country is flooded daily with mysterious code telegrams and all kinds of intimations involving officials, past and present, but having nothing whatever to do with the leasing of naval oil reserves to private interests.

Some there are hereabouts who say that the naming of President Coolidge in the oil scandal has killed all his chances for election in November, but Republican leaders in the Senate declare that the excitement will die out during the summer and that "Cal will pull through." It is now generally understood that some kind of a search for scandal will be in progress here from now until the presidential election.

The newest group in Congress is the "beer bloc." It is composed of members pledged to vote for liberalization of the Volstead Act. Their hopes are high, but thus far they have not been able to round up enough votes to command a majority.

Careful polls show that there are more than enough votes in both the Senate and House to pass a soldier's bonus bill over a presidential veto, but the game in Congress now is to pass a bonus bill that will meet with the approval of the President. Many Republicans who might vote for a bonus the first time might be found among the missing when it became necessary for them to go on record against the Administration. The trend is a way from a straight cash bonus, with the majority favoring a plan whereby the veterans will be paid up insurance policies.

From reports received for 1923 it will have to be admitted that "war profits" will not only be duplicated but exceeded in times of peace. Besides the great profits declared by 90 per cent of business concerns, two things stand out as prominent from the reports. One is the fact that the Du Pont Company sold more high explosives in 1923 than in any war year; the other is that the earnings of the Steel Corporation are close to and will soon surpass the war record. There seems to be but little uncertainty as to the business future of this nation.

The Northern Pacific Railroad claims 3,900,000 acres of valuable timber lands now included in the national forest reservation as a territory nearly as large as the state of New Jersey. When the books are balanced, however, the Northern Pacific will be compelled to relinquish an equally vast territory now said to be illegally held.

A SHORT HISTORY OF RADIO

Replying to charges by Federal Trade Commission that eight leading radio companies had secured a monopoly in foreign and domestic radio business, Pres. Swope of General Electric Company said: "The connection of General Electric Company with question of radio communication dates back to the war, at that time radio communications in this country were handled by American Marconi Co., controlled by British Marconi Co." Mr. Swope pointed out that to establish radio communication for the United States free from domination of foreign interest, the General Electric Company was induced to take the lead in reorganizing the American Marconi Company which eventuated in the formation of the Radio Corporation of America. Mr. Swope said: "To make Radio Corporation the most efficient instrument for transoceanic communication, General Electric made a contract with Radio Corporation giving the latter the benefit and advantage of all inventions it had made and would make in future. To strengthen further the position of Radio Corporation in this art, similar contracts were made with other companies, the idea being to put Radio Corporation in possession of those patents necessary to make it an efficient organization for radio transmission and enable it best to serve public interests.

"This was all known to the government, and a representative designated by the government sat on the board of Radio Corporation for some time after its organization. Officials of Radio Corporation appeared before a Congressional committee, where all these relations relating to formation of Radio Corporation were told in detail. Several months ago the Federal Trade Commission published its statement as result of investigation of Radio Corporation of America and its relation to the various companies interested in it. This report was widely published. There was no indication in this report of any adverse opinion or action on part of the Federal Trade Commission.

"All that has been done has been with the idea of making Radio Corporation an efficient instrument of radio communication in interest of the government and the American public."

Is a national policy which seems to question the honesty or sincerity of every large business organization or group of business interests that attempt to render a highly efficient public service, going to encourage either the inventor, the investor or the organizer of progressive business undertakings. If every man, group of men, or company which attempts to render a nation-wide service is eventually to be accused of carrying on activities in restraint of trade what incentive do we offer for real development? Radio communication has been the greatest experiment of the age. It has required courage and perseverance to put capital into an industry as new and untried as this.

COOKING VEGETABLES FOR THE PRE-SCHOOL CHILD

Spinach and carrots are the first green vegetables doctors advise mothers to give babies—being rich in iron salts and they are especially necessary in the diet of a pale, underweight child. Lettuce, beet tops and young tender peas may be given the child after his 18th month. Later, asparagus, beets, squash, young tender beans mild turnips and stewed celery may be added. The vegetables to be avoided are green corn, egg plant, radishes cucumbers and raw cabbage. Cooked cabbage may be added after the third year.

In feeding young children green vegetables there are three points to bear in mind:

1st. Cook vegetables until tender. 2nd. Mash fine with a fork or mash through a sieve for young children.

3rd. Give a small amount at a time. Often in giving children vegetables for the first time too large an amount is allowed.

Vegetables prepared for children should not be cooked with fat meat. Because parents themselves like vegetables seasoned with fat meat is not sufficient reason why children's vegetables should be prepared in the same manner. Spinach and carrots should be cooked in a small amount of boiling water. When tender enough to mash with a fork they should be mashed fine or run through a sieve then seasoned with a little butter or thin cream sauce made with butter and milk. Beet tops, green beans, squash and peas should be prepared in the same manner. Cooked cabbage should be prepared by removing the tough outside leaves, cut in quarters, remove the stalk and shred. Soak in cold water until tender—then drop in an uncovered vessel with very little boiling water and cook 20 minutes. The water should be gone then and the cabbage tender. If the cabbage is not tender in 30 minutes it is too old for children. Serve with butter or cream sauce.

The saying, "Mind your P's and Q's" meaning "Being very careful," originated in printing offices. When type is set up in letters are reversed, and small "p's" and "q's" were liable to be mistaken for each other. Machine typesetting has made the warning obsolete.

MILK THE NATIONAL DRINK.

Milk should be adopted as the American national drink, according to a recent convention of agricultural society officers and officials of the state of Kansas.

Public sentiment about milk is different from what it used to be. The word "milkop" might seem to indicate that the habit of milk drinking was considered in ancient times as appropriate to children, but did not fit many men. But now many of our greatest men are confirmed milk drinkers. President Harding is said to have been fond of bread and milk, and Theodore Roosevelt was a habitual milk drinker.

In these times when so many people are poisoning themselves with bad liquor, a person who has an established reputation for milk drinking should stand very well with employers and insurance companies. Also anything that makes milk drinkers more popular must make life safer on the automobile roads.

Major Watts of the Veterans Bureau asserts that the government has expended $44,000 for each disabled soldier helped. How much better it would have been to have given each one the interest on $40,000 or $50,000 of government bonds for life. Such a plan may yet be a good investment.

The program of the W. L. W. broadcasting station of The Crosley Radio Corporation using a wave length of 300 meters, will hold universal interest on Sunday evenings when the new schedule goes into effect this week. The program will begin at 7:30 in the evening with services from the Walnut Hills Presbyterian Church, with Rev. Frederick N. McMillan, in charge. This service will be for 45 minutes and will be followed by a program of the music given by the Western and Southern Welfare Orchestra under the director of William Kopp. This part of the program will be augmented by soloists of prominence. The primary object of this musical portion of the program given under the auspices of the Welfare Association of the home office of the Western and Southern Life Insurance Company, is to give music and entertainment of those who are shut-in people in the country where it is impossible to get to the musical recitals of orchestra and soloists. This portion of the program will be at 8:15.

City people brag about the fine entertainments that they can attend, but they are apt to be much broke to go to many of them.

"Such is the strength with which population shoots in that part of the world, that, state the numbers as high as we will, whilst the dispute continues, the exaggeration ends."—Speech on "Constitution With America."

Less than a century and a half ago, when Burke made this statement in parliament, he feared he would be accused of exaggeration when he stated the population of the colonies as two and a half millions; now the population of the United States is 100,000,000—400,000 of which have been added during the last quarter century.

A quarter of a century ago, before the last forty millions were added to our population, excessive wealth and excessive poverty were practically unknown. Both of these always tend to increase as the population increases. Back in those days every village and town contained dozens of vacant lots, and great commons where the village cows grazed and where the circus annually pitched its tents. Houses, in those days, were close enough together for company, and far enough apart for privacy. Children had plenty of space for baseball games; plenty of woods in which to go wild-flowing and nutting; plenty of clean streams in which to chase crawfish and minnows.

The last forty millions have changed all that. Vacant lots are becoming fewer each year; people in towns and villages no longer keep cows, because it is too hard to find pastures for them; wild flowers are becoming so scarce that we no longer encourage children to pick them; nut trees have been cut off to such an extent that a boy is fortunate to gather a quart where a boy of the earlier day could have gathered bushels.

With the increase in population has come a tremendous increase in our dollar and cents wealth, and few people ever stop to think whether this increase is a sound one. It is, therefore, well to consider that the sources of wealth are labor, soil, water power, timber, minerals and fisheries. Increased population increases only one of these factors—labor. It uses up the natural fertility of the soil; it stimulates miners and fish more quickly than nature can replace them. Increased population brings about increased exploitation of the natural resources of the country, and thus brings about an appearance of increasing prosperity, while all the time cutting away the foundation on which prosperity rests.

The ultimate cause of a rapidly shooting population is a crowded country such as China now is. The next forty millions will not crowd us as badly as China is crowded; but it will crowd us altogether too much for comfort. It seems high time for us to realize that an increased population is not an unalloyed blessing.

AUNT NANNY LEE'S PLANTATION RECIPES

"Stumble-Inn" is a funny game to play indoors. Everyone must leave the room except the innkeeper who places three pillows on the floor. When the first two "guests" arrive one of them is told to run across the room and over the pillows without stepping on them. Next he is blindfolded and told to do the same thing. If he does not step on a pillow he loses his partner. But after he is blindfolded his partner picks up all the pillows. He stumbles about in the room groping for the pillows and just before the blindfold is removed the pillows are replaced. Naturally when he can see again he wonders how in the world he could have missed the pillows!

Let's Take a Veto!

If the King of Bakers were to come sometime and take a vote on favorite flavors I know before counting noses just what the answer would be. Why chocolate of course! Yet chocolate is not a new thing about good food. Goodness knows how many other yum-yum flavors, but after all it is said and done there is nothing about good old chocolate that the boys and girls can't respect. Now know a handy recipe for chocolate cookies that you'll just love. Here it is:

1/2 cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
3 oz. chocolate
4 cup milk
2 cups self-rising flour.
Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, beaten egg, and melted chocolate. Sift the flour and add the self-rising flour alternately with sweet milk. Roll dough very thin, cut, and bake in a quick oven.

SAFETY FIRST FOR TOBACCO PLANT BED

Sanitary measures taken to prevent the introduction of the tobacco diseases wild fire and black fire or rust into the plant bed at this time will be repaid by better crop yields. The summer of 1920, when W. L. Valieu, plant pathologist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, The leaf spot diseases were especially severe in western Kentucky last year. In certain sections destroying practically the entire crop. In the Burley section however the diseases did not cause so much consternation but in nearly every field the rust was present and damaged the crop to some extent. This is a situation that is not generally recognized by growers but it is a distinct source of loss when the tobacco is graded at the warehouse. One grower reports that from two loads of tobacco free from disease he obtained over $900, while on two other loads infected with rust he obtained only a little over $200.

Although the chief damage to the crop is done in the late summer any effective means of control must be begun in the plant bed. Numerous observations the past season showed conclusively that the rust was present in over 90 per cent of the plant beds although in most cases it caused very slight injury.

Plant bed sanitation and precautionary measures are recommended by the pathologist as the most effective means thus far discovered for cutting down the ravages of the disease. The bacteria which cause the trouble live through the winter in the disease spots of cured leaves, seeds, pods, or in tobacco trash. This material may be introduced into the bed in a number of ways and in this connection it is especially important that the tobacco bed be so located that it will not receive drainage water from old tobacco barns or tobacco trash, and where there is least danger of trash being carried in or blown in by the wind. Thorough steaming or burning is important for it kills the weed seeds and means less work on the bed later on; the less weeding or work done on the bed the less the danger of accidental infection.

All seed should be soaked in a 1 to 1,000 solution of mercuric bichloride for 15 minutes. Such a solution may be made by dissolving one tablet of this material in one pint of water. The seed should be washed thoroughly in clean water after the treatment, dried, and planted immediately.

A further source of infection which should be watched carefully is spitting, or experience have provided that where cured tobacco leaves infected with the disease were chewed and the juice spit on the plant beds the disease occurred in every instance. No one who chews tobacco should be allowed near the plant bed.

Although it has not been possible to control either of these diseases under any experimental conditions the diseases are so wide spread and destructive that tobacco growers should try the recommendations this year and attempt to determine for themselves whether they will be effective under their conditions or not. Only by the cooperative effort of tobacco growers and scientists can it be expected to bring about control of these diseases.

SAINT PATRICK

Far back in the mists of early history, there lived a robust old saint, who is revered by the Irish people today. He must have had a most original personality, as something of a commanding and winsome character has come down through all these ages, to influence the life of these times.

He must have been a statesman as well as a religious leader, and a man of great power and influence, as he is said to have founded 36 churches and to have put a school beside each one.

The Irish people, who have become so important an element in American life, look back to Saint Patrick with a peculiar affection, perhaps because he typified in many ways the Irish temperament. The man who did so much to stamp out heathenism, who faced and overcame the perils of those savage times, must have been one of undaunted courage and cheerfulness, and these characteristics have been handed on to his descendants in America.

Some one has said that when an Irishman has a roof over his head, he sings, and if he doesn't have a roof, he sings too. There is an imperishable good cheer in this race that has helped them win their way.

Wherever you find the sons of St. Patrick in this country, you find people who have taken hold of the hardest tasks with persistent industry, and a kind of smiling faith which has worked wonders. The first pioneers began on the most laborious tasks; they helped build our railroads and dig our ditches. Now they have risen to the highest posts in the nation and in business. The same dauntless spirit that carried old Saint Patrick through his achievements and drove the snakes out of Ireland, has today driven away the difficulties and obstacles that beset the people who come to a new land.

The fact that a man will talk every day in private about the defects of his home town, does not prove he will say anything in a public meeting when people are asked for suggestions.

The cafeteria idea originated in Los Angeles.

ENCOURAGING THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

Young people who desire to do progressive things in their home towns are sometimes discouraged by those who throw difficulties in their way, and represent that it would be impossible for them to attain perfection or anything like it. A group of young folks may desire to get up a play, for instance. But some one may tell them that they could not possibly compete with professional actors or trained amateurs, and that if they put on a play their effort would seem thin and feeble compared with what people could see by going to near by cities. As a result of such disparaging comments, many young people will give up such attempts.

Many efforts to start singing societies, bands and orchestras, etc., in country towns have been discouraged because the young people were told it would be hard for them to produce a strictly first class result.

In these times people attend fine musical and dramatic performances in cities, and then are ashamed to try to do anything for themselves. They are about like the country town flute player, who had always enjoyed his instrument and had given much pleasure with it in rural entertainments. But one day he went to a concert in a large city where he heard one of the country's best flute players. He was enraptured by the fine music, but it so disgusted him with his own performance that he went home and threw his flute into the swillpail, as he remarked, and never played much after that. It would have been better if he had never heard that great player.

The young folks in country towns should take hold and do their best in these forms of expression. If they make a sincere and earnest effort, their productions will give pleasure to their neighborhood, and they will add to their own powers.

MODERN BUSINESS METHODS

Modern methods of doing business always bring results and the business man who is constantly looking for new ideas and improvements is the one who reaps the profits.

The men who are too conservative to adopt a new scheme until they first determine whether it is being done in the best circles, are unable to see how they can run their business without the innovations, once adopted, which they opposed.

An exceptionally good memory is not required to recall the time when banks did not pay interest on time deposits. It is now a rare case where a bank has not adopted this policy.

Some banks are advertising that they will pay interest on checking accounts above a certain amount, the interest to be computed monthly on the minimum sum in the account. Others offer to pay interest monthly on the average sum in the checking account above a fixed amount.

Banks will probably be slow to adopt this, but eventually the plan will doubtless be a generally accepted practice in banking.

Much of the financial embarrassment of banks, particularly in the western states, is due to the withdrawal of deposits for investment in tax-free securities, competent authorities say.

Withdrawal reached such an alarming stage that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon withdrew the sale of tax-exempt U. S. savings certificates and U. S. government bonds in seventeen states.

The biggest source of tax-free securities is the U. S. Treasury, which now recognizes in legislation that interest on U. S. savings certificates is now recognized in all forty-eight states.

Banks have a fine chance, but this growing evil by taking hold deposits. Interest on checking accounts appears to be one remedy that would make depositors think twice before withdrawing their money to invest in tax-free stocks and bonds.

KENTUCKY APPLES FOR NORTHERN MARKETS

What promises to be one of the most profitable undertakings in orcharding in this state is the project which has been completed through the fall, winter, and spring in planting over 6,000 apple trees of the Transient variety in the vicinity of Hopkinsville, Christian county. According to W. W. Magill, orchard specialist of the Kentucky Experiment Station these trees will furnish early apples for markets in the northern states and Canada.

The orchards, which vary in size from 5 acres upward, are owned by the best farmers in the county and total about 140 acres of good orchard land. A similar trial made in Tennessee has proved profitable during the last ten or twelve years according to the specialist and the farm bureau, county agent and farmers cooperating had laid the foundation for a new crop in the Christian county plan for diversification. The orchards will come into profitable bearing in about seven years.

"After being away on a lecture trip in the interior, I return each time to Manhattan as to a foreign port. The people in the street appear mean in stature and brutal in manner. It is in the small towns of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois that I overtake the vanishing America of my youth."—Hamlin Garland.

WHAT THEY SAY ON TRIMMED LAMBS.

The sheep business to day is on a sound basis and strange as it may seem it is diminishing in the west. We will have to look for larger production in the eastern states. Choice trimmed ewe or wether lambs from a butcher standpoint yield more meat, accordingly bring more money for high dressing lambs will be better quality and cheaper even at increased price while there is an unlimited demand for these choice lambs. There has never been a surplus of choice lambs and the small cities that are clamoring for good choice lambs cannot be supplied.

R. S. Matheson, Swift & Company.

I do not know why you cannot feed here as well as in Colorado with corn and good alfalfa hay. A lambs that would be seconds should be kept at home until top prices can be obtained for them. The demand for choice lambs is so great that all farmers should make their entire production strictly choice.

J. Horine, Armour & Company.

Out of 76,000 trimmed lambs sent to market last year on which records were kept there were three times as many seconds among the trimmed as among the untrimmed lambs. Western Kentucky especially needs to improve the quality of its product and can still do it this year. Pure flocks never lose money; and although it is not advisable to load up with a big lot of sheep a farmer should start small and grow. Some twenty-five counties known as the Blue Grass section represent the highest priced lambs south of the Ohio river and have more than two thirds of the sheep in the state of nearly 600,000.

Resolutions of Respect.

In memory of Eugene K. Witham, who died Feb. 23, 1924.

Once again death hath summoned a Brother Odd Fellow, and the golden gateway to the Eternal City has opened to welcome him to his home.

He has completed his work in the ministering to the wants of the afflicted, in shedding light into darkened souls and in bringing joy into the places of misery, and as his reward has received the plaudit of "well done" from the Supreme Master.

And Whereas, the all-wise and merciful Master of the Universe has called our beloved and respected Brother home, and he having been a true and faithful member of our beloved Order, therefore be it

Resolved, That Morning Star Lodge No. 16, I. O. O. F. at Petersburg, Ky., in testimony of her loss, drapes its Charter in mourning for thirty days and that we tender to the family of our deceased brother our sincere condolence in their deep affliction and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family.

Committee—Perry Mahan, R. H. White, C. P. Shinkle.

NEW FARM PROBLEMS

In other days, but days still fresh in the memory of many Augusta citizens, the farmer plowed his fields, planted his seed and cultivated his plants and marketed his crops the closest buyer, taking all he could get for his product. Today the selling and distribution process is much more complicated. He has to study freight rates, cooperating in marketing how to increase production and at the same time not lose the fertility of his soil. He is forced to study credit facilities, market demands, productive costs and changes, and matters of social, public and economic concern. There was a time when farming was just simply farming. Today it is a business that carries more detail than any other on earth. And that's why we always feel that we wanted to take off our hat to the successful farmer—the man who has to have more brains than thousands engaged in other lines of business or trade.

Only one railway accident involved loss of life in England during 1923. The years of 1901 and 1904 were without a single fatal accident to passengers. In the 23 years of the present century the number of rail way deaths totals but 78.

The 10th session of the Kentucky Legislature is now history. The men composing that body have been in session in the Capital building, Frankfort, Kentucky, for sixty legislative days, and their laws that have been made are for your benefit and that time alone can tell whether they have acted wisely or otherwise. We believe that a number of the laws passed will benefit us. The law reducing the tax on real estate will be of relief, in tax matters. The act passed submitting the $75,000,000 bond issue will cause more comment than all of the other acts passed by that body, as it will be cursed and discussed in every nook and corner of this grand old commonwealth. It is the outstanding feature of the Legislature. Attorney Samuel W. Adams was Boone county was the place of his birth and his home, for a number of years, and we are glad to know that a Boone county boy had been selected for so important a position as the Presiding officer of the House of Representatives.

In a recent army test in France it was found that only two out of every ten recruits twenty years old were qualified in the ordinary sense of the word. Of the remaining eight, five were so ignorant as to know how to read and write a letter.

GOOD ROADS

Farmer Can Construct

Practical Road Drag

Every farmer should have a road drag. There is no excuse for not having one when it can be had with so little cost. Good road drags may be purchased or made at home.

On almost any farm some old plank can be found. Get two pieces of plank, oak if you can find it; 3 inches thick if it can be had; if not, 2 inches thick will be all right; 8 or 10 inches wide and 6 or 7 feet long. Three-inch plank is best as it is much heavier and will stand more heavy usage. You will also need two pieces of 2 by 5 or 3 by 4 preferably, if it can be had, 3 feet long. Some good tough wood is best.

Make these like Illustration B. Bore five one-half inch holes in each as illustrated; one to be about 6 inches from the end, with a second one 3 inches or 2 inches from that inward, according to the thickness of your two large pieces of plank. At the other end bore one hole about 3 to 4 inches from the end, this hole to be used to hold clevis pin for the hitch. Bore another hole 6 inches from this end of the piece, and a third hole 2 or 3 inches inward from the second, according to the thickness of the large pieces of plank used.

In each of the large pieces of plank make two holes as in Illustration A, one at each end 2 1/2 inches from top edge of the plank. One hole should be 10 inches from the end, the other 16 inches from the end; make these holes so your two 3-foot pieces will slip into them easily. You will also need eight old bolts, one-half inch in diameter and 6 or 7 inches long, these to go into holes in the 3-foot pieces.

Put together as in Illustration C, having one plank with long end at one end, and other piece with short end at same end; slip in the 3-foot cross-pieces, drive bolts in front and behind the large piece through all the holes but the two for the clevis, having the end of each cross-piece containing the three holes toward front. Get two clevises and put in the remaining holes.

It will require about one-half day's time to make this drag, and cost you nothing for material if you can find the plank and old bolts on the farm. But even if you must purchase these it is well worth having if you only need to use it on driveway and lanes. However, there are thousands of miles of roads that would be improved wonderfully if the farmers along those roads spent but a few hours occasionally in pulling a drag over them.

You can give your road drag longer life by nailing a piece of angle iron on the lower front edge of the plank as shown in Illustration A. Nail a few boards across the top to stand on while using the drag. These can be nailed on the upright planks, from front to back plank, or can be nailed on the cross-pieces, lengthwise. Either place will be all right. You can then ride on it and help to hold it down when extra weight is needed.

Nearly five and a half years have passed since the Armistice. The situation, summed up, shows that Germany's exports in 1927 were less than three-fifths as big as in 1913, measured in the 1913 unit of gold marks. While she'd have made a much better showing if the Ruhr hadn't been occupied, the situation illustrates how a nervous world since the war has been fearing crisis after crisis that never materializes.

Nine out of ten merchants believe "their town is different" and that advertising does not produce results as is done in some other town. All bunk—pure simple bunk! The greatest and most successful advertisers in the world are circus people. Step into a big show print house and you will find their paper and posters are prepared months before the season opens—and it's all alike. They see no difference between towns in Georgia and towns in Vermont; they use the same advertising in New York that is used in California—all towns are all people are very much alike. What's the lesson?

FATIGUE

Fatigue is the result of using muscular or the nervous system to excess. In so-called muscular fatigue certain toxic products formed in the overworked muscles poison the nerves. Those poisons are mainly carbonic acid and lactic acid and probably also a special toxin that the contracting muscles create. Normally that toxin is produced in small quantity and leaves the system through the excretions as rapidly as it forms, but when the production of it continues too long or when some unusual exertion causes it to form in excess the excretory organs cannot dispose of it wholly, and it accumulates in the blood and poisons the nerves. At the same time the muscles and the liver lose more or less of their sugar. Nervous fatigue resulting for mental overwork or from worry or abuse of the organs of sight or hearing is owing to the diminution or to the loss of the nutrient material of the nerve cells.

Fatigue must be distinguished from exhaustion, and both from pure laziness. Nervous exhaustion or neurasthenia is chronic fatigue and occurs when a person has persisted in overwork, chiefly mental, day after day and has refused to heed the warning of excessive fatigue each evening. Moderate fatigue is almost normal and seldom results in exhaustion, though real fatigue, like pain, is always a danger signal to which due regard should be paid. On the other hand to yield on the first sensation of fatigue and to cease work on that account is nothing but laziness. There is a happy mean that must be sought and maintained. Fatigue that yields to a moderate meal of wholesome food and to a night's rest is, especially in the young, healthy fatigue and portends no ill.

Because of the stress of modern life, especially in the cities, many persons habitually work to the point of fatigue, but keep it off with such stimulants as coffee, tea or cocoa. In the case of most persons those anti-fatigue remedies, if taken in moderation, are beneficial. Alcohol, however, though it relieves fatigue, is harmful because of its reaction; a good substitute that is harmless in moderation of course—is sugar in any form, especially chocolate either as a confection or as a beverage. A cup of hot soup or malted milk is also useful in enabling anyone to resist fatigue. Sleep is always the best remedy.

THE NEW SOUTH

Like a faithful worker the South is proud of its achievements. It is not always thus. Time was when visitors to the South very often came back with uncompromising reports of the South's backwardness, its easygoingness. Its people were called unprogressive. Its conditions were unsatisfactory. It evoked more criticism than commendation.

Those days are over. A New South has been born. The South of today compares favorably with other parts of America in its progressiveness, its prosperity, its energy, its enthusiasm. No section of the whole land is devoting more attention to improving its educational facilities, both elementary and advanced. No section is applying itself more diligently to the building of good roads. No section is making more progress in the establishment of new industries. No section is making more headway in developing cheap electric power. No section is more alive to the need for adopting diversified farming. No section is showing more eagerness to build attractive homes. In no section have trunk railroads added so much to their efficiency and strength.

Yes, the New South may well invite inspection, because it can stand inspection. It deserves inspection—the inspection alike of holiday-seekers, home-seekers, workers, and capitalists—and its getting many of them.

IMMIGRATION DISCRIMINATION.

Americans have long boasted that their land is the government offer free and equal opportunities to all the earth's children. They are extremely reluctant to relinquish that sentiment, although they are beginning to recognize that it isn't practical. They have found it convenient to excuse or to ignore the exceptions that the government has made in the cases of Orientals and they have view with complacency the present quota arrangement, which appears not to discriminate. But here and there a voice is raised in protest against any system that will not discriminate, and among the latter is Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, who seems particularly interested in giving British subjects a larger or an unlimited quota because America needs a few years to get on its own feet.

Fully one-third of this nation, after deducting negroes, and inmates of public charitable and penal institutions, are foreign born or children of foreign born parents, representing every nation on earth. To attempt discrimination in favor of any one or any half dozen nations would precipitate serious trouble. There's plenty of room in the world for the European immigrant, but America needs a few years to get on its own feet.

Abraham Lincoln's clothes have recently excited interest, but so far no one has been found who could step into his shoes and find they would fit.

POULTRY

Ducks Grow Quickly and Excel in Laying Ability

In considering the possibilities of the poultry industry, the heavy egg production and quick maturing qualities of the duck should not be overlooked. Ducks will lay more eggs than chickens and will, if properly fed and handled, weigh six pounds each at nine to ten weeks of age.

Unlike chickens, ducks may be housed in very inexpensive houses. One Indiana woman who a few years ago sold over $1,100 worth of ducks up a year, housed them in rail pens covered with straw, at a cost of less than $10 for the entire flock. However, their pens must be well bedded with clean, dry straw, as a duck with cold feet will not lay. A well-drained location should be chosen for duck pens, as low, damp ground soon becomes unsanitary.

In duck raising, as in all other branches of the poultry industry, it is wisest to start with a small number of birds or eggs, learning as you proceed, rather than to plunge in to "make or break," which to the beginner usually means break. A large, well-matured drake mated to five to seven thrifty ducks will produce 60 to 100 ducks, which is about as many as the small poultryman or farmer's wife can care for successfully.

Unless the brooding quarters are warm, ducks should not be hatched too early, as the loss from chilling and cramps will offset the gains from an early market.

Feeding Young Turkeys Is Not Difficult Task

Feeding young turkeys is about the same as feeding young chicks, and as a first feed for the poult they may be given stale bread, soaked in milk and squeezed dry, to a crumbly state, and mixed with finely chopped hard-boiled eggs, cracker crumbs and dandelions. Feed them the food frequently, every two hours for the first couple of days, after which they should be given grain feed of wheat, oats and barley, equal parts, ground together and sufficiently fine for them at this tender age.

After the poult have reached two weeks in age, feed them a mash of equal parts of cornmeal and the ground grain feed, moistened with sweet milk, to which should be added a small amount of finely cut meat, and feed at least three times daily. If confined in runs, or twice daily, mornings and evenings, when allowed to range.

Grit is necessary, and a liberal supply should always be near at hand. Charcoal is excellent for the poult, and at times some should be used in their food.

Free Choice System of Mash Feed for Chickens

A study of the free choice system of mash feeding for chickens made by the United States Department of Agriculture at its experiment farm located at Beltsville, Md., showed that the best results and highest egg production are obtained when hens are allowed to select their own mash continuously. It was found that hens selected a mash composed of 66 parts cornmeal, 26 parts meat scrap, 4 parts wheat bran and 4 parts wheat middlings. This mash gives best results with Leghorns, and a less stimulating mash, containing more bran and ground oats, with less meat scrap, has given better results with general-purpose breeds.

Light Breed Cockerels Should Be Sold Early

Light breed cockerels should be sold early; it seldom pays to feed them to maturity. If brothers are early it pays best to sell the fowls when two or three pounds in weight rather than to keep till heavier. This is especially so when the sexes cannot be separated and where the runs are small, the pullets will soon require all the room and green feed available.

POULTRY POINTS

Never use a fowl that is known to be constitutionally weak in the breeding pen.

Turkeys thrive on sandy soil whereas ducks do best on land which is high and dry.

Hatch bantams in July and August if you want small-sized birds as they should be.

Prevention costs very little labor; inspection often reveals surprises. "Stop, look and think."

It is folly to market your large, choice fowls and use the inferior ones for breeding.

Ducks should be fed a mash of bran, ground corn and ground oats along with a grain mixture of oats, wheat and corn.

All hatching eggs should be taken from a fully matured flock as pullet eggs are usually too small to build husky chicks.

The demand for market ducks and ducks' eggs at good prices is usually limited to the large cities, and is not nearly so general as the demand for chickens or for home eggs.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Proper people are apt to lose their sympathy for the forlorn and unsuccessful, but those who have not succeeded are in touch with all sorrow and failure and misery; and the unsuccessful class is such a large one that to belong to it implies a free masonry with nine-tenths of the world.—Eliza Oras White

SEASONABLE FOODS

Cabbage at this season is crisp, solid and good flavored. It contains the salts and vitamins which will keep our bodies in good working order. Cabbage is not a retiring vegetable, for one knows where it is cooking and cooked that it needs no introduction to the neighborhood. The following are a few good ways of serving this wholesome and odorless vegetable:

Stuffed Cabbage.—Select a hard head, cut away the outside leaves, then soak in salted water to dislodge any insects which may be lurking within. Drain, scoop out the center, being careful not to destroy the shape, and fill with a force meat prepared of a quarter of a pound each of chopped ham and veal, then pound to a pulp, season with salt and pepper, parsley and a grating of nutmeg, a little chopped green pepper, and bind with a half-cupful of bread crumbs and the yolks of two eggs. Tie in a cloth, cover with boiling water, and cook until the cabbage is very tender. Place on a hot chop plate, cut into wedge-shaped pieces to serve.

Cabbage Purée.—This is a soup which will prove an addition to any repertoire of such dishes: Chop a small white cabbage with one onion, one stalk of celery and a tablespoonful of parsley. Cook in boiling, salted water. When very soft drain through a sieve and pound to a pulp. Put over the fire in a saucepan, two tablespoonfuls of butter, and when bubbling hot add two tablespoonfuls of cream, cook until smooth, add a pint of rich milk, season to taste and serve with a beaten egg stirred in the last thing.

Creamed or Ladies' Cabbage.—Cook the cabbage until tender, season highly with salt and pepper and add a generous portion of butter and a handful of crushed crackers. Heat a cupful of rich milk and add to the cabbage which has been shredded and cooked until tender.

Personal Mentions.

Miss Hazel Marie Clow united with the Burlington Baptist church last Sunday.

Poetmaster Hickman spent the first of the week at Cynthia, Harrison county, on business.

Mr. Dameron has moved to the farm he bought of Willis Grant at the forks of Gunpowder creek.

J. O. Bonta was called to the city last Sunday, on account of his sister Mrs. Johnson, who is seriously ill.

Mrs. Ben Stephens, of Ashland, Kansas has been the guest of her sister Mrs. Lorena Cropper for several days.

Mrs. Walton Dempsey, of Erlanger, spent two or three days last week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Marce Riddell.

Mrs. Timothy Westaby, of Covington spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mrs. Laura Martin and daughter, Miss Nell.

Cæter Grant and family of Bullittsville neighborhood, spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Grant's mother, Mrs. Lorena Cropper.

H. W. Shearer wife and daughter, Helen Hall, of Newport spent Saturday night and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hal.

Charles Maxwell, who is in the U. S. Navy, is at home on a furlough visiting his mother, Mrs. Wm. Craddock and other friends and relatives.

R. S. Cowen, J. B. Arvin W. Lee Cropper and J. W. Kelly attended a board meeting of the North Bend Association of Baptist at Florence on Thursday last week.

Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Castleman, of Florence, have returned from Florida where they spent the winter months. Dr. Castleman is now at his office and will make engagements for dental work.

W. W. Green, wife and sister entertained Rev. Wood, J. A. Miller of Erlanger, Dr. W. D. Powell of Louisville, and Mrs. Flossie Campbell-Martin of Bullittsville, Thursday evening for dinner.

Miss Elizabeth Stouffer, State organizer of the Parent-Teachers Association, talked at the court house March 12th, and the Association now has 30 members. The next meeting will be held at the High School on March 28th, at 2:30 p. m.

Saturday afternoon at a meeting held at the Court House, and after hearing an address by E. F. Stallsmith, of Covington on the activities of Boy Scouts, Prof. Scott, J. L. Kite, L. T. Utz Robert Clow B. C. Gaines and Revs. Adams and Gillespie were appointed a committee for the purpose of organizing troop of Boy Scouts, and selecting a Scoutmaster. This is a movement in the right direction and the work of the Boy Scouts will benefit any boy who is a member of the troop.

This is spring.

The mowing season is now over and all have settled down to toil and sow.

Others may mind our business, but to be successful, we have to do the work.

The continued wet weather has delayed the preparation of tobacco plant beds.

Geo. Denler has bought the Chas. Clow farm out on the East Bend pike from Courtney Kelly.

Indications are there will be considerable building done in this county this summer and fall. This is an indication of prosperity.

The Boone County Poultry Association held a very interesting meeting at the Court House on Wednesday afternoon of last week.

Grant Williamson and family have moved from their home in Park Addition to the McCandless farm about a mile from town on the North Bend road.

J. M. Botts slipped and fell while coming out of the door of his residence, last Friday and fractured two of his ribs. Dr. Yelton was called and relieved him of his sufferings.

Oscar Brown, who resides just south of Burlington, will have a sale of personal property next Saturday, March 29th, beginning at 1 o'clock p. m. Mr. Brown and family will move to St. Bernard, Ohio.

J. A. Byrne from over on Gunpowder creek, on what is known as the Cartmill place, will have a sale of personal property on Saturday, March 29, beginning at 12:00 p. m. Mr. Byrne will quit farming and move to the city.

The Boone County Poultry Association made another large shipment of eggs on Wednesday of last week—4500 eggs to Princeton, Grayson county Ky. The members of the Association have filled several big orders since the first of the year.

The farm problem is also the city problem. The spread between the farm and the kitchen amounts to fifteen billions of dollars annually—or more than the original value of the farm products. It is not a farm problem—it is a national problem that must be solved.

The changing of the seasons last Thursday, from winter to spring, surely was a "humdinger." The first day of spring came in on a gale blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour, and by noon a gentle rain began falling and by night one of the heaviest rains of the season had fallen—a grand farewell to ground hog winter.

As Thursday of last week was the day on which the sun crossed the line—the vernal equinox, according to some of the old time weather prognosticators, "the direction from which the wind came on that day, from that direction will be for the next forty days." Keep your radio "tuned" in on this and see how near the old timers hit it.

Fans everywhere are noting the near approach of the base ball season. Manager Berkshire will not go south for training with his aggregation of ball players, as when the time comes they will be in the pink of condition, with an ambition to excel, they will be ranging to and fro anxiously awaiting the call of the umpire. The team that beats Berkshire's 1924 aggregation of ball tossers will have to hump itself. In addition to his splendid battery, is a strong and aggressive infield, while the outer garden will be taken care of by athletes of exceptional fielding ability. Other prospective clubs in the county should "tune" in on this.

A creep, which is a pen with upright bars at one end set far enough apart for the lambs to enter but not large enough to admit adult sheep should be arranged at once if one is not already in use. The first feed given the lambs should be a little bran fed in a clean trough. After the lambs have learned to eat the bran, corn and oats may be added. A good grain ration consists of 2 parts cracked corn, 2 parts crushed oats 1 part wheat bran and 1 part oil or cotton-seed meal. Lambs should begin to nibble at grain when two or three weeks old and the grain should be kept before them after that until ready for market.

"Indication is that lambs will bring a good price this year," says Mr. Miller "for present quotations are high, the crop is short not only in Kentucky but in other states as well and provided a high quality is maintained the prices should remain well up. The spring lamb which is to top the market should be given a grain ration at this time."

"BEAT HIS WIFE UP."

The Recorder has always refrained from meddling with family affairs, but as this is such a good one, we can not resist telling it. Of course, no one will believe it, but they do say that it is an actual fact, that one of those real old mornings last week, Bob Berkshire "beat his wife up" and made the free.

"Macaroni"

The first macaroni which was made in Italy was of diverse and jumbled shapes. It was brought to England about 1760 by certain young men who affected the extraordinary ways and habits which they saw in their travels. The name was transferred to these young fops, who were then known as "macaroni."

TIMELY WARNING

Are you taking it easy, young man? Just attending to your routine duties, half happy, half contented, with an occasional flareup of ambition and of divine discontent?

Let's philosophize—just a minute—a one-minute sermon as it were. Don't drift that way my boy! It's a fierce mistake with a penalty to pay for years.

Enjoy yourself, take time for pleasure. But get an object in life—an ideal—an ideal to steer at. You have two handfuls of soft gray stuff under your hat that is the most wonderful thing in the universe. If untrained it don't lead you nowhere. If trained it can take you to the summit of human greatness. 'Twas made to be trained, and nature commands you to train it.

Read books, read about Big Men, who did big things. They were just ordinary chaps; like you and I. But they trained themselves. First, by being good workers in their line; second, by reading of big men and getting the best they could.

It sure is a Great Game when you highly resolve to make the most of yourself. It's hard devilish hard, if you'll excuse the word. But gee! it's worth it, and then some. Fun? More fun than fishing and catching one a minute.

Why not begin now! Begin by reading Business Building and highly resolve to be a bangup clerk, first class, an expert and a go-getter.—The Tobacco World.

THE ANCIENT SPRING SPORT

It is said to be the thirstiest sure sign of spring weather that the boys are seen playing marbles on the streets. There are perhaps no more widely popular games than those played with marbles. They have been used since the earliest times, and by all peoples of the world, and are exported today to practically every nation in Europe and America, as well as to India, China and Africa.

It is the great democratic sport of boyland, in which all can join for only a few cents. In it many boys get their first taste of competitive sport, and first experience the thrill that comes from ability to do things better than others. Also it is to be feared that there are other ways of winning than by mere skill. Like all sports it needs regulation, but the boy who has missed the annual bouts with his allies and glasses has failed to get some portion of the normal experience of old life.

(By Peter Keegan)
Special Correspondent of the RE-CORDER

GASTON B. MEANS is by far the most popular witness among the Senate investigators. In his two trunks full of the records of his spectacular career, Means claims to have enough information to put most of the officials in Washington behind the bars, and his sensational charges involving members of the Harding Coolidge Cabinet in graft and corruption seems to indicate that the famous private detective is not bluffing. Born on a North Carolina cotton plantation, Means is one of the most picturesque characters in American life. He has been charged with every known crime, but never convicted, and he continues his merry way striking terror to the hearts of those who come beneath his eagle eye. Every Senator who plans an investigation now wants to examine Means—they think he'll put them on the right track.

REGARDLESS of whether anything is proved involving Attorney General Daugherty in this or that scandal, his days in the Cabinet are numbered. Daugherty holds to the belief that nothing will ever be proved against him, but even if the committee fails to find anything in its investigation, the Attorney General will step down and out about April 15th. If damaging evidence is brought out against him in its investigation, President Coolidge may demand his resignation before that time.

INVESTIGATION of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's Internal Revenue bill, being directed by Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, the probe was started by another Jim—Couzens of Michigan. Those who are aware of the ill-feeling that has existed for a long time between Watson and Mellon are expecting some interesting fireworks.

HARDLY ANYONE is taking seriously the statements that certain Senators are in danger of being assassinated because of their attacks upon public officials. The charge was made openly by Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama, who intimated that the bullet which recently hit Senator Greene, of Vermont, was really intended for him. Greene was opposed to have been shot during a pistol battle between bootleggers and federal agents.

WILLIAM S. KENYON, former Senator and now a federal judge, refused to become Secretary of the Navy in the Coolidge Cabinet because he is ailing heavily. Kenyon would like to be Attorney General, and he also has an eye on the Presidency. It is possible that Coolidge would offer him the Attorney Generalship, but so that there would be considerable opposition as Kenyon would go into office with the idea of making the fur fly and that might not be so pleasant to some of the gentlemen on the inside.

THE OIL PROBE is about finished. Senator Walsh and those associated with him in the investigation have concluded that they have accomplished about all that they can, in view of the suits filed in California and Wyoming to cancel the Sinclair and Doherty leases, so they will retire to the background while the Daugherty and Mellon probes occupy the spotlight.

COOLIDGE CONTINUES to keep cool in the face of all the serious charges and allegations that are being hurled at his subordinates in the course of the various investigations at the Capitol. The President is assured by his Campaign managers in the Middle West that there is no doubt that he will be re-elected in Cleveland on the first ballot.

THE CANDIDACY of William G. McAdoo does not appear to be gaining much headway in this part of the country, but the former Secretary of the Treasury declares that he has the Democratic nomination staked. It is too early to forecast the result of the Democratic race, as Senator Underwood is just as optimistic as McAdoo, while in some quarters there is talk of a "dark horse" such as Royal Copeland of New York, Carter Glass of Virginia, or Sam Ralston of Indiana.

The Legislature as usual broke up in a love feast. When the time for adjournment arrived, Republicans and Democrats, factions and cliques, forgot everything in a time of jubilation. Speaker Samuel W. Adams of Covington, was presented with a short of "live, the gift of the House membership and all other House attaches were remembered with presents.

Father Sage Says:

"There are two things the smart, up-to-date woman of today must have to feel she is enjoying a complete, well-rounded life: the first is a baby; the second is a genuine whole-oil lamp to sit in with her interior decorat'n' scheme."

THOUGHT BROADCASTING

When they begin reading our thoughts by radio which is not outside the pale of possibility, according to eminent physiologists, we will have to watch our step.

No longer can we think what we please of our enemies; no longer can we covet our neighbor's earthly possessions; neither can we envy our friends' expensive automobiles, their success in life, or their costly homes.

Folks who thrive on secret hatreds, which they harbor against those they dislike, who bear grudges, in account of fancied wrongs, who store up in their moments alone, hard thoughts about people with whom they disagree—all of these will have to change their method of thinking.

Sounds ridiculous, and it may be improbable, but it's not impossible, that our innermost thoughts may be read as plainly as though we were writing them down on paper.

Some experiments have been conducted along this line. Thought-broadcasting was tried the other day by Northwestern, Antioch and Columbia, universities' professors, and although 150 letters picked at random out of more than 4,000 received, with the exception of two correct replies to one test, were wide off the mark, the physiologists are reported not to be dismayed in the least.

The idea of projecting one's thoughts into the minds of tens of thousands of radio fans is novel, if not altogether practical, and shows what may be developed from radio in the not far distant future.

In one test, a professor pinched the fourth finger of his left hand and then told his invisible audience he had a pain in one of his hands or arms. Two of the 150 letters located the exact spot; nearly eighty per cent of the total placed it in the left arm.

The professor ate a beet and announced he was having a meal of food. Nearly everything except beets was mentioned. The professor then announced he was thinking of a number—664. Not a single answer was correct, although 994 and 496 were plentiful. Then the professor thought of a walrus and asked his audience to think of the animal pictured in his mind. Nearly every animal in a well-stocked zoo was named but not one thought of a walrus. Jebras and elephants led the procession.

All the letters will be opened, indexed and compared in the hope of showing a higher batting average for thought transmission and reception. Whatever the result of the tests, they will not be regarded as conclusive and the experiments will be carried further.

"The Nation indeed, has no business 'helping' States build roads; road building is for the State and the country."

The sentence is quoted from a contemporary. We should, perhaps, be journalistically polite, and say "as teemed contemporary," only we cannot esteem any paper which states as an axiom a concept not proved or of common knowledge.

Why has the Nation "no business helping States?" Why is road building "for the State and the country?" Who ordained that the National Government, which is all of us, should not help several groups of us, which are the States to solve their problems? Who made the law that the Nation should not build its own roads?

There is much question in many minds as to the advisability of Federal aid for road building; whether the policy of the Nation, aiding the States to build roads will work, in the long run, to any better advantage than that of the States aiding the counties to build roads, is yet to be demonstrated. But we can see no reason for saying the Nation "has no business" to do so, if it is its best judgment that it should.

As for road building being properly a State or county function, the government has already made rail and water transportation a matter of national concern. The Nation, not the States, subsidized the first transcontinental railroads, to get them built. The Nation, not the States, improves our waterways. The Nation, not the States built the Panama Canal. The great beauty spots of the continent are national, not State parks. Railroads, waterways, Panama Canal parks, are for the Nation, built by or with the assistance of the Nation. Transportation and some of its objectives are national concerns. Why eliminate roads from the list?

That this Nation will eventually build a national system of national highways is as inevitable as was the canal. It is merely a question of when and how—with "where" more easily determined than either of the others. But the "when" is not so hard to answer. The United States of America will build, own, control and forever maintain its basic trunk line system of national highways, thus bringing good roads everywhere, when and not until when, the people of the United States demand it.

And if there is any truth in signs that demand is now being made in earnest and more strongly every year.

KEEPING IN THE GAME

A prominent farm journal recently made the statement in "Printer's Ink," that during 1921 the sales of a certain seed company fell off so much that the financial condition was critical. The company advertised consistently during 1922, and the income from sales during that season was sufficient to pay off the 1921 deficit and cover the 1922 expenses in addition. That is a remarkable result when you consider that the seed business is a kind of staple thing that would not fluctuate with the ups and downs of trade as much as the majority of lines.

Business concerns are constantly finding that for some cause that they can not determine, they are not quite keeping up with the game. Perhaps they are holding the same volume of sales, but they can see that they are not growing as they should in comparison with the wealth of the community and the advances made by their competitors.

Some people are satisfied if they can just hold their old volume of sales. But that is an unsatisfactory policy in these times, because this purchasing power of a good live town ought to be increasing. Also trade is being drawn from greater distances than formerly, and the merchant that fails to get his share of the increase is not quite holding his own.

The advertising columns of the home newspaper furnish the means by which such problems can be solved. Usually with any house that is supplying good goods, the trouble is primarily that the public does not know of the special value that it is offering.

Or it may not be doing business enough so that its prices are quite down to bedrock. By advertising, the public will learn that such a store is offering many good values that it has not known about. Also, as its trade increases by calling public attention to it, it will be able to offer still better values.

"WET" SOCIETY LEADERS

In some sections of the country many of the so-called "society women" are said to favor the use of liquor, and it might be supposed that some of them are not specially concerned whether it is a "wet" or a "dry" town.

These women who are prominent in social activities have a great influence on the young crowd. It is unfortunate when they fail to support the laws of the land. If they connive at breaking laws they do not like others may break laws that protect the position and property of these influential people. It is a dangerous thing to encourage lawbreaking. You can't tell where it will stop.

"... even as the pulse and water was blessed to the children Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego."—Ivanhoe.
Friar Tuck here refers to one of the earliest recorded bits of dietetic research. More than twenty-six centuries ago, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, directed, that the most promising children among the captives that he had brought home with him from Jerusalem should be given a three-year course in the learning of the Chaldeans. In order that the students should have the benefit of the best food available, he ordered that they be fed with food from his own table—showing that the subject of the proper nutrition of school children is not so new as we sometimes imagine. Four of the Jewish captives thought the king's diet a poor one, and secured permission to live upon what they thought a better diet. At the end of the three years the four had made greater progress in their studies than any of their fellows, and were in better physical condition than any of those who had eaten the prescribed diet.

Interesting as this experiment was, it by no means settled the question as to what constitutes a correct diet.

Some decades ago, Voit, working on the subject of metabolism, proved that for every gram of protein eaten there must result a production of 4.1 calories of heat; for every gram of fat, a production of 9.3 calories of heat; and so on. At once the enthusiasts thought the diet question settled for all time. All you needed to do, they said, was to determine how many calories of heat you needed per day, and then eat enough to produce that many calories. An egg would produce 100 calories of heat and an apple would produce 100 calories—you could eat either. Then somebody discovered that the diet must be balanced—so much protein, so much fat, and so much starch. Still later, some one discovered a vitamin—they have found four of them up to date—and proved that one could not hope to remain in good health unless the food eaten contained enough vitamins. Just at present the correct diet seems to be back where it was a quarter century ago—we eat more lettuce and less cold soup, more spinach and less dandelion and pokeweed, more citrus fruit and less home preserved fruit juices—but the essential values are the same.

In view of our present voluminous writings on the subject of diet, it is interesting to turn back to the times of Socrates and find out what that philosopher thought a proper diet for a genuine and healthy people. He made the basis of such a diet bread and cakes of wheat and barley, and added "something to relish their food: salt, no doubt, and olives and cheese, together with the country fare of boiled onions and cabbage. We shall also eat before them a dessert, I imagine, of figs and pears and nuts; and they may have raisin-cakes and beehives at the fire, taking wine with their fruit in moderation."

You can fix the dumplings you want but the men folks like something that "sticks to the ribs" and they find a better dish than good old Southern dumplings? "Course everybody 'em their own a hobby but if you'd like to try my way with a good chicken or beef stew I'm sure you won't be disappointed. The recipe is simple. You mix 2 teaspoons of butter with 2 cups of sifted self-rising flour with your finger tip. Then add 1 cup of meat, meat, meat gradually. Cut with a biscuit cutter and steam 15 minutes or drop from your spoon into the stew. They have a fine flavor."

Crust for a Good Meat Pie.
A nice change in the menu is to have a meat pie occasionally. I always find it kinda surprises the folks and they eat it with relish. There are always bits of chicken or pork or beef left over and carrots, potatoes or peas to go in it. But the real secret of a delicious meat pie is to get a firm but tender crust. Now here's the way I make my meat pie crust: I work 3 tablespoons of butter (or one each of butter and lard) with my finger tips into 2 cups of self-rising flour and then slowly add 3 cup of sweet milk and mix with a silver knife. Roll mixture out to 3/4 inch in thickness. Fill a baking dish with cubes of meat moistened with gravy. Cover the top with crust, putting deep grooves in the center and bake in a hot oven.

BLUE LAWS AND THE RISING GENERATION

Laboring on Sunday is a heinous offense in many parts of the down East commonwealth. In certain towns of Pennsylvania, it is esteemed a sinful and un-Christian act to wear a collar and tie to church; some of the extremely pious will have it a mortal sin to wear such gaudy symbols of pride and worldliness on their clothing as buttons.

In the South there are many towns so rigorously righteous that they will not tolerate persons of another denomination in the vicinity. Methodists accordingly have a hard time in a Baptist neighborhood, and vice versa.

Not long ago, a New England court fined a man for driving nails on the Sabbath. It was only a few years ago, comparatively speaking, when persons who violated tradition by riding bicycles to church were looked on with unconcealed suspicion. The temper that was raised when motion pictures first were shown on Sunday has not yet ceased its thundering along the horizon. Many communities still ban film shows altogether on Sunday.

Sunday motoring is a form of pleasure that occasionally has been forbidden, and many forms of sport are under a ban in various parts of the United States, the nature of pleasures forbidden being dependent on geographical location and local sentiment, to a great extent.

Sunday newspapers are barred out of parts of North America, regardless of the fact that most all the work is done on Saturday, while the Monday paper is prepared on Sunday.

The sentiment of one generation with regard to what ought to be forbidden is usually far different from that of the generation that precedes or follows. But all are alike in their inability to see beyond the taboo, for whatever is "forbidden" to the elders is almost certain to be the thing favored above all else by the rising generation.

RAILROADS AND INDUSTRY

Commenting on Henry Ford's profitable conduct of his 455 miles of railway, the claim is made by railroad experts that his personal ownership gives him an unfair advantage over rivals and increases his power as a competitor. This is unquestionably a sound argument, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Ford has made every effort to obtain permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to reduce the rates.

The Constitution of Pennsylvania provides that "no incorporated company doing the business of a common carrier shall directly or indirectly, prosecute or engage in mining or manufacturing articles for transportation over its own works."

The commodity clause of the Hepburn Act and the Sherman anti-trust law have frequently been invoked to prevent unified ownership of industrial and transportation companies.

The U. S. Steel Corporation, owns or leases some 3,500 miles of track over which its own ore is hauled and it has been shown that it gives that corporation an advantage of over $3.00 in assembling ore, coke and limestone sufficient to make a single ton of pig iron. It has been admitted that this differential is a weapon that could, if it chose ripe and destroy competitors. The Big Five packers do not own their own railroads, but through community of interests they control them. The Federal Trade Commission has stated that Big Five cars were hauled an average of nearly 81 miles per day while cars of competitors made only 54.5 miles.

The oil trust control gives it an unfair differential. The Interstate Commerce Commission admits its liability to prevent railroad and pipeline discrimination. The President of the Illinois Central once declared: "Tell me how to enforce the Ten Commandments and I will tell you how to stop discrimination."

We are living in an industrial age in which transportation is so vital a question that it should be made accessible to all industrial producers on equal terms, without favoritism or discrimination. Just how such a condition is to be brought about is yet a question—but a question that will soon have to be solved.

HOW THE COUNTRY WOMEN HELD

If one could get a record of all the enterprises that the women of Boone county have carried on, it would make an inspiring story of service and faith. After these women folks have cooked the meals and done the laundry work, they have the house cleaned, and looked after the children, some folks may think their work is done. Not usually.

Many of them have raised poultry, tended gardens, sold fruits and jellies, done their own painting and papering, made over clothes, for the children, sold cooked foods, done sewing for neighbors etc, etc. The people in the cities who are so fearful of the overworking should look at what a lot of our country women have done. And not many of them would give up the satisfactions of a country home. They are wonderful folks, these women of our country towns.

What has become of the good old-fashioned day when you used to get invited out for dinner after church?

"Dollar down and a dollar a week" generally keeps a man down the rest of his days on earth.

TURN ME OVER

PREVENTING DIPHTHERIA IN THE PRE-SCHOOL CHILD

A score or more years ago diphtheria was the most feared of all the diseases of childhood. Children died by the thousands each year from this scourge, to prevent the very name diphtheria was synonymous with death. Hope came with the discovery of anti-toxin and for a decade there was a rapid fall in the death rate from diphtheria. In 1913 it was discovered that children could be immunized against diphtheria by the injection of a substance called toxin-antitoxin. The administration of toxin-antitoxin is a simple procedure, a sterile syringe and needle is used for the three injections which are given a week apart. It has been conclusively demonstrated that this method is harmless and that permanent immunity from diphtheria results.

Children up to 6th month have an inherited immunity, after this time all children should be given toxin-antitoxin so that their immunity will be permanent. There is practically no reaction from the injections in pre-school children—what parents need have no fear in immunizing their children. The largest number of deaths from diphtheria occur in children under five years, if all children could be immunized before then diphtheria would cease to be one of the chief causes of infant death. More cases of diphtheria occur between the years of five to nine but the death rate at this period is much less.

Before giving school children toxin-antitoxin a test called the Schick test is made to see if they retain their inherited immunity. It is not necessary to apply this test to pre-school children as practically all of this age are highly susceptible to diphtheria. Protect your baby and pre-school child by taking him to your doctor and having him immunized with toxin-antitoxin.

RIGHT THINKING AND WILL POWER

A London magistrate recently asserted that there is no such thing as a bad boy; he may do much wrong under the influence of "the gang" and to "show off," but no boy is "inherently vicious."

It is an open question if this argument does not result in more harm than good. Every boy has a natural or inherent sense of right and justice. But this does not mean that when he is given to being a bad actor, he is a good boy.

The great thing is to make boys and girls know that they can be good if they will; that there is nothing but will be good needed; if this is "inherent" goodness, then they have it. But with this knowledge should go that other conviction that capacity for goodness is latent; that what counts is motive and conduct; that everyone to others is in personality and influence conditions on what he or she does. Remove all chances of evil outside the boy, and he will not be free from temptation to do badly at times; this is the condition; that sharp definition of right and wrong, determined by something other than inherent goodness, is necessary to make boys good men. Nine out of ten boys live by example, and the most important example is in their own homes.

THE PIE EATERS

The people of Los Angeles are said to consume 36,500,000 pies each year, or 182,500,000 pieces of pie if each one is cut into five pieces. If Los Angeles is typical of the country, the American people probably consume 200,000,000,000 pieces of pie in a year. Great is the Pie Belt.

Dieticians may say that the average pie is too rich for digestion, and that more of the substantial should be substituted for this form of dessert. But a good chunk of pie does wonders to make a man feel satisfied with life, and at least that is the world.

Many of our good causes have been promoted and vast sums of money raised, at dinners where the attendants were maneuvered into a giving mood, as the result of an appetizing course of pie. But unfortunately many people do not know how to eat pie rationally. They pile it in a heap, they have eaten all their stomach can digest, and dyspepsia results. The thing to do is to leave ample room in one's inlides for a rational piece.

EARLY SPRING LAMB PROS-
CPETS

A considerable decrease from last year in the market supply of early spring lambs in April, May and June is indicated by present conditions in the principal early lambing areas according to a report issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. On the other hand the supply in July and August promises to be larger than that of last year.

The greater part of the supply of spring lambs in April and May comes usually from California, Arizona, Kentucky and Tennessee. Conditions in all these states except Arizona are less favorable than last year as regards production and it is possible that the foot and mouth situation in California may cut off all supplies of live lambs at Eastern markets from there.

In June early lambs from the Corn Belt begin to move in volume and there are usually some receipts of early lambs from Idaho and Oregon. Conditions both in the Corn Belt and in the Northwest indicate a larger lamb crop than last year and with favorable spring weather the June movement from those areas may be larger than that of last year.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor's flock of White Leghorns made a slight gain, and averaged 10.7 eggs per hen in a flock of 300. The gain from this flock was reduced from normal thru being moved from one farm to another.

SCRAP TOBACCO PAYS SALARIES OF LEADERS OF BIG BURLEY POOL

Economies put into practice by the management of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association have resulted in the saving of many thousand dollars, according to a statement given out by the publicity department of the Association at Lexington, Ky. Even the scrap tobacco from receiving plant floors, for which the growers formerly received nothing, is swept up carefully cleaned of foreign matter and sold for the benefit of the farmers.

The return from this source alone on the 1922 crop as sufficient to pay the salaries of the chief executive officers of the Association, including the President and General Manager, the Director of Warehouses, the Secretary and Treasurer the three salaried members of the Executive Committee, and leave balance of $12,000 in the Association treasury from that source.

Re-drying of leaf tobacco in the Association's own re-dryers during 1922, it also was stated, resulted in a saving of sufficient amount of money as compared with the cost of re-drying in outside machines, to pay for all the re-dryers installed by the Association.

WALLACE H. WHITE

Congressman Wallace H. White of Maine has been made chairman of a house committee to investigate the United States shipping board.

PREVENT LOSSES OF BABY CHICKS.

The greatest losses among baby chicks are due to common white diarrhoea which can be prevented by proper care of the chicks during the first week or two after hatching according to J. E. Humphrey, poultry specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Chilling, overheating, overfeeding or feeding too soon after hatching are the four most common causes of the disorder.

The contagious diarrhoea, or bacillary white diarrhoea occurs only rarely in Kentucky. The common form, which is frequently mistaken for bacillary diarrhoea is the cause of the largest share of the losses. As diarrhoea is found in proper care if the disease breaks out in the flock the poultryman may know that his chicks have been either overfed, chilled, overfed, or fed too soon. In this as in other diseases prevention is of first importance; if the chicks are given all the sour milk or buttermilk they will drink, it will aid in prevention.

If the disease breaks out a solution of bichloride of mercury 1 to 4,000 will keep the disease in check and is made by dissolving 7.3 grains of bichloride of mercury in two quarts of drinking milk or water. This treatment is given for three or four days, and then omitted. If the disease appears again it is repeated and a wooden trough or a crock should be used as the measure will rest holes in a metal vessel.

Special care must be taken when the baby chicks arrive to give them good quarters. The brooder house should be free from drafts and chopped clover or alfalfa hay and sand should be spread underneath the brooder. If the brooder is started one or two days before the chicks arrive it will be easy and the room will be warm. The temperature of the chicks when they come from the incubator is between 98 and 100 degrees and the brooder should be kept between 95 and 98 degrees during the first week. The second week the temperature can be dropped to 90 to 95 degrees and about the third to between 85 and 90 degrees. The chicks are the best guide as to heat required; if they spread out well beneath the brooder the heat is about right, if they huddle they are cold. A piece of ordinary hardware cloth about eight to ten inches high tacked on supports and set upright around the edge of the canopy will help keep the chicks near enough to the brooder at night and prevent their being chilled. After the first week the chicks should be let outside on every good day.

When hens are used, the same general directions are recommended: boxes large enough to make good quarters are needed and after the first week the chicks should be let out every day when the weather permits, but the hen should be confined.

"Do not feed until 48 to 72 hours old," the specialist says, "and the first feed should be sour skim milk or buttermilk. After the first feed in addition to sour milk, give chick grain, consisting of equal parts of fine cracked corn and cracked wheat or oats or a good commercial mixture. Feed five times a day an amount which the chicks will clean up in 15 minutes."

Preparations are being made by the legal advisors of the Kentucky Good Roads Association to test the constitutionality of the $75,000,000 bond issue law which went into effect when signed by the Governor last Friday.

This step is being taken in accordance with the wishes of the Governor, and in a short time necessary action will be brought in the Frankfort Circuit Court. On account of the importance of this litigation, every effort will be made to secure a decision as soon as possible. After a decision is rendered in the circuit court, the case will be promptly carried to the Supreme Court for final determination.

DOINGS IN KENTUCKY.

The 1924 session of the Kentucky Legislature has passed into history. It closed with the most strenuous week of its career and with as exciting a finish as any Legislature has known. Not until the closing moments were the fates of two of the most important measures that came before it made known. These were the bills intended to oust Joseph P. Byers, Commissioner of Public Institutions under the State Board of Charities and Correction, and the bill abolishing the positions of oil inspector in Kentucky.

The fight over the anti-Byers bill was waged through the final days with the fortunes of war seeming to favor first one side and then the other. The bill, which was held by its opponents to be an attempt to nullify the State Board of Charities and Correction, and which has been acclaimed by both parties as the crowning achievement of recent years in state advancement, and stirred feeling throughout the state. This contest over it was the most spirited that has been witnessed in the legislative halls in many years.

In summing up the record of the Legislature the outstanding fact is the success of Governor William J. Fields' legislative program and the endorsement of the policies for which Governor Fields and the Democratic party in Kentucky stand. The two most important measures advocated by the Governor, the submission of the $75,000,000 bond issue to carry out his plan of state development, and the bill abolishing the oil inspectors in the state, were adopted. The oil inspector measure carried in the closing hours, and only after Governor Fields had appeared in person before the Senate and urged its adoption.

The defeat of the anti-Byers bill also was due in large measure to the influence of the Governor. The primary campaign of the late J. Campbell Cantrill and the platform on which he won the nomination for Governor prevailed in the Assembly with respect to two important matters. Mr. Cantrill had declared against legislation intended to destroy racing and the breeding industry, and against a tonnage tax on coal production as calculated to hurt the coal industry and retard its development. The Legislature rejected anti-racing legislation by a decisive vote and the coal tax measures never made enough progress to count.

Gov. Fields had supported, also, legislation to relieve the tax burdens of the people. This resulted in a reduction of 10 cents in the tax rate on the $100 valuation of real estate which is cut from 40 cents to thirty cents, and in the exemption of live stock from county taxation.

Other laws of general interest enacted by the 1924 General Assembly include one providing for lifetime registration in all cities of Kentucky of more than 5,000 population; increasing the gasoline tax to three cents a gallon and increasing truck licenses; the total adding approximately $1,800,000 to the state road fund; reorganizing the State Department of Highways to make the terms of the four Commissioners begin in February instead of July, providing for the employment of a secretary at $4,000 a year paying the Commissioners $15 a day when in service, not to exceed $4,000 a year and making the Governor an ex-officio member without a vote, and providing the Court of Appeals three new Commissioners for four years to relieve the congestion of the donkey.

Governor Fields was thoroughly satisfied with the work of the Legislature. He expressed himself when he appeared before the Senate on the last night of the session to urge rejection of a substitute which would have defeated the oil inspectorship bill and permitted the inspector to flourish for two years more at least. The Governor's plea was accepted, the Senate reelected from the substitute and the originally House bill abolishing the oil inspectorship entirely was passed by a vote of 81 to 3.

In his address to the Senate the Governor said: "No Legislature in my time has adjourned with a more glorious record of constructive legislation than the record of this Legislature already is, but the task will not be completed if this Legislature fails to relieve the people of the burden of this useless expense. The question before you is, 'Shall the Legislature adjourn and leave these 120 useless offices?'"

The oil inspectorships that were destroyed as a result of the Governor's effort were the greatest securities in Kentucky. The law provides an inspector for each county. They were paid fees according to the number of gallons of oil inspected. The oil companies paid the inspector was not required to report to any officer was of no matter to him.

And more and more gasoline was used the fees of the inspectors soared, although in the smaller counties they were not enough to make the office worth while. There are inspectors today in 88 counties. All their offices will close to exist June 17, 90 days after the law was enacted. In the larger counties the office pays well, and the 38 inspectors last year drew $169,000.

The juiciest plum of all the inspectorships, and that which gave the greatest interest to the fight, is that of Jefferson county. The inspectors in Louisville are so heavy that the inspector receives, it is estimated, as high as $60,000 a year.

The inspector who loses out is Roscoe Searcy, brother of Chesley Searcy, Republican leader of Louisville. The loss of this gold mine is a severe jolt to the G. O. P. organization in Louisville. Chesley Searcy was in Frankfort and made a hard fight to save the fat for the family, but couldn't quite make it.

Two things worked against him, in addition to the Governor's activity. One was that the Barkley Democrats felt that the Searcy machine had not been friendly to Cantrill in the Democratic primary. They were not averse to hitting Mr. Searcy and his followers. Another was that the Democratic advocates of the anti-Byers bill felt that certain Republicans had not helped as they might have done toward the passage of this measure. They took their spite out on the Searcy family.

Roscoe Searcy gives Gov. Fields credit for bringing about the abolishment of his office. "I don't think it would have gone through," he said, "had not Governor Fields appeared before the session in person at the last minute. I believe we had them whipped up to that time."

Roscoe Searcy proved a game loser for a man who is being ripped out of a $60,000 place. "In politics," he said, "you must take the bitter with the sweet."

THE DANCE

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

ROGERS is a friend of mine who often, to relieve his feelings, tells me his troubles. He has a pleasant, agreeable wife, though of course neither of them is under twenty-one. He has kept his interest in society and he and Mrs. Rogers occasionally are invited out to chaperon a party of young people at a local club. He wasn't exactly sore when he related to me his last experience, for he has a sense of humor, but he was just a little disappointed and hurt. This is how he told it to me:

One of his young acquaintances breezed into his office one day last spring and said, "We're going to have a dance at the club Friday night; can't you and Mrs. Rogers come over?" "I'll ask her," he replied. He did, and although she wasn't very well, she consented to go to please him, and he sent word to the fellows that they would be there.

When they got to the house on the evening of the dance things were in progress. They were recognized by some of the fellows, one of whom went with them to the dressing room. Later they found their way downstairs and sat in a cold, dark corner, as it seemed they were expected to do.

The dancing went on quite as if they were not there—quite proper dancing in the main. Few of the fellows spoke to them, and fewer still introduced the young women whom they had with them. Most of the boys with whom they were unacquainted looked at them as though they were strangers and some of the older men even stared at them as they passed by, but gave no signs of recognition. Nobody asked them, though they both enjoyed dancing, to dance, and between dances the room in which they were sitting was pretty well deserted except for their presence.

As time went on it appeared that there was punch or cakes or sandwiches being served somewhere in the house, but no one offered to "ave them, and as they were not quite famished they did not go on an exploring expedition themselves.

About eleven o'clock Mrs. Rogers decided that she would be more comfortable at home, and just as likely there to meet new acquaintances as where she was, so they announced their departure to one of the fellows and threaded their way alone through the dancers to the dressing room.

"I hope you've enjoyed the dance," one of the fellows shouted as they were pushing their way out.

"It was wonderful," Rogers responded, "and Mrs. Rogers is going to be just crazy to come to the next one."

"Don't they know any better?" Mrs. Rogers asked, as she was warming her feet before her own pleasant grate fire, "or do they just think we don't?"

CUT IN ACREAGE OF TOBACCO IS ADVICE OF-MARKET EXPERT.

Existence of Over-Supply Is Indicated By Present Conditions, Says Jeannet, in Urging Burley Growers To Plant Other Crops.

Lexington, Ky.—Because existing conditions indicate an over-supply of Burley tobacco it is advisable according to O. B. Jeannet, Chief of the Section of Markets of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, for farmers in the Burley district to replace some of the regular tobacco acreage with other crops. The amount of tobacco in the hands of dealers and manufacturers on January 1, 1924 was over 50,000,000 lbs. more than a year ago and in addition estimates indicate that there was produced in 1923 over 50,000,000 more pounds than in 1922.

"According to Government crop estimates there were produced 326,116,000 pounds of Burley tobacco in 1923," Mr. Jeannet says. This is a larger crop than that estimated for any previous year. The production in 1922 was estimated at 278,801,000 pounds. True as last year's crop was over 50 million pounds, or about 18 per cent, larger than that of the previous year. The acreage devoted to Burley tobacco in 1923 was 15 per cent larger than that in 1922, the total last year being 389,800 acres and that of the year before being 321,100 acres. The estimates indicate that about 13,000 more acres were used for the Burley crop last year than for the big crop of 1920 and that the production exceeded that of 1920 by about 11 million pounds. The Burley district was not so large in the production of a large crop in 1923. This production of fine crop in the Carolinas and Virginia last year was larger than that of any previous year except 1920. A considerable proportion of this type was used in this country in the manufacture of cigarettes and tobacco.

"Dealers and manufacturers are required by law to report quarterly to the U. S. Census Bureau the amount of leaf tobacco held by them. These reports showed a total of 334,126,306 pounds of Burley tobacco in the hands of dealers and manufacturers on January 1, 1924. This is about 50 million more pounds than was reported on Jan. 1, 1923, when the total was 282,731,014 pounds and also more than the amount reported on the corresponding date of any previous year.

"The estimates of production and the reports of stocks on hand both show that there has been a decided increase in available supplies of Burley tobacco. This increase is greater than the expansion which has taken place in consumption. During 1923, there were manufactured about 64 billion cigarettes in the U. S. compared with a total of about 52 billion in 1922. The amount of tobacco manufactured during 1923 showed comparatively little change from the amount reported for 1922. More tobacco leaf is used in the manufacture of tobacco and snuff than for cigarette purposes. About 196 million pounds of leaf were used for cigarettes and over 130 million lbs. for tobacco and snuff during 1922. This, of course, includes all types of tobacco leaf used for these purposes and not Burley alone.

"The interest in marketing is wide spread at present. This is as it should be because agriculture cannot expect to be successful unless attention is paid to its marketing problems. Production and marketing are inseparably linked, however, and one big problem encountered by farmers is the adjustment of production to market requirements. Under existing conditions it would appear advisable for the Burley district to substitute other crops in place of a part of the tobacco acreage. The Burley tobacco growers know from experience what comes in the wake of an over supply. The time to avoid such a situation is before the crop is planted when a choice of enterprises may be made."

THE HERD INSTINCT

The father of a family that was trying to pick out birthday presents for one of their children of adolescent age, said the other day that it was difficult to find presents that the young crowd considered strictly according to prevailing style. "The only way to tell what they want," said the father "would be to have the whole bunch of their schoolmates file through the house, and then we could see just what the others were doing."

The young crowd claim to be more independent than the older generation. But actually they follow herd instinct more closely than their elders did. It is interesting to see how quickly some new style of dress or manners will sweep thru a school or college when some few leaders take it up.

YOUR LUXURIES IN LIFE

Within the memory of our grand parents time was when man pined, cleaned and lighted the street before his own door; education was conducted at home; the library was a priestly possession, and society offered little save the administration of justice. Today society protects man's life and property; it safeguards his health; it overrules his house construction; protects him from fire; educates his children; supplies them with books and often with food; offers him a fine library; inspects his food; supplies nurses and hospitals as well as cemetery for burial; protects him and his children by factory law; delivers water in every room; after furnishes light and power; and heat and in countless ways contributor to the comforts of life.

And all these intrusions into the field of private business have involved no less of freedom to the individual, rather it has added to his freedom, and at a cost that is hardly noticeable.

It is not long since housewives universally dreaded Monday, "wash day." They had to rise with sun, toil over a wash tub. Tuesday came ironing. Now the washing machine or laundress relieves the housewife of most of this burden.

So it goes all through daily life. We merely pick up the phone and presto, an organization of specialists is at our disposal to perform tasks that seriously inconvenienced our ancestors who had to do the work themselves.

The Jack-of-all-trades used to be an important individual. Today the specialist rules. Everything is specialization. Life's tasks have been scientifically divided. Each individual has some one specialty institutions that develop. Success requires specialization. Increasingly so as the years slip by. Obviously a youth must select his career—the line he wants to follow—with greater care than in the old days.

HOME

"Stay away at home, my heart, and rest; Home-keeping hearts are happiest. For those that wander they know not where Are full of trouble and full of care, 'Tis stay at home is best."—Longfellow.

The love of home, be it associated with a mansion, a humble cottage, a tiny city apartment or indeed with any abode which might be called by that name, lives in the thought of all. This love has often enabled people to accomplish that which they otherwise might not have been able to perform. It is related that Jenny Lind, the "Swedish Nightingale," once when in a theater was asked to remember her program; but the thought of home prompted her to sing "Home Sweet Home." Her audience was deeply impressed; she regained her composure, and was able to proceed. John Howard Payne, too, was far away when the thought of home and loved ones enabled him to write that same "Home Sweet Home" which is so dearly loved.

The true sense of home is a state of consciousness where happiness dwells. Real, true happiness is found where purity abides. Individuals may be isolated as they desire, inhabit dwellings which suit their fancy, and still be restless and unhappy, because they have not attained that mental peace which brings contentment and happiness.

The following house motto is typical of a right mental sense in regard to home: The beauty of the house is order. The blessing of the house is contentment. The glory of the house is hospitality.

Homes that radiate love and good cheer are a forerunner of heaven. Those whose thoughts are good and pure will render unto all loving-kindness. They will do good, not only to those near and dear, but to others, finding added happiness and joy in another's good. To keep our home—our consciousness—pure and happy, we must not wonder after strange gods,—false pleasures and desires, but most constantly guard against unwholesome or disagreeable thoughts.

USING THE EXPERIENCE OF OTHERS.

The business men in the cities make a specialty nowadays of studying the achievements of other communities and imitating them. If a progressive thing is done in one city it is likely to be soon imitated all over the country.

The country towns should be equally alert to pick up progressive ideas. Some country people are inclined to say, when it is suggested that they should try out an idea that has worked well in rural communities in other states, that conditions are entirely different in their home section, and that the same idea could not be worked. Country life will make much more rapid progress if such ideas are readily accepted and quickly spread from one locality to another.

1,500,000 POUNDS OF SCRAP TOBACCO IS SOLD FOR $150,000

Association Growers for Third Time Realize Considerable Sum From Source Which Formerly Yielded No Return To The Producer.

The Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association has sold 1,500 hogheads of scrap tobacco—about 1,500,000 pounds at ten cents a pound according to announcement made by President and General Manager James C. Stone of the Association.

This is the third time the growers have received a substantial sum from this source, as the scrap from reeling plant and re-dryer floors in a considerable number of cases is made available return to the organized growers. Last year, according to statements of officials, this return was large enough to pay practically all the executive salaries of the Association.

THE GREATEST POLITICAL CONTEST

The real political battle this year will be for control of the United States Senate. The present Senate is composed of 51 Republicans, including the LaFollette group, 43 Democrats and 2 Farmer Laborites. Thirty-three of these seats are to be filled at the coming election and already the issues overshadow the presidential election. The states in which the battle will wage hottest are New Jersey, Delaware, West Virginia, Colorado, Rhode Island, Kansas, New Mexico and New Hampshire. In all of which Republican vacancies occur this year, and Massachusetts and Colorado, states in which Democrats are standing for re-election. Montana will probably re-elect Senator Walsh. Inevitable, though not probable, turnovers may also occur in Illinois, Oregon, South Dakota and Oklahoma.

Idaho will undoubtedly re-elect Senator Borah and Wyoming will again honor Senator Warren. A great effort will be made to defeat Brookhart in Iowa. If Governor Davis is nominated by the Democrats of Kansas, Senator Capper win or lose will know that he has been thru a fight. Senator Borah will be nominated in New Mexico, and probably Simmons, Senator Sheppard will probably be re-elected from Texas, though the Klan will put up the bitterest political fight in the history of that state. The same influences will affect the re-election of Senator Ransdell of Louisiana. Shields is faced with a fight for the nomination in Tennessee, but the chances favor him. The Republicans and Klan of Oklahoma hope to defeat Senator Owen if he decides to stand for re-election. Senator Norris has determined to stand for re-election in Nebraska and will probably win out. Senator McNary will have a fight for the Republican nomination in Oregon.

Only seven Senators are considered assured of re-election and election—Jones (R) Oregon; Simmons, (D) North Carolina; Glass (D) Virginia; Fernald (R) Maine; Harris (D) Georgia; Couzens (R) Michigan; Robinson (D) Arkansas, and Magnus Johnson (F.L.) of Minnesota.

QUITTERS NOT WANTED.

Looking through the "Help Wanted" advertisements in a farm paper the other day, it was interesting to see how many of these farmers advertised "No quitters wanted." Judging by the number who mentioned their aversion to quitters, people of that kind must be numerous.

There is an increasing number of people who are frightened by hard work. They may think they would like farm life, but when they are asked to put in a real day's work of muscular effort, they get tired. After a few days they feel all in. As lazy man quits at that, and some men may be fearful they will do themselves physical injury.

But if an able bodied man will keep on, even if he does get tired, he will find his strength growing day by day. His experience will be a benefit to him.

Senator Norris and Senator Ashurst have introduced bills providing for a constitutional amendment to change the date of inaugurating Presidents to the third Monday in November following their election. In November and that the Congress elected in November shall convene in regular session on the first Monday in January, instead of thirteen months later as is now being done. The proposition to make the term of the President six years and not eligible for re-election, will be presented as a separate amendment.

Nature has armed every man and every woman with some faculty, some quality, some force which enables them to do one thing better than any one else. Have you determined on your particular forte in life.

PASTE THIS IN YOUR HAT

You paid $68 to run the local state and federal government in 1922. Directly or indirectly it came out of your pocket. The people earned $65,000,000,000 but the government took away $7,000,000,000.

Where did it go. The cost of the Federal Government for each man, woman and child was $29 last year. As recently as 1916, it was only $7. The war is not over; each one of us pays $10 a year interest instead of the pre-war 21 cents, and each person is loaded with $200 of the huge federal debt. Among the immense government departments, the Veterans' Bureau takes 18 per cent of the expenditures, close behind the Navy Department with 21 per cent, and the War Department with 20 per cent.

State and local governments got $39 of the $68. The average citizen paid 183 per cent more to the state in 1922 than in 1912; 141 per cent more to the country, and 80 per cent more to the city. As for these divisions, plus the federal government, saddle each worker in the U. S. with $780. Every eleven of these workers over sixteen are supporting one public employee—and it is costing our many wage earners over ten years of age $91 to support these 3,400,000 public employees. How can it be stopped.

BACHELOR TAXATION

The authorities of Stollberg, Saxony recognizes the equality of sexes to the end that woman has a right to ask a man to marry. The legislation also imposes a tax on bachelors or bachelors for their freedom, a form of taxation that has frequently been urged in the United States.

The record on bachelor taxation goes back many centuries. Sometimes the method of it has been cruel, as when in Sparta, where justice was traditionally rigorous, it was so that a man unmarried after a certain age might not behold the gymnastic exercises.

The Romans enacted a law that no unmarried man under 60 years could take possession of a legacy until, within a specified time, he had taken to himself a wife. Now and again the bachelor has been taxed both in France and in England. The hands of all womankind and all married men have been against him. But in the Saxony law there is the suggestion of fair play and equal responsibility for the single state. As to whether it is right in all respects is really a matter of custom, on which much remains to be said on both sides.

THE BEST THING

A local school teacher, a few days ago, noted her pupils what they regarded as the best and most valuable thing in this community. The children wrinkled their brows, looked perplexed and some of them answered the question. But they were all wide of the mark.

The teacher indicated the answers were wrong as each pupil made his or her supreme effort to find the correct answer to the knotty problem. Finally, the teacher, when they were all expected and very much excited over what really was the best thing in this community, told them that they themselves were the best and most valuable.

It was somewhat of a jolt for little folks, especially those with a keen imagination, who have conjured up many wonderful things. The teacher's answer brought them back to earth, but it gave them a sense of their importance in the world.

It should also give every person living in the community, regardless of whether they have children in the public schools, something to think about, when we think along lines of community development.

For we can not build for the future any better than by making better boys and girls who will become better men and women and make this a better community in the next generation.

We can build, for the future, not alone by teaching children at home how to live right, but by supporting the teacher, the school authorities and the whole public school system to the best of our ability and to the limit of our means.

We can not hope for our community to rise any higher in the future than our public school system.

The fifth oldest known living thing on earth, and the third oldest in North America, is a giant cypress tree in what is known as the Edenborn Brake, in Winn Parish, Louisiana. The age of the tree has been placed at 2,500 years by Professor Herman Cehrenk of St. Louis and it is accordingly the oldest and it is in longevity only by the Santa de Tule cypress, near Oaxaca, Mexico, 5,000 to 6,000 years old; the dragon tree at Oratava Islands of Tenerife 4,500 years old, the redwood tree California 4,000 years old and the haub tree Senegal 4,000 years old. The tree was 600 years old when Christ was born. It was over 3,000 years old when Columbus discovered America. Fear much and you won't go far.

POPULAR SPRING

If a vote had to be taken as to which is the most popular season of the year, the majority would be cast for spring. Christina Rossetti wrote: There is no time like spring, When life's alive in everything, Something in human nature responds to this feeling of swelling life. There is a sense of something about to happen, of a new accession of power and vigor to come. It stirs human hope, and people who have passed through sorrowful days instinctively feel that brighter times are coming.

The expanding but is a sign that power is pushing up from some unseen source in the root of that tree. It is there waiting to make itself felt as soon as the sunlight and rain shall be ready to make it fruitful. So there is offered to human life a spiritual power that is ready to come into the open heart that casts aside winter fears and makes itself accessible to the influence of heaven.

PARENT TEACHERS ASS'N

The Burlington Parent-Teachers Association met at the school house on Friday afternoon, March 28th. There were about twenty members present. The association decided to offer a picture to the room that had the greatest number of parents present at the next meeting. Membership dues were placed at twenty-five cents a year.

It is to be hoped that all the patrons of the school will join this movement and give it their hearty support, as nothing will do more for community betterment and advancement than a good live Parent-Teachers Association. Anybody in the community who is interested in the school and over sixteen years old is eligible to membership. Parents, and community leaders should get together once in a while to thresh out the problems that come up in the school. Where can this better be done than in the school building itself.

The school children of today are going to be the leaders in the community tomorrow. It is therefore, necessary that they get the best training possible for that leadership. The school can not give it to them without the help of the parents. The home and school must work together and in harmony, if the child is to have the best training for the future. Discipline in the school is a hundred per cent more efficient if the child knows that the parent and teacher are working together. If the parent will know what is going on there and will not have to take the garbled reports that the children bring home. Children often do not understand things that are said and done in the school and take home adverse reports that stir up feeling, against the school that could be straightened out very easily by a talk with the teacher.

The next meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association will be at the school house on Friday afternoon the 13th of April at 2:30. We hope to have many more parents with us at that time.

TOO MANY NON-PRODUCERS

According to criticisms of modern American education voiced by the annual report of the Carnegie foundation, there has been a tendency "to draw a hool pupils away from the productive work of the highly skilled and exact trades, into non-productive positions." It favors instead "discipline of mind" and "accuracy of knowledge."

The idea of a gotten a deep hold, that more money can be made by selling something than other people have produced, rather than by taking hold and producing something oneself.

Of course selling is an absolutely necessary part of modern industry. Commodities can not be sold efficiently, the cost of distribution will mount up high. Yet if more people are trying to become store clerks and office workers and salesmen than the country needs, they will be forced down in these lines, while the people who take hold and get their hands dirty in real production will stand a better chance.

CAMP FIRE GIRL

Camp Fire Girls will have a Candy and Cookie Sale in the afternoon of April Court day. Beginning at 1 p. m. Come and help the girls.

Saturday afternoon, April 5th, at 3 p. m., Miss Marguerite Hunt who has charge of all Camp Fire Girls in Northern Kentucky and the Ohio Valley, will talk to us and explain what Camp Fire stands for and why it is spreading so rapidly. She will also have some of her girls with her and they will show us some of the work, and sing the Camp Fire songs. Everybody welcome. At the Saline Campbell Memorial Methodist church, Burlington, Ky.

The people have got their income tax returns out of the way. But they will be able to think up something else to worry about.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Representatives from Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties attended the Special Home Service Conference held Friday at the headquarters of the Cincinnati-Hamilton county chapter, A. R. C. The conference was conducted by Mr. Arne, Director of War Service and some of the problems considered were: Compensation difficulties, vocational Training and Hospitalization Problems, Inter-Chapter and Chapter Hospital Relationships, Loan and Relief Bases. The epidemic of typhoid fever which nearly disrupted the student body at Lincoln Memorial University Harrogate, Tenn., is being fought with Red Cross funds.

The Seventh Roll Call returns from Kentucky are: 27,300 Sixth Annual Roll Call. 30,112 Second Annual Roll Call. Net Gain. 2,753

Miss Lizzie Roberts died in her 79th year at her home in Walton, last Friday. She was a daughter of Thomas and Margaret Hind Roberts. She was born at Verona and resided in Boone county all of her life. She taught school for about forty years and was one of our best teachers. She was respected by who knew her, and was a kind, christian woman. She had been a member of the Baptist church since childhood. Her funeral services were held in the Baptist church at Walton Sunday morning, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Davis. Burial took place in Salem cemetery in the family lot. She is survived by a brother and sister and a number of other relatives and friends.

Governor Fields signed the acts of the last legislature which divided the money received from truck licenses between the county and state, one half each. The Governor vetoed the bill of extending Confederate pensions. The approval of the bill would establish a precedent far beyond any purpose intended by the original law and it is not without the scope of imagination to see that, if this extension was approved, subsequent enactments would possibly be made where by we would have a much larger Confederate pension roll forty years from today than we had when the law was first enacted, the Governor declared.

Those having lots in the Burlington, Ky., cemetery, who wish them kept up by up-to-date methods in such work, I have had 15 years experience and am prepared for anything to beautify those sacred spots. I make the work a study, devote my whole time to it and can furnish anything for it. Send me your order for summer care of lot or have me, now for "listing." Also get my rates on beautiful monumental designs.

KIRTLEY L. RICE, Cemetery Family Lot Caretaker, Burlington, Ky.

Thomas L. Portwood, aged forty years, passed away Monday at his home in East Bend neighborhood. Funeral services were conducted at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Big Bone Baptist church by Rev. Craig. Mr. Portwood is survived by his widow and four children. Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Of the 42 nations affected by the immigration law, all but 12 have exhausted their quotas for this year. Of the 327,803 immigrants permitted, 253,095 have been accepted leaving only 4,447 possible entrants to July 1 next. Of this number Denmark may send 1,601; France 898 Hungary 249, Norway 953 and Sweden 425.

Wm. Wilson, a deputy from the office of the state tax commission was in Burlington last Friday and checked the automobile accounts of Miss Elizabeth Rogers and he reported that he found all the accounts correct and neatly kept.

The electric light company has set the poles in Burlington and will have their line completed to Hebron in a few days, and President Ketchum is of the opinion that he will have the wires up and current turned on within thirty days.

The Kentucky legislature has passed a law providing for the reading of the Bible in the public schools. Educators are beginning to realize that secular education to the exclusion of spiritual tends to create polishes, cynicism.

With fourteen investigations in the Senate and ten in the House our political machines have become threatening machines, threatening to wild oats. The product being out of course chaos.

FRANCESVILLE.

Frank Estes, who has been very ill for some time is slowly improving.

Miss Jessie Wilson who has been ill with mumps was able to go back to her work in Cincinnati this week. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reitmeyer and children have returned to their home at North Bend after visiting relatives here for several days.

The Death Angel has again visited our community and taken from our midst Sarah Jane Eggleston, wife of B. F. Eggleston. She was born Dec. 9th, 1847 and died March 24, 1924, aged 76 years three months and 18 days. She had been a sufferer from rheumatism for a good many years and for the last few years was unable to get around, but she bore all her trials with patience. She leaves to mourn her death an aged husband, four sons, William Tom Clint and John two daughters Mrs. L. T. Bates of San Bernardino, Cal., and Mrs. Walter Swaney of Cleves, Ohio and a large number of grandchildren. The funeral was conducted by Rev. O. J. Chastain and Undertaker W. A. Bullock Thursday morning, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery here.

Card of Thanks—We desire to thank all our friends and neighbors who so kindly helped us during the illness and death of our mother and grandmother Mrs. B. F. Eggleston, also we wish to thank Undertaker W. A. Bullock for the efficient way in which he conducted the funeral.

The Family.

HEBRON.

Mrs. Nellie Garnett spent several days last week at Ludlow with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Postou and little daughter of Burlington, spent Saturday night and Sunday with his mother and brother here.

Word was received here last Friday of the death of Mr. Amos Manth. Funeral services were conducted at the Addison Methodist church last Saturday afternoon.

Friends here of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pierce were sorry to hear of the death of their little daughter Anne, age 3 years, who passed away on Thursday March 27th, and was laid to rest in the Francesville cemetery after a short service. May these bereaved ones receive the greatest comfort and the fullest understanding that comes only thru the One who Giveth and Taketh. For it was He who said, "Suffer little children and come unto me for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

IDLEWILD.

Master Walter Scothorn has measles.

Mrs. Wm. Berkshire had a radio installed in her residence Saturday.

A. H. Norman has gone to Union where he will make his home.

Several barns and a great many trees were blown down in Friday night's storm.

Mrs. Anna Lewis Gaines is home from a pleasant visit with her kind people in Louisville.

Miss Maud N. Asbury spent the week-end in Cincinnati with her sister Mrs. Wm. Talbot.

Very few tobacco beds have been turned, and there is a good deal of last year's crop still not stripped.

WHY A VEGETABLE GARDEN.

There are several excellent reasons why the people of Burlington should run a vegetable garden during the coming summer. The following are offered to all who are blessed with a back yard:

1—It is a money saving proposition if you do your own work on it. Not much saved perhaps if you hire much work done. But good vegetables cost money, and you can get them for your own labor and elbow grease.

2—It gives you an abundance of green vegetables, which medical science says are needful for health. Having them fresh out of your own land will lead you to eat more of them, and gain benefit both for your purse and your health.

3—You will benefit physically. You will probably get as much good out of it as people get from going into some expensive sport for the benefit of their health. Think these reasons over. They are good ones.

Education is not successful in all cases, but anyway some of the kids are satisfied that they know more than their parents.

South Wales Coal Field
The South Wales coal field, covering approximately 1,000 square miles, is the largest in the British Isles, and exports more coal for export than any other British coal district.

PETERSBURG.

Seeral from this place attended the dance at Hebron Friday night.

Dr. Hubert Walton has disposed of everything at the cannery factory. Mrs. Chas. Shindle of this place is at the hospital for treatment of the throat.

We were sorry indeed, to hear of our friend John Bots getting hurt by a fall.

Mrs. W. T. Evans spent last week at Latonia with her son J. S. Evans and family.

Miss Sallie McWethy was a caller in our town last Sunday, and attended services at the M. E. church.

Mrs. Eva McWethy and son Kirtley spent part of last week with her daughter and family Mrs. Hazel Smith.

Mrs. W. H. Hensley has returned from Lawrenceburg where she has spent the past four weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Crisler and family.

PT. PLEASANT.

Henry Jergens has a ad case of lagrippe.

Come to Sunday school next Sunday April 6th, at 10 a. m. Annual election of officers.

Harrison Wilson from Constance, now resides with H. H. Souther and will help raise tobacco this year.

Mrs. Sallie Souther is quite poorly and was scarcely able to move Sunday, due to that dreadful pain in her hip. Dr. Sayre is giving her his best attention.

A radio was installed in the home of Mrs. Sallie Souther last Sunday as a birthday gift from her children. We hope the pleasure derived therefrom will out rival her many pains.

The Ladies Aid is accomplishing quite a bit of work since meeting every Wednesday. A good crowd attends each meeting, full of enthusiasm for the uplifting of Pt. Pleasant church and community. All ladies are most cordially invited to home.

Mrs. Geo. Pierce was quite ill last Sunday and it was said that the children were much better. We deeply sympathize with them in the death of their dear little daughter Anne, age 3 years, who passed away on Thursday March 27th, and was laid to rest in the Francesville cemetery after a short service. May these bereaved ones receive the greatest comfort and the fullest understanding that comes only thru the One who Giveth and Taketh. For it was He who said, "Suffer little children and come unto me for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

That which serves all the people should be paid for by all the people. That which is paid for by all the people should be under the control of all the people.

These are self-evident truths. We act by them when we build a Panama Canal, set aside and care for an area of natural beauty as a public park, give land to a transcontinental railroad, establish and run an Army and a Navy, and conduct a Postal System.

The entire Nation pays to build and maintain a Navy to protect New York and other seacoast cities. The people of a great many States never see a battleship during their entire lives. There is no valid objection to this, because everyone realizes that the capture or ruin of the seacoast cities would affect the entire Nation.

The same principle holds in the construction of a national system of good roads. The whole Nation will benefit vastly from good roads—in increased prosperity, better education, and development of natural resources.

The money spent on rivers is all paid by the Federal Government from general taxation, yet this traffic is only a small fraction of the traffic along our improved highways, and its benefits are proportionately small.

To the farmer, a hard road means more than any other Federal activity, even the Postal Service. It is a convenience to get his mail promptly, but a good road makes it possible for him to run his farm or dairy at a much higher rate of production and greater profit, gives him and his family more of the comforts and luxuries of life, helps his children to get a better education, and raises his entire standard of living.

Why contend that roads, a public utility for all the people, should be left to different groups of people to develop, when Postal Service, Army, Navy and the protected super-power system are admitted to be national affairs.

CONSTANCE.

Mrs. Nellie Kottmyer has been on the sick list but is now improving. Mrs. Ralph Fischer of Cincinnati visited her sister Mrs. Harry Prable last Thursday.

Mrs. John Klaserer, who was ill a couple of weeks, is able to be up around the house. Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Faulkner are the proud parents of a baby girl, born Tuesday, March 25th.

Mrs. Bailes of Price Hill, was the guest Saturday night, and Sunday week of Mrs. John Klaserer and family.

On Sunday March 16th quite a few relatives of Mrs. Carrie Miller of near Hebron surprised her with a birthday dinner. The following were present: Mrs. Kate Dolwick, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tolwick and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dolwick and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Dolwick and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dolwick and daughter Katherine, Misses Loretta Alma and Nettie May Dolwick, Mr. Earl Souther and Mr. Geo. Tungate.

Last Sunday we were glad to have with us Dr. John Tyndall, Professor of the Cincinnati Bible Institute, who spoke on the subject "The Woman in the Sun." It certainly was one good sermon and enjoyed by all. We were also favored with a duet by Misses Hobart and Tyndall.

The Ladies Aid of Constance Christian church meets every Tuesday afternoon and Thursday all day at the home of Mrs. Fred Prable. All members please attend, for they are planning for their Easter Supper and Bazaar to be held on Saturday night March 19th.

The ground work of the new church is progressing nicely. Mr. Kenyon, Will Zimmer and Mr. Popham are quite busy working on the foundation. It will be an up-to-date church when completed.

Rev. Lewis Craig preached Posthumous funeral at the Big Bone Baptist church Thursday the 27th, at 2 p. m.

Another sign of the close relation of the human race to the animal kingdom is the way some people use their hind legs for kicking purposes.

Motor Weekly, a Louisville publication, is advocating defeat of the Kentucky Bond Issue says that roads can be built in Kentucky from the road funds now available and complements for the next few years which amount to $8,500,000 estimated annually and that the road system can not be built with the proceeds of the bond issue, according to another editor. The bond bill would add for road purposes an additional $10,000,000 to this fund for five years. It is hard for one to understand how roads can be built on the "Pay As You Go" plan with an income for construction and also for maintenance of $8,500,000 and can not build the roads with the bond issue which would add an additional $10,000,000 each year for five years to this fund. A serious objection to the "pay as you go" is that as you build roads, the expense of maintaining the roads increases in proportion to the mileage added to the road system and this decreased the amount available for construction, and in a few years unless additional money is raised, by increasing taxes, no further construction can be done and we would have an incomplete system of roads in this state. Under the bond plan the bonds and interest are paid principally from income derived from those who receive the greatest benefit from the use of the road system. Every one should give the bond question serious consideration and should not form his opinion from propaganda that is now and will be circulated for and against this proposition.

WATERLOO

Not many plant beds sown in this community at present.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Rouse are enjoying their visit in the Lone Star State.

Don't forget the preaching services at the Universalist church next Sunday at 7 p. m.

Mrs. E. Hickman spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Stewart and family, in Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire and children spent the week-end, with relatives in Aurora, Indiana.

J. T. Kelly, of Rabbit Hash, was the guest of his son, Wilbur and wife the latter part of last week.

Mrs. W. L. Riddell spent several days last week with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hoey, near Petersburg.

Wallace Brown, of this county, moved to Montgomery county March 18th. Good luck to you, Brown.

Richard Marshall, of near Aurora, Ind., was in Burlington Monday shaking hands with his many friends.

Sherman Burcham and Chas. Battecher, of Bellevue, were transacting business in Burlington, last Saturday.

The investigations at Washington are no doubt useful, but at last reports they have not reduced the cost of living any.

Misses Sallie and Lizzie Rogers and W. R. Rogers, attended the funeral of Miss Lizzie Roberts at Walton, last Saturday.

Quite a good sized crowd attended the sale of Oscar Brown last Saturday afternoon, and things sold for fair prices. Mr. Brown and family have moved to St. Bernard, Ohio.

John W. Hogan, formerly of this Union precinct, this county, but now of Erlanger, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday. He made the Recorder office a pleasant call. He was in company with his son-in-law, Mr. Wilson, of Covington.

The last reports from Mrs. E. W. Duncan, who has been in a hospital in Cincinnati for several weeks, was that she had greatly improved and expected to go to her home in Walton the latter part of this week.

Mrs. Kate Nixon, of Petersburg, received a letter from her son, Robert who is attending college at Pennsylvania, one day last week.

A letter bore the post-mark of Jackson, Tenn., and was the first in the line of home folks that "Bobbie" had made the Varley base ball team. Although this is quite an honor, it is not at all surprising to the "fans" of Boone county who have seen "Bobbie" play third base. He has a world of base ball ability and under proper coaching will develop into a star.

A SOUTHERN CINDERELLA.

A large audience greeted the production, "A Southern Cinderella," a three-act play which was presented by the Petersburg High School on March 19th. The characters were: Eloise Klopp—Madame Chatterbox—An Old Aristocrat—Frances Berkshire, Enid Bellamy.

A Southern Cinderella Marie Klopp—Miss Rosie Winterberry—A Famous Settlement Worker.

Mary Henaley—Miss Johnnie Bell Randolph—A Little Coquette.

Mildred Biddle—Katherine Hawke—An English Nurse.

Maude Deck—Caroline Hawke—Her Sister—An Adventuress.

Mattie Kreylich—Mammy Judy Johnson—A Black Bluegrass Widow.

The acting was good and the audience was enthusiastic. Much credit is due Miss Kreylich who coached the play, and who portrayed the part of "Mammy Judy Johnson" so splendidly. The proceeds amounted to $50.50 which was very gratifying to those who worked for the success of the play.

The music was furnished by Wiggell and Karl Keim and Earl Acra, and greatly appreciated.

This play will be repeated at Hebron Theatre April 4th.

HIT WITH A BRICK.

Visitor Attacked and Robbed by a Newly-Found "Friend."

Arthur Jones, 22, son of James G. Jones, of East Bend pike, Burlington Ky., went to Cincinnati last Thursday seeking work. All he found was misfortune.

Striking up an acquaintance with a stranger in the Dixie Terminal Jones confided that he wanted a job. The stranger said that he was in the same boat and suggested that they start out and see what they could find.

Arriving at a lumber yard at Gest street and McLean Avenue, Jones' acquaintance reached into his pocket. Before Jones knew what it was all about, he had been tapped on the head and his watch and $14 in cash had disappeared. The stranger had disappeared also.

Jones, unconscious, was found by lumber yard employees and sent in an auto patrol to the General Hospital.

Policeman Joseph Foster, in charge of the patrol, gave Jones carfare home out of his own pocket.

Modern Woodmen.

March 25, 1924, will long be remembered by Patriarch Camp Modern Woodmen of America. The court room was full of Woodmen and much interest was displayed. The work was put on by the local camp and the following were adopted as members of Patriarch Camp: Geo. Bradford Lewis, L. Stephens, E. Y. Randall, Thos. M. Randall, Oakley Easton, L. W. Guiley and Marvin Bonta.

Five candidates from Petersburg camp were also present. Grange Hall Petersburg, Big Bone camps were represented. At the close of the work an election was held to fill a vacancy in one of the important chairs of the local camp. The election was made unanimously and the newly elected officer was installed in a very impressive manner by the installing officer of the camp.

At 11:30 a, nice lunch consisting of coffee, sandwiches, cheese pickles and cigars were served. By 12:30 the town was quiet and the 1924 anniversary of Patriarch Camp had passed into history.

Total membership is now 83.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

President Coolidge was on the right track when he told the White House Correspondents association at a dinner in Washington, that the American people "are conscious that we have a constitution of the United States, and I know they are attached to the defense and maintenance of that great institution." He explained the three branches of government and added: "I think the American people approve of that kind of constitutional government and that they want it maintained in its fundamentals."

The people are going to demand that it be supported. Political demagogues, if they desire to stay in public life, will have to change their methods. The old tricks used by politicians are out of date. This is no time for flowers speeches or partisan investigations that are designed largely for the purpose of spattering mud.

What the people are demanding is that congress support the executive branch of the government in the demand for a reduction of taxes, and that congress function as the legislative branch of the government, instead of trying to assume the prerogatives of the judicial and executive branches of the government.

Unless congress gets down to business there are going to be a lot of strange faces in the next congress.

First American Shoemaker

The first recorded American shoemaker was Thomas Flint who arrived on the second voyage of the Mayflower in 1623. He was under contract with the Plymouth company to make shoes for the colonists.

Philip Kirkland, a Wheelwright came to Lynn, Mass. in 1630, and John Adams, a celebrated shoemaker, settled there in 1700. de Lorge got a party down in the industry in which it is now famous.

It took three months to get a tax bill through the lower house of congress, and if the senate doesn't pass any new investigations, it may pass one by Christmas.

DOINGS IN KENTUCKY.

When Governor Fields appointed Selden R. Glenn a member of the State Tax Commission he made a selection that has met with general approval of Democrats throughout Kentucky. There is not a more popular member of the Democratic organization than Mr. Glenn. For seven years he has been Secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee at the headquarters in Louisville and through all the intensity of fractional strife he has kept the good will of his party associates regardless of how they had stood.

The new Tax Commissioner is a native of Lyon county and his home is at Eddyville. He is a banker and farmer and has been honored by his home town by election as Mayor. In 1911 he was elected to the General Assembly from the Third Senatorial District and he was re-elected in 1915. In the Senate he gained experience that qualifies him especially well for his new post on the Tax Commission as he was one of the authors of the tax law adopted at the special session of 1917. This is the tax law that now governs the state.

Before that he had been a member of a taxation investigation body which drew up recommendations for changes in the state tax laws. While in the Senate he always was a member of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. As he is a large real estate owner and has important business holdings he knows the tax game from both sides.

For seven years Mr. Glenn has been Secretary of the Democratic State Committee and has given his time and means to the party. Although the post of Secretary is supposed to pay $3,000 a year, the party finances have never been such as to afford Mr. Glenn opportunity to cash a check. If he should receive all that is coming to him as Secretary he would now be entitled to about $25,000. His friends, who know he has served without recompense are especially glad of the recognition that has been given him by selection to the Tax Commission.

With the acceptance of this appointment Mr. Glenn retires as Secretary of the committee, Miss Maja Eurlacy, of Nebo, Ky. who has been assistant Secretary, is tipped to succeed him. If she is chosen both parties will have women Secretaries in Kentucky as Mrs. Lillian Davis is the Republican Secretary.

The appointment of Joseph T. O'Neal of Louisville, to the bench of the Court of Appeals to succeed the late Judge Harry Robinson from this district, was one of the greatest compliments ever paid to a young Democrat, as it came to Mr. O'Neal un solicited. At the time the announcement was made in Frankfort, three delegations from Louisville were on their way to the capital to urge selection of other aspirants by the Governor. He already had decided on the appointment of Mr. O'Neal.

The new Judge served as a member of the Democratic City and County Committee here for years, and in 1921 made the race for Commonwealth's Attorney. He has been one of the most energetic Democratic campaigners in the city. He is an overseas veteran and a leader in the Baptist church. He is one of the youngest Judges ever to sit on the bench of Kentucky's highest courts, being 40 years old.

The three new Commissioners of the Court of Appeals, provided by the General Assembly that the congested condition of the docket of the high court might be relieved, have been appointed by Governor Fields and have entered on their four-year term. C. C. Turner was reappointed. The others are Truman Drury, of Morganfield; J. P. Hobson, of Frankfort; and Prescott Sandidge, of Burkesville.

Both Judge Turner and Judge Hobson are former Judges of the Court. Hobson served two terms from the Third Appellate District, and has been Chief Justice. He is from Elizabethtown, but for eight years, since his retirement from the bench has been practicing law in Frankfort.

Mr. Drury is a brother of Representative Lucien Drury and is an attorney of Morganfield, Union county. Mr. Sandidge is an attorney and a brother of former Judge W. P. Sandidge.

J. S. Rogers, State Highway Engineer whose administration of affairs under Governor Edwin P. Morrow was the object of hefty attacks during the 1920 rampages, will complete his term of office. The State Highway Commission has announced that it will not make any changes in the personnel of the heads of departments under it before the expiration of their terms in July.

A bill has recently been introduced in Congress at Washington providing for the establishment of civil government in the Virgin Islands in the place of the present administration by the Navy Department, and for the granting of citizenship rights to the native people. It is interesting to note the fact that the people of the islands are English-speaking and 99 per cent literate. Judged by any accepted standard, they must be regarded as entitled to all the rights of citizenship.

BENEFACCTIONS AT WORK

There comes a time in the life of every man, who has acquired much of this world's goods, when he begins to wonder what disposition he shall make of his possessions after death. Further use for them men and women who have no heirs with claims upon them, naturally look about them for some worthy cause which they can help with the money they have accumulated.

After the beneficiary is decided upon, they make a will, the terms of which are to be carried out after their death.

Why does it not occur to some of them that they could derive much more pleasure out of what they have made during their life, if they would put it to work before they die.

Why don't they realize what a happy climax it would be to their life of toil, to invest at least a part of their savings in some enterprise that would bring joy to others.

Such people probably have never contemplated the amount of services they could render the community where they have accumulated their wealth, by bestowing their bounty while they still live, and not wait for their desires to be carried out by an executor.

All too often, the aims of benefactors are defeated after their death. The only sure way to do good is to do it with your own hands.

There is no good reason why benefactors should not see the results of their benefactions.

They can then come to the last hour on earth secure in the thought that their efforts to help others have not been in vain.

AGRICULTURAL ORGANIZATION.

It has long been apparent to the students of rural economics, that agriculture has not developed as other forms of industry have. The keynote of modern industry is quantity production. By this means the cost of producing many staples has been reduced, in spite of the tendency to advancing prices.

But when we come to applying the idea of quantity production to the farming business, one runs up against difficulties. It seems likely that the bulk of the land of this country will be owned for many years by individual farmers who will till their own plots of land, and give their work the advantages that come from close supervision.

But it would seem that if agriculture is to compete successfully with other industries, there must be some tendency to work on a bigger scale, and get the advantages of combination. That tendency is now being exemplified by efforts being made all over the country, to market farm products co-operatively in large quantities, and get quantity distribution, even if quantity production is not attainable to the majority of farmers at present.

Before adopting an aloof attitude to these movements, the farmer should reflect that he fails to take hold and help them, he is making use of the methods that have brought great prosperity to manufacturing enterprises.

The modern farmer can not ignore the tendency of the times. Many farmers of course already have profitable markets or can find the same under the older methods. Advertising would help many of them. But there needs to be a general movement to market commodities on a bigger scale, and farmers must put more of their time and effort into making such movements a success.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of Shelby Irvin Mullins, who died April 6th, 1923, aged 26 years 6 months and 19 days.

We miss thee from our home dear Irvin.

We miss thee from thy place
A shadow o'er our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face,
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care,
Our home in dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.
He has gone from his dear ones, his child his wife,
Whom he willingly tolled for and loved as his life,
Oh God, how mysterious, how strange are thy ways,
To take from us the loved one in the best of his days,
Sadly missed by members of the family.

GIVE BABY CHICK A GOOD START

The first few days and the first few weeks are the most important time in the life of the baby chick according to J. E. Humphrey poultry specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture who emphasizes the need for proper feeding and care at this time.

"Sour skim milk or buttermilk is the best first feed, but the chicks should be given no feed until they are from 48 to 72 hours old," Mr. Humphrey advises. "To feed chicks too early may cause common white diarrhea. After the first feed of sour milk or buttermilk give a chick grain consisting of equal parts of fine cracked corn and cracked wheat or rolled oats, or feed a good commercial chick feed in addition to the sour milk. That amount of scratch feed should be fed five times a day which can be cleaned up in fifteen minutes.

During the second week feed the same grain mixture three times a day and start giving a mash composed of 20 pounds bran, 20 pounds of shorts, 20 pounds of corn meal, 3 pounds bone, 12 pounds of meat scraps one and one-half pounds of charcoal. Give this mash three times a day giving the amount which the chicks will clean up in thirty minutes. Commercial mash may be used with very good results but it costs more than home-made mash. The beginner in poultry, however, will probably get better results by feeding ready mixed mash because of the difficulty in securing the proper ingredients to mix the mash in the right proportions.

"From the third to the twelfth week the grain mixture is still to be fed changing to coarser particles about the seventh week. Keep the mash before the chicks in a hopper, and have water and sour milk available as before. From the 12th week to maturity the same ration should be fed as that given to laying hens. An excellent mash consists of thirty pounds bran, 30 pounds shorts, 20 pounds corn meal 20 pounds tankage or meat scraps, and from one-half to one pound salt. A grain mixture giving results is a proportion of 70 pounds corn to 30 pounds wheat or oats. When the cockerels start mistreating the pullets they should be separated from the pullets. All those not needed for breeding purposes should be sold as broilers or fryers. About twice the number of cockerels that will be required for breeding should be kept because at that age it is impossible to tell how the cockerels are going to develop.

BUSINESS MEN SHOULD HELP GOVERN.

It is all very well for business men to become agitated for or against certain legislative measures which happen to be of immediate and direct interest to them, but how many of them watch closely the multitude of other measures which, while not seemingly affecting them directly, will ultimately help create conditions under which an industrial nation can survive.

Take the question of adjusted compensation, for instance. Business bodies everywhere are flooding Congress with their protests against the bonus. Whether they are right or wrong does not matter for the present purpose. What really matters is that very few of those who protest against the bonus have ever read the bill in question or understand just what it means. The bonus should be settled on its merits—not on its prospective cost.

And so with Immigration. How many men of business are thoroughly conversant with that tremendous problem. How many manufacturers consider it solely from the viewpoint of the supply of labor without fail contemplation of the peril involved in bringing alien millions to our shores whom we may not be able to absorb and who may never learn the principles on which America has grown great.

About one-half the voters of the United States took part in the 1920 election for president. In 1922, thirty-two United States Senators were elected. Of these only six voted as much as 90 per cent. of the votes of those entitled to vote in their constituency. Most of them received only a little over 20 per cent. and two of them received less than 10 per cent.

Hardly more than one-half the men and women who are entitled to the suffrage exercise their privilege. A great proportion of those who fail to exercise the privilege are those who have the greatest business stake in the community.

More than a century ago wise old Thomas Jefferson predicted that "our rulers will become corrupt, our people careless. The people will forget themselves in the sole faculty of making money and will never think of uniting to effect a due respect for their rights." If he was alive today he would be compelled to admit that corruption and inefficiency were the result of public indifference encouraged by partisan prejudices. That old and true slogan, "eternal vigilance is the price of freedom" must be put back into our public schools.

Auto thefts increase steadily. In 33 leading cities last year, about 40,000 cars were stolen. Over 32,000 were recovered. The "not found" cars were 18 per cent. of the total stolen, compared with 20 per cent. in 1920 and 1921.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The last few days of sunshine and spring-like weather has put more "zip" into the life of the farmer than has shown up in some months of the cold bleak wintry days. The plow has been started and is turning the sod for the planting. Oats and grain seed are being sown, and tobacco beds are being prepared for the sowing of the seed. Gardens are also being planted with onions, lettuce, radishes and early potatoes. The industrious farmer is busy with his work, since the lateness of the season demands his attention every day that is fit for planting and preparing the ground for all spring crops.

Has it ever occurred to you that your schoolhouse is the logical spot for an exhibit of your country's resources? Such an exhibit is an assured success in several sections of America. Sometimes the exhibition is known as the "Junior Fair" at Bradley, Mass. It is known as the "Trophy Day" in North Carolina the exhibition generally opens on "Good Roads Day" in Ohio and in Montana permanent exhibitions have been established. It is truly an eye-opener, a source of genuine wonder to many a man who has lived all his days in the community.

Some of the automobile clubs are organizing a fight against the road tax. No one would expect the club to take any other stand, for the reason that under this plan they pay their part for the construction of roads to which they seriously object. The farmers have been taxed for years for road purposes and the club owners have used without complaint the roads so constructed, but what a howl when they must do more than hold meetings and urge the farmers to build good roads.

A bill was passed by the recent Legislature "to make it unlawful to scatter false rumors or reports of slanderous nature concerning any person or persons." This will work a tremendous hardship on a lot of free-born American citizens whose tongues are so long that they can sit in the parlor and lick the skittles in the street.

The following Boone county citizens are doing service as jurors in the U. S. Court at Covington, this week: C. F. Blankenbaker, Florence; Chas. Baker, Union; Henry Clore Grant; Harry Humphrey, Taylorsport; G. H. Gordon, Hebron; S. C. Haghes, Walton and Joseph Clegg, Beaver Lick.

Woodrow Wilson left an estate valued at $250,000 according to a petition for probate of will filed in court by his widow, Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson. The only debts charged against the estate were those incident to the funeral, which were estimated at $2,000.

A primary election to select the party's candidate for United States Senator was determined by the Republican State Central Committee at a meeting held in Louisville April 3. Under the state law the primary will be held the first Saturday in August.

Revival services will begin Friday April 12th, 1924, at 7:30 p. m. at the Methodist church in Burlington conducted by Dr. Wm. B. Campbell, President Ky. Wesleyan College and the Pastor Rev. Paul Gillespie. All are invited to attend these meetings.

It will not be long until you will see some of our citizens wending their way to the waters of Gunpowder and Woolper creeks to try their luck with the finny tribe.

Jailer Fowler was in Walton, one day last week, summoning witnesses and litigants for the next term of Circuit Court which convenes next Monday, April 14th.

G. O. Clegg, Jr., of Beaver Lick was in this part of the county last week looking after those who belong to the pool and had "dumped" their tobacco.

It will soon be time for those Boone county citizens who spent the winter in the south, to be wending their way back home.

The few days of warm weather has caused the buds on the trees to swell, and in a few more days will be out in full bloom.

Mrs. R. S. Cowen was in Covington one day last week, visiting her brother, Perry Rice who has been quite sick.

The April term of the Boone Circuit Court will convene next Monday.

Edward Rice, who has been sick for some time, is able to be out again.

Quite a number of tobacco beds were sown last week.

Money never needs any loud speaker.

THE PURPOSE OF LIFE

What is the purpose of life? Why do we live only to die? What of the birds, the beasts, the trees the plants and a thousand other things? A million people will give a million different answers. Life is a puzzling proposition, but a bit of reasoning will remove the suggestion that there is an ultimate purpose in view, a mystery to mankind.

Surely the purpose of life is not to live selfishly, enjoying all the good things to eat and drink to wear to give pleasure and then stop at that.

Why some are poor, some very poor, some comfortably rich some uncomfortably rich and others too rich to know how rich they are is uncomprehensible. But without questioning the order of things, let us face the facts and study the purpose of life.

They who live isolated, who have a plenty of everything, are not always truly happy. Life holds forth more pleasure for those who live unselfishly, who live for others.

The purpose of life is to do something to make the world better in which to live, to do something for others.

Money, when idle, does more harm than good. He who has all of the world's goods he desires and yet a surplus fails to live according to the purpose of life.

Help others—that's the purpose of life. Invest, create, build, beautify, help help—that's why you and I are here for a brief time.

Opportunities for service are legion. Before our doors are many creditable projects that need help. No greater service can one render to humanity than to relieve human suffering, alleviate pain. They who give freely and cheerfully to such a cause surely understand in part at least the altruistic purpose of life. To give unwillingly is worse than not to give at all.

Give, but give from the heart.

A POLITICAL RADICAL

A radical in politics has been defined as one who prefers to have a big fight and lose everything, rather than to have peace and gain something.

It may be that we need the radical in politics, just as we need the radical in every phase of our activities, to keep the conservative from becoming sure of his position, to keep the conservative in doubt.

Of course, if conservatism held supreme sway in political life, we would probably die of dry rot, which none of us want to do, but we can get along without some of the superlative degree radicals who keep government in a turmoil most of the time and make constructive progress almost impossible.

The great danger of radicalism is that it may bring about a political disorganization by fooling the people with the appeal to their prejudices and the non-thinking side of their brain.

The radical will accomplish little in politics if people will take time enough to think and analyze his position.

He depends upon a hearing of tom-toms and a tumult and shouting in order to gain his ends and turns conditions upside down by electing new and untired men and placing in effect new and untired policies.

The political radical is very much like any other kind of radical. He agrees with few, because he thinks if he did, he would be convicted of conservatism.

He delights in being digested and always takes the other side of the argument. The ground for his position is always insecure, which accounts for his constant motion.

But perhaps we need him after all.

DON'T PLAY POLITICS

The two most urgent public questions at present times are tax reduction and dealing with corruption which has been unearthed in official circles in Washington.

President Coolidge feels with his fellow countrymen a depressing sense of humiliation at the gross betrayal of public interest that has been disclosed.

The taxation question as well as law or criminal action of a civil performing public duty is a problem for both Republicans and Democrats.

The people of the whole U. S. have an interest in the standpoint of loosening tax bills and securing honest administration of public affairs regardless of what party is in power.

The pity is that self-seeking politicians will attempt to use present situation to further political ends rather than to advance the best interest of our government.

We must register our approval of honest public officials and demand tax reduction if we expect to eliminate dishonesty in public office, or increasing tax bills.

We have nothing in particular against men wearing wrist watches, but when we see a fellow with one on, we always think of the men who keep their eye on the time clock more than they do on their work.

TO LIVE WITHIN YOUR INCOME.

In the ages of years long gone by father had but little trouble keeping the family within the limits of the revenue earned, and who says that they did not enjoy themselves as well and get more out of life than in these days of paints, powders, thin shirts and picture shows.

When those days were over, they lived with less and that alone in a state of mind that if practiced in these days would pay off more debts and cause less rupture and hard feelings in the homes. Extravagant ideas and a disposition to do society caused many a home to become desolate.

Many of our people have their money crop eaten up at the end of the year. When a little hustle with the corn, poultry and truck patches would have provided for the living expenses and there would have been no large grocery bills and the money for the tobacco any way would have been left to go on the home.

The young folks are better off doing the chores than running about over the county and Old Lizzie makes far too many trips for the good of the crop and family.—Ex.

MEN'S DUTY TO THE BOYS

Over 80 per cent of the criminals in this country are less than twenty-five years of age.

A dozen years of investigation and experience have demonstrated that the vast majority of all these youthful offenders have committed crimes because they had bad associates and were not under the proper influences in the years when their boyhood was turning into manhood—between the ages of 12 and 18.

This is the most important period in a boy's life. Then his ideals are acquired, his character formed. In these years every boy needs to be under the influence of the right kind of a man. He needs such a man's life to supply his ideals and such a man to become his hero. Every boy is a hero worshiper. The reason so many become criminals is they follow the wrong leaders.

This condition is a challenge to the manhood of our community. What are we men doing? Thousands of boys are nightly off the streets looking for amusement, seeking adventure yearning for companionship. Many of them have no fathers, and the parents of many others give little or no heed to the places their boys visit or the companions they choose.

This is a practical thing. It can be done. It has been done in a small way and with wonderful results. Why should not we undertake it in a big way? We can lessen the crime in our midst by giving our attention to the youths. They need a real man's guiding hand and helpful example of a true man's life in forming their character.

Boone county can be made better. Whether it will depends upon us—its men. Shall we turn our backs and let existing conditions or shall we accept the challenge and lend ourselves to the task?

SAVE THE SCENERY

A company that sells a nationally known and used product has announced that it intends to eliminate all of its advertising signs from the highways of the Pacific Coast states.

But why not go a step farther and eliminate them from all of the highways of all of the states?

There would not be any objection from anyone. The reverse would be true, because who enjoys billboard scenery?

Nothing is quite so discerning, or rough on the disposition as to be viewing a beautiful piece of scenery while riding along a good highway, and suddenly have your view obscured by some unsightly billboard.

Now and then a billboard is a work of art, but the instances are so rare that few ever saw one that appealed to the sense of beauty.

The springtime is approaching, when rides in the country are enjoyed most people find enjoyment looking at the landscape as they travel, but when the highways are lined on either side with nondescript billboards advertising this or that product, the joy is all taken out of a motor trip.

Some states have ordered all billboards and signs of every character removed from state highways and will not permit any to be erected.

Why can't every state adopt this policy so that motorists may derive pleasure from an unobstructed view of nature's handiwork.

CALL FOR THIRD PARTY CONVENTION.

A call has been issued for a National Farmer-Labor progressive convention to be held in St. Paul June 17th for the purpose of nominating candidates for President and Vice President of the United States. Convention headquarters have been opened in St. Paul Labor Temple, with C. A. Hathaway in charge. It is expected that more than 1,000 delegates representing every state in the Union will be present.

RALPH BARKER TO LEAVE WAREHOUSE POST WITH POOL

Director Resigns, Effective May 1. But Will Continue Booster Of Co-operative Movement. Will Seek New Market In Europe.

Lorington, Ky.—Ralph M. Barker, Director of Warehouse of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association tendered his resignation at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Association yesterday, effective May 1. The resignation was accepted, coupled with a resolution of thanks and appreciation to Mr. Barker for past loyal service rendered to the Burley co-operative and its members. The fact that the present will not be filled, it was announced.

Mr. Barker's resignation, as he stated to the Board in tendering it, was due to his desire to return to Carrollton to look after his own business interests, which he declared he did not desire to abandon and which had been the cause of some criticism of himself and of the Burley Association because of the fact that the re-dryer owned by the R. M. Barker Tobacco Company, with other outside re-dryers, had been used to re-dry association tobacco, at the same price and under the same conditions as other re-dryers accepted the business of the association.

In his resignation to the Board, which was verbally, Mr. Barker made it clear that he will still be interested in the Association and its welfare, and that it is his purpose to be as earnestly and loyally for it as if he intended to continue with the Association.

DON'T BE A QUITTER

A story is told about a time when the "devil" is supposed to have decided to go out of business; and in setting a price on his tools, he put the highest price of all on the weapon of "discouragement." When questioned as to this, he is supposed to have replied, "Discouragement is my most valuable weapon, for it gives me entrance into where I could not get with any other instrument."

While the story is purely mythical, the lesson to be learned from it is indispensable to all. Many of us have had thorny roads to travel, seemingly difficult problems to solve, hard battles to fight; and sometimes we have listened to the argument "What's the Use," little realizing it to be the very wedge of that deceptive tool, discouragement.

During an examination period in a private school, the instructor saw one of the boys toss down his pencil with a dejected expression on his face. When asked what the trouble was, the student said he had tried to work out his problems but could not, adding, "So what's the use of trying any more."

Discouragement is a too common ailment with most of us. The boy or the man who wags his head and refuses to recognize the word: "The harder the task the more determined he becomes to master it."

We don't all reach Rome by the same road. Each individual is the architect of his castle in Spain. Find out what you want to do then stick to it until it is accomplished. Don't resort to that dreary wall, "What's the use." It's the wall of the quitter—and the quitter will never get anywhere. Happiness always comes with success.

"FARM ELECTRIFICATION"

Construction of superpower plants and establishment of larger power units are continuing as marked features of industrial development.

Back of all this is widespread demand for electricity on farms.

Remarkable progress has been made in many states by private enterprises in extending electric service to the farmers.

California leads the world's number of farmers using electricity and in the low cost of service.

Washington is probably second only to California as a geographical section with 28,000 farms electrified.

Ontario, Canada, larger than any western state, is serving only 13,500 farms under what is called, public ownership.

A "CREDIT" NEEDED IN BUSINESS.

Nearly 60 years ago the Women's Central Union adopted the following credo: We believe in a living wage, in an eight-hour day in courts of conciliation and arbitration, in justice as opposed to greed of gain in "peace on earth and good will to men" and finally we pledge ourselves to labor and to pray that all these principles may be worked out in the customs of society and the laws of the land.

If this credo had been adopted in the world of business much misery might have been saved—and it is not too late now to give it serious consideration.

THE WILL TO DO.

Americans generally will applaud the curt reply of the army authorities to the Brits who wanted to convert the attempted airplane flight around the world into a sporting event.

This Britisher is noted for his desire to take a sporting chance, but he wouldn't attempt to impair the chances of success for so great an adventure that will open up uncharted air paths and usher in a new epoch in transportation and travel.

These army pioneers will make a close study of air and the climatic and physical conditions to gather data that will give the first indication as to the practicability of encircling the globe by airplane.

The planes are equipped with boats for flying over the seas, which will lessen in a small degree the danger ordinarily accompanying the flights across large bodies of water; but the hazards have not been eliminated by any means and the men engaged in this enterprise are facing dangers that may cost them their lives.

Practically all progress, in all times, has been accompanied by danger, however, and there have always been men of the heroic strain ready to make the sacrifices required for the march of progress.

Columbus, Magellan, Marco Polo and other daring men of history placed their lives in the balance and gambled with fate that future generations might be benefited.

If these men of the army survive, they will be able to take pride in the fact that their names will be ranked with notable characters of past ages, who dared to travel paths never traversed by civilized man; if they perish, their deeds will be a precious heritage that may be cherished.

It is as if it could be that these bold invaders of unknown air ways should be American—representatives of a people whose history is filled with adventure and a reckless spirit that conquered the elements of a primitive land. Win or lose, their attempt will stand a monument to a spirit and will to do that is typically American.

Daugherty's Resignation

Attorney General Daugherty's resignation upon demand of President Coolidge will be generally applauded throughout the country, though there are plenty of people who think that the president should have acted sooner.

The retiring attorney general thought that the president was following a "damnable doctrine," in suggesting that an attempt to remove a cabinet officer disqualified him for further public service.

It may be "dangerous when men are removed from public office by public clamor and hearsay evidence, without a fair trial in court, but the fact remains that questioning a public servant's integrity causes many to lose faith in him, and regardless of his guilt or innocence, his ability to serve the public is impaired."

Former Secretary of the Navy realized this and very promptly retired without embarrassing the president.

In the case of the attorney general President Coolidge pointed out that it was manifestly impossible for him to go through the voluminous evidence to satisfy himself as to Daugherty's guilt or innocence of the many charges preferred against him.

It is especially imperative that a man of the highest integrity, in whom the people have the greatest confidence, should be at the head of the department of justice, which is responsible for enforcement of the federal statutes.

The position is a great public trust and for it to be misplaced is a public calamity. Only time will reveal whether the accusations made against Daugherty were unjust, but it is difficult to convince very many people that there is not invariably fire where there is a lot of smoke.

WOMEN'S INDEPENDENT POLITICAL ACTION

An independent woman's political party is being formed. A call has been sent out by the Woman's Committee for Political Action to women of liberal thought all over the country to affiliate for the purpose of having a voice in the selection of liberal candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States.

It is simply received wide-spread and cordial response.

Its purposes are clearly stated in the call and in the tenets to which the members are asked to subscribe. It does not pretend to foster the interests of any particular presidential candidate, but rather to rally as many women voters as it can around a set of fundamentals with a view to exerting an influence commensurate with strength in assuring the candidacy of one who measures up to their standards.

The platform is one of the most concise political statements ever promulgated, following the lines laid down by the Council for Political Action. The convention is to be held in Washington May 8 to 11, and several sources of national reputation participate. Delegates may be elected to the proposed third party convention to be held June 17th in St. Paul.

CAN'T SELL MORE TOBACCO THAN THE MARKET WILL USE.

Chief of Section of Markets in Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station Repeats the Warning Against Excessive Crop of Burley.

The attention of the Burley tobacco growers is being called to the importance of adjusting production to the requirements of the market, by O. B. Jessup, Chief of the Section of Markets, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. Mr. Jessup says: "That statistics of production, supply on hand consumption and prices are shown that tell which way the wind is blowing. Successful business men look to such information to guide them in their business operations. Like other business men, farmers need to study the outlook for their products and to plan accordingly."

"Figures of tobacco production, stocks on hand and the consumption at the present time indicate that Burley tobacco growers have been expanding production more rapidly than has the consumption of the manufactured products. Government estimates show that the Burley crop of 1923 which totalled 326,116,000 pounds was the largest on record, exceeding that of 1922 by over 50,000,000 pounds. The stocks of leaf tobacco reported by dealers and manufacturers on January 1, 1924, showed record holdings of Burley tobacco the amount being $34,126,806 pounds. This is about 50,000,000 more pounds than reported on January 1, 1923. While cigarette consumption has increased rapidly in production of tobacco leaf has been greater. Moreover, the Carolinian produced a large crop of flue-cured tobacco in 1923. A considerable part of this type is used by domestic manufacturers."

"The farming business is such that control over acreage must be left with the individual farmer. The responsibility of adjusting production to market demands is that of the grower. The Burley tobacco grower has established one of the largest co-operative marketing enterprises in the country. No system of marketing on earth, however can sell more of a product than the market will take. That has been demonstrated time and again both in agriculture and other lines. If an over-supply is produced a larger carry-over and a lower price will inevitably follow. The time to make the adjustment of acreage is before the crop is planted, not after it has been produced."

BOYS OF THE FARM

How to keep boys on the farm is a problem that has perplexed many farmers, as well as others who have been alarmed at the trend towards the large centers of population.

There are a few intelligent farmers, however, who know the answer. They have tried it and know that it works.

The answer is giving the boy who stays on the farm the same chances that he would have in the city if he went there.

Farmers who have shared with their sons in the profits of their farms and have appreciated the fact that boys need a certain amount of recreation, are the ones who are enjoying the whole-hearted co-operation of their sons.

These same farmers have also joined in the farm organization work and have given their support to co-operative marketing plans, because they know that by this means they will be able to increase farm revenue. Making farming more profitable will make it more attractive to the young men.

The only way to compete with the big cities that are drawing boys away from the farm is to meet them on their own ground and use the same weapons—a fair profit and a reasonable amount of pleasure along with work.

We give you $20.00 worth of this excellent paint or enough to cover a 12,751 square foot two coats. It is especially recommended for barns, garages, fences, wagons, implements, etc. If you have any of this work to be done, don't fail to write the Central Supply Company 627 E. Main Street Louisville, Ky.

In a report issued by N. O. Gray Assistant Tax Commissioner, Frankfort a total of 124,781 passenger cars, 395 motorcycles, 891 dealers and 5,107 chaffeur issued in the State from December 2, 1923 to April 1, 1924. Boone reported 1139 passenger cars, 145 trucks, 5 dealers and 1 chauffeur.

J. O. Boutin, who lives on Joseph Walton's farm near Commissary in preparing for a large crop of tobacco this year. He will plant 13 or 14 acres. Mr. Boutin is one of the county's largest growers of the weed.

Mrs. A. G. Fisk, of Florence, was the guest of Mrs. R. S. Crisler, Monday. They made this office a pleasant call. This is the first time Mrs. Fisk has been in Burlington for ten years or more.

Mr. Geo. M. Penn, who moved to Covington from Burlington about a month ago, was mingling with the crowd in town Monday. He reported his father, who is past 85 years of age, in bad health.

W. L. Kirkpatrick delivered his crop of tobacco of 1400 pounds at Walton last week. He received the highest average that has been paid at that house this year. He received an average of 15 cents.

A number of Masons residing in Petersburg have petitioned the Grand Master of Kentucky for permission to institute a lodge in Petersburg. The request will be granted and the lodge instituted within the next few weeks.

Your attention is called to an article in this issue from O. B. Jessen, Chief of the Section of Markets, Ky., Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington. Every grower of tobacco in Boone county should read this article and govern himself according to the advice given. Like other business men, farmers need to study the outlook for their products and to plan accordingly.

Public school education is popularly supposed to be free education. But free education which requires the purchase of text books by scholars is not free. So argued the proponents of free text books a hundred years ago and so they have argued ever since. Their arguments have had much effect, since today forty-one states and the District of Columbia have laws of one sort or another regarding free books for the public schools.

Six states provided school books at state expense, buying them directly from the state treasury. In thirteen states the laws make the purchase of books by local authorities mandatory, thus making each community pay for its own books thru local taxation. In twenty-one states, school funds may be used for the purchase of free books. Some states furnish all books free; others furnish books for the lower grades and have high school pupils furnish their own.

There seems to be no reason why a pupil should buy a book, when the authorities do not require him to buy a desk, or pay a teacher. All three are part of the mechanics of teaching. There is always the question of foolish economist wants to use a state purchased book until it wears out, and to issue and use all the supply bought, even if a new and much better book is available. There is something to be said on both sides of the question, at least. The higher grades are concerned. Meanwhile, it is obvious that there is no child so poor but what he can get his education, book and all, at public expense thanks to the spread of the idea that books should be as available as teachers and schools.

MR. DAUGHERTY'S RESIGNATION.

The retirement of Attorney General Daugherty was inevitable sooner or later, and the friends of President Coolidge are especially gratified. Whatever the defenders of Mr. Daugherty say regarding the nature of the attack made upon him, the fact remains that he has been a heavy burden for the President to carry especially when seeking approval at the hands of the people.

Whether justly or unjustly, the Ohio politician had been regarded from the time of his appointment by President Harding as the weak spot in that President's Cabinet. The close friends of President Harding were apprehensive that prior to the expiration of his first term there would develop some scandal involving the Attorney General and injurious to the administration. The facts have shown that this scandal existed. President Harding escaped the odium of it only by ending of his earthly career.

There has been a steady undercurrent of feeling that the delay of President Coolidge in securing, either by direct request or diplomatic suggestion, the retirement of the Attorney General was injurious to his own political prospects. To some extent this may be true, but the President has felt that in a case of this character a measure of deliberation and caution should be observed. Despite the former Attorney General's description of the request for his resignation as "cowardice and surrender of principle" general opinion will be that the President acted wisely after perhaps too generous a period of restraint.

Mr. T. K. Wallace, of the Price pike, near Florence was a business visitor to Burlington, last Tuesday having business before the Fiscal Court. He made this office a pleasant call and had the date of his subscription moved up a couple of notches. Mr. Wallace came to Boone county about four years ago from Honaker, Southwest Virginia. He bought what is known as the Albert Price farm. He is a very pleasant gentleman and an entertaining talker.

The trustees of Florence Graded School will hold a meeting at the school house in Florence, Tuesday night, April 16th at 7:30 o'clock to discuss the proposition of building a new school house. Everybody interested is invited to be present.

The Boone County Foultry Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the court house in Burlington, Wednesday afternoon April 16th.

Dave Akin, a well known Boone county citizen, died at the home of his daughter in Ohio, Tuesday. He will be buried at Grant, Ky., today (Thursday).

Martha Eleanor Aylor

Martha Eleanor Aylor, daughter of Wesley and Eleanor Rice, was born January 20, 1854 departed this life March 25 1924, aged 70 years, 2 months and 5 days.
She was united in marriage to Robert K. Aylor Jan. 18, 1873.
To this union was born one daughter Matilda E. Pope.
She leaves to mourn her death her husband, daughter, son-in-law and two grandchildren Sheridan and Mabel Pope. She also leaves three sisters, Mrs. J. D. Acra of Burlington, Ky., Mrs. Roxana Aylor of Walton and Mrs. Oetha Humphreys of Huntington, West Virginia, and two brothers Joshua and George Rice of this county and a number of nieces and nephews and a host of friends.
One sister, Mrs. Matilda E. Walton, preceded her to the grave March 24, 1882.
She united with the Baptist church at St. Mary's Ill., at the age of 17 and later transferred her membership to Middle creek church, now as Bellevue church of which she was a good and faithful member as long as her health would permit.
Another sweet and beautiful life has gone home, her loved ones feel that she is happier and we are all made better in heart and in soul when we reflect on her beautiful life, and while she has gone from among us the memory of her undying friendship and her Christian service will linger with us like a dream of heaven.
Card of Thanks—We wish to extend our appreciation to our many neighbors and friends who were so kind to us during the illness and death of our loved one. Especially do we wish to thank Brother Miller for his consoling words, Mrs. Martin for the beautiful solo, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Acra for flowers and Mr. C. Scott Chambers for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.
R. K. Aylor and Daughter.

SOME FACTS ABOUT OIL

There seems to be a fierce international scramble among all civilized nations for oil. Iron, coal silver and gold receive but little attention comparatively, and the freer on the part of the people to get rich quick has become more pronounced, more general and more unprofitable than in all other communities combined.
No one has yet computed or compiled the aggregate of the worthless oil stocks that have been foisted on the foolish during the past 10 years. But men who know most about it consider it very easy to say that for every cent made by the few great operators, sharpers have taken a dollar from the pockets of simple minded people.
The head of a pioneer concern in the business and discoverer of half a dozen virgin pools, declares that the oil game is not worth the candle and does not pay. He told the American Petroleum Institute not long ago that out of the twelve billions legitimately invested in oil in a business-like way by oil men in America, only seven and one-half billions has been returned through the sale of commercial oil.
During the thirty years past in the producing end of the oil game there have been a scant score of spectacular successes. But hundreds and thousands have failed with aggregate losses immensely exceeding the gains of the fortunate few.
Out of the two billion acres of land in the United States there are reasons known to geologists why the vast mass of it is "off structure" and either cannot or probably will not produce oil. This leaves about four million acres where it is reasonably possible that the drill may tap an oil sand. But the chances that it will be about one to twenty, and this ratio is so wide that the game thus far and as a whole has not paid.
No good oil property ever existed that needed to be sold to the public. Every such concern can get all the money it needs from men who know. Most of the oil stock victims are of a class of people who would invest their money in a perpetual motion machine or some equally visionary enterprise, if represented by a smooth-tongued salesman with a few blue-prints.
Geo. H. Woods, President Kentucky Farm Bureau, St. James Apartments, Bowling Green, Ky.
Dear Sir:
Our Association wishes to submit to you the following questions:
Do you claim that the $75,000,000 bond issue will impose additional taxation upon the farmer, and if so, what is the basis of your claim?
We are informed that the re-payment of a loan of $750 from a Federal Land Bank covering a period of 34 years, requires total interest payments of $931.31.
Is this "unproductive" interest, or is it good business for the farmer?
Is the Government to be blamed for encouraging that sort of farm financing, or is it to be commended?
Inasmuch as this subject is a matter of general interest, we will take the liberty of sending a copy of these questions to the press, and trust that you will do the same with any reply that you may see fit to make.
Respectfully,
Kentucky Good Roads Association.

In the face of all the crookedness among public officials and individuals throughout the country, it is encouraging to know that we have one man right here in our midst who is true to every trust with the bootlegger who sell him moonshine, but untrue to himself to the extent that he is willing to serve a term in jail and pay a stiff fine rather than let his bootlegger friend pay the penalty. We compliment Judge Colvin upon his determination to break up this hellish business. It takes nerve to send an old friend to jail, but he puts the responsibility in plain English, and lets the buyer of moonshine whisky choose between jail or liberty. There is no sympathy whatever for a man past seventy years of age going to jail to protect a bootlegger.—Falmouth Outlook.

Last Sunday was a regular April day—sunshine, hail, rain and cold.

First Turkey in England
Tradition has it that the first turkey was taken to England from America by one of Sebastian Cabot's chief lieutenants. This is supported by the fact that William Strickland, who accompanied Cabot on several of his voyages, adopted a turkey rampant as his crest on being granted arms in 1494.

This and That.

It's practice that builds—not theory.

A reasonable degree of caution is a part of true bravery.

The average man is honest, or at least he thinks he is.

Idle words, like idle hands, are a drag on the market.

Washington is no place for a man suffering with shell shock.

Honesty comes in two varieties—the real and the make-believe.

When you are killing time don't forget that time is killing you.

A girl with many suitors never gets over it when she marries and finds she has to be satisfied with one.

Most places that are nice to settle down in get that way because the inhabitants are in the habit of settling up.

Many a girl makes a fellow think she is interested in his welfare, when what she really wants to hear is his farewell.

The girl who gads gets the lads, but she who stays at home and slaves is not likely to draw a knife for a husband.

DOINGS IN KENTUCKY.

The Republican nomination for United States Senator was made in the statewide primary election to be conducted Saturday, August 2, as decided by the Republican State Committee at the meeting here last Thursday.

The decision to conduct the primary election was a victory for Judge B. J. Bethrum of Somerset, over the supporters of Fred M. Sackett, of Louisville, who tried to obtain a convention.

The fight that was waged through the Legislature between the advocates of the $75,000,000 bond issue for roads and other improvements, and the "pay-as-you-go-plan" continues and will reach a new stage next Thursday when the opponents of the bond issue will conduct a meeting in Louisville to organize their fight.

District conventions to select delegates were conducted throughout the state during the week. The kinship between the anti-Cantrell forces in the Democratic primary election and the bond opponents is revealed again in the results of these conventions, the anti-Cantrell forces are prominent everywhere.

The district meeting in Louisville was poorly attended. Not more than 50 were present, while 60 delegates were named to attend the state convention, ten more than were present at the meeting.

John Junior Howe, of Corrollton, continues the only announced candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. Senator A. O. Stanley has not made his formal declaration.

Commonwealth's Attorney W. C. Hamilton, of Mt. Sterling, had been reported as having proposed to run for the Senate. He issued a statement during the week that he will not be a candidate to succeed Stanley, but that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1926.

William R. Belknap, who represented the Oldham-Trimble District in the Legislature, and who was the author of Kentucky's rat modern inheritance law, gained national recognition as an authority on the subject. He was invited to speak on it April 5th before the Academy of Political Science. On the program with him was Herbert Hoover, Dr. Thomas C. Adams, of Yale author of the Federal Income Tax Law, Dr. Edwin R. Seligman of Columbia University and Dr. David Friday.

FEEDS AND THEIR USE SUBJECT OF BULLETIN

Without the conservation and utilization in stock feeds of the various by-products obtained in the manufacture of human foods and the return of these foods to the human by feeding them to animals and to the soil we might face a good shortage and pay prohibitive prices for our foods according to a statement contained in the new bulletin 249, Feeds and Their Use—Inspection and Analysis just issued by the Kentucky Experiment Station. The complexity and the great importance of the stock feed industry, according to the report is just beginning to be realized.

Scientific feeding of animals in the United States dates back only fifty years and since its introduction this study has gradually grown in interest and importance. Along with scientific feeding has naturally followed scientific preparation of feeds and with that such regulatory laws as exist in Kentucky for inspection and analysis of feeds. By a system of tagging the Kentucky Feed Control Department designates the various feeds as "straight" or those made from one grain, combination or those composed of two or more grains or plants and a third division largely composed of material which has little or no feeding value.

Care must be exercised by the feeder in selecting his feeds, for the value of a feed depends upon that portion of the nutrient which has animal can under ordinary conditions digest and take into its system for producing growth, keeping up the heat and energy and repairing the natural waste of the body. Special recommendations for the stockman are:

Ascertain what the animals need and what will supply these needs. In doubt consult the Experiment Station. Buy no feed not properly registered and tagged with an official tag.

High grade feeds are the most economical. Cheap, inferior, and unbalanced feeds do not furnish the animal with proper nourishment and thus result in hardship to the animal and loss to the owner. The purchaser should base his conclusions regarding the value of this feed upon the amount of digestible nutrients (as shown by the feed analysis) and the digestibility of the feed in the bulletin.

Bulletin 249, Feeds and Their Use, is available for free distribution and may be obtained by request to the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, Lexington.

Balm of Gilead
Balm of Gilead is a yellowish sap-like gum, collected from certain Arabian and Assyrian trees. It has always been valued in the East for its medicinal qualities.

THE ATMOSPHERE OF SUCCESS.

If some day you saw a merchant clearing out some old equipment from his store, and putting in new and stylish fittings you might ask him what he was spending all that money for. It might appear as if the new outfit would not give him any more space or permit his store to hold any more goods.

But he would probably say, I need these new things to give my store the atmosphere of success. The old stuff looked behind the times. I am putting out fine goods, and I want a setting for them that will seem in keeping with them. Otherwise people might gain a wrong impression of the character of my business.

If you asked a merchant who advertises consistently as to why he spends that money, he would name various reasons. One of them quite likely would be somewhat along the line suggested above. He might truly remark, that advertising gives a business an atmosphere of success.

When a store advertises freely, it conveys the impression that its managers are hustling and energetic people, who are never satisfied with what they have been able to achieve in the past, but who are always pushing out to bigger things, and who have faith that their trade can be largely increased if they will strive for it.

That kind of impression helps a business, just as a new outfit of window fittings and show cases and store furniture ought to help it. It makes it look as if a business was going ahead at a rapid rate.

It would take considerable time for people to go through the stores of a city and make exhaustive studies of the lines and prices carried by the various places, so that they are governed to a large extent by the impressions given by such matters as equipment and advertising.

FARM GARDEN IS MOST PROFITABLE LAND

A vegetable garden for five persons which will furnish vegetables from the end of one year to the beginning of another will cost only seven dollars for seed and will return $290 worth of vegetables. Such is the statement made by J. S. Gardner, gardening specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. In addition to this return, which is estimated at $800 per acre, the vegetable garden means better health for the entire family, for the budget garden includes for table use, storage and canning.

"Successful gardens," says Mr. Gardner, "depend largely on the efficient use of space, which means keeping the garden busy the summer through in a plan which is called successive cropping. A few examples of this show how it may be accomplished. Spinach is planted first and when it has been used beans are planted, the beans in turn to be followed by late baby beets. Peas followed by beans, and by spinach, early potatoes by spinach peas by late tomatoes, beans by beans, early beets by beans spinach by late beets onions by beans, radishes and lettuce by late corn, and early cabbage followed by turnips or eteues, are other combinations that may be used to advantage.

"Another means of conserving space in the garden is the grouping of vegetables in such a way that they do not compete with one another. The following vegetables make excellent companions: Early cabbage with lettuce and adishes; peas and late tomatoes, corn and late adishes; cress and onions adishes and parsnips and radishes and carrots."

Plans for the budget garden showing the exact amount of seed required for a five person garden and the kind of seed to plant may be obtained from the Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington.

Slowest Drying Color

Vandyke brown is one of the slowest drying colors known to the painter, and should always be mixed with plenty of Japan drier.

GRAVE DANGER IN THE SOFT PEDAL.

It is an unfortunate fact that in the general revulsion of feeling created by the exposures at Washington there has been a tendency to condemn men who were innocent of any moral turpitude, but whose names have been dragged into the inquiry because of their personal association with others not so guiltless. But admitting all this, shall the very apparent effort to put a stop to the investigations and to soft-pedal their publicity along this line be approved?

Newspapers which have reveled in the publication of page reports of the inquiry now declare it nauseating, and insist that it shall be discontinued while prominent figures in official life raise their voices in protest against further investigation.

Old-timers in politics, however, will be inclined to see in this sudden desire to put a quietus upon the investigation activities of Congress a suggestion that perhaps those inculcations have reached a point at which there is real danger that some of the vital importance, affecting "the man higher up" is likely to be revealed.

Cleaning the Augean stables was never described as a savory task. No house, whether it be individual or governmental was ever put in order without raising a good deal of dust, and involving the necessity of throwing out a lot of unserviceable furniture. It is the plain duty of those who have embarked upon these investigations to see that the point at which shall no longer be any mystery left undetermined. To abandon any of them now would be to leave individuals of more or less prominence in the public service under the burden of suspicion, based upon partial evidence.

What is important is that the truth should be known concerning the men who are exercising the functions of government at Washington and concerning the forces, political financial or personal that have put them in the places which they now fill.

PRESERVING CHARM

To be a grandmother and yet preserve the lovely skin and charm of youth is the duty of every woman, according to a famous actress, who is not a grandmother, but who has tried to look like a girl of twenty, though she is three times that age.

"It is an antiquated idea that the ravages of advancing years should play havoc with a woman's beauty," she says. And again: "No woman of sixty or more advanced years need be without that beauty and charm of youth if she will but use the aids of beauty preservation at her disposal."

Methods of preserving the bloom of youth are not enumerated, but the actress probably counted this as wasted words because no home is complete without that which brings the red glow to the cheek and beautiful lustre to the hair.

And the subject of hair is not even mentioned. Whether it is essential that grandmother have her gray locks bobbed in order to essay the roll of grand daughter is probably regarded as trivial, because the modern omnia who never lets any grass grow under her feet, likewise never permits any hair to grow on her head.

There may come a day, of course, when every flapper will know her own grandmother. Those who control the destinies of the weaker sex after that it will be worn long again next winter, and when that day comes the charm of youth may still be retained, even though the hair may be worn in a knot on the top of the head.

Methods of preserving beauty may have their part in the scheme of building on to youth, but they are unavailing unless the vitality is preserved by clean living and good thoughts.

WHY THIS SOLICITUDE?

A writer in an advertising publication says that a large mail order house is trying to find out why farm products which net the man who raises them little or no profit, are sold to the ultimate consumer at prices which are prohibitive.

He goes on to say that this investigation may disclose the fact that the retail grocer, who in the small town insists that he is the true friend of the farmer and in the city poses as the friend of the consumer, may be a swindler in rather unfavorable light. But (naming the mail order house) will not lose any sleep if that happens, he continues. The retailer is no friend of theirs.

But did it ever occur to the mail order house, whose defender is bluntly honest about the mail order house attitude towards the retailer, that if it were not for the retailer, there would likely not be any prosperous communities from which the mail order houses could take their pound of flesh.

People gather together in towns and small cities such as ours, build what we call homes and dwell together in peace and harmony. Each man has his part in the community life. Some are retailers, some are professional men, some till the soil and others work at trades.

Certainly people would not establish homes, build streets and school houses and churches and the other adjuncts of community life, if there were not some retailers to supply their daily wants.

They could not depend on mail order houses in far distant cities that pose as friends of the people, yet exact a toll that yields immense profits for their stockholders.

Retailers are as necessary in community life as any other body of citizens and they know that the mail order houses, which beguile their customers with fine descriptions and misleading statements regarding articles, are no friends of their; neighbors are they friends of the people to whom they sell their goods.

The retailer is accountable to the people who trade with him. He is at the same stand every day if his customers feel that they have not had fair treatment as to price or quality they know where to make complaint. He is interested in everything that is for the best interests of the community. He pays taxes and helps support churches, schools public improvements and every other worthwhile enterprise.

The mail order house, which has taken such a concern in the welfare of the farmer, has no interest in this community or any other aside from how much revenue it will produce. The mail order house does not pay a cent towards educating our children, building up our streets or public buildings; in fact, contributes nothing to the community.

They take money from the community and add nothing in return. Their solicitude for the farmer is almost pathetic. It must be that business is not so good—else why this sudden interest in the source of big profits.

Dr. Henderson of the Harvard Medical School says that a thousand pump in the human anatomy propels half a ton of blood through the heart every hour. This goes on every minute during life. The only time the strain on this pump is eased is during sleep. Relaxation of muscles and the horizontal position makes the work easier. He urges a rest of 20 minutes in mid-day and early evenings as an aid to prolong life.

OATS ANT RAPE

MAKE EARLY PASTURE.

Pork producers should take steps at once to help out the pasture problem which has been made so acute this year by excessive winter-killing and should plant at once a forage crop of rape and oats mixed.

Spring pasture according to E. S. Good, Chairman of the Department of Animal Husbandry, of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, Pastures will be especially helpful this year in keeping down cost of production because grain is exceptionally high in price, he says.

"Practically all wheat and barley is dead," says Prof. Good discussing the situation, "but where rye was drilled last fall it has withstood the winter freezes and it can soon be used for the first grazing. Rye broadcasted last fall, however, did not seem to stand the freezing nearly as well. Although when the warm days come the drilled rye will grow rapidly, the rye pasture should be followed with a mixture of oats and rape; oats to be sown at the rate of one and one-half bushels per acre and Dwarf Essex rape sown at the rate of 7 pounds per acre. As these are both cool weather plants they can be planted as soon as it is safe to work the ground. Heavy seeding is preferred to light because the heavy will result in finer plants which the hogs will relish more and digest easier than coarse plants. In addition a thick seeding produces more pasture."

"Pasture will just about maintain a hog in weight, and it requires about one half of a full grain ration to do the same. While this readily shows the value of forage for hogs, grain is also needed, and one can never realize as much from grain as when it is fed to young pigs on pasture. As high as 18 pounds of pork have been produced per bushel of corn fed to pigs on good pasture. Thus even on pasture the hog should be fed about three-fourths as much grain as it will eat unless it is being pushed for an early market, when a full grain ration is required."

TEACHING CHILDREN

TO DRINK MILK.

In teaching child health the mother is urged to give her children clean cow's milk from the time they are weaned. The child under two years of age should have at least a pint and a half a day. After two years he should have a quart of milk a day; this he may drink or the milk may be used in soups or cream sauce for vegetables.

Often mothers say, "please tell me how I can get my child to drink milk—he simply does not like it and will not drink it." One reason children will not drink milk is that adults remark before children that they themselves do not like milk; therefore the children decide that they do not like it either. Another reason is that mothers make the statement that Mary or Johnny will not drink milk and that she cannot make them. It is natural that these children fulfill their mother's expectations. It is better not to try to force a child to drink milk; try to teach him to enjoy drinking it. This may be done by letting the child drink thru straws or having the milk slightly warm—often children will not drink cold milk. Sometimes if a child is given his milk in a small pitcher and allowed to pour it out into his cup, he will drink it better. He can make some of this by seeing how many times he can fill his cup and empty it. Some mothers find that making a weak cocoa for breakfast will break the monotony of drinking plain milk. For supper milk toast made with the entire glass of milk and but little toast is another way to teach the child to drink milk.

The best way to train a child to drink milk is to give it to him in his bottle before he is weaned as a substitute for one feeding. By gradually weaning the baby he will acquire a "taste" for milk. Never remark before him that he does not like milk; the thought that he is expected to dislike milk must never be implanted in the child's mind.

FARMS MUST EARN MORE

There are several reasons why farm earnings are showing a decline partially to economic discontent and political agitation.

Statistics show that large numbers of tenant farmers are being driven out of farm earnings toward becoming farm owners but the process is slow and one of considerable difficulty.

Increase in valuation of farm land has two effects; purchasers can borrow more money to meet payments but higher prices for land discourage tenants from buying.

Desirability of farm land is not enhanced by too much academic discussion about employing family labor without wages or underestimating the value of such labor.

All reports show that tenants or farm owners have same sized families and largely employing farm labor on the land are more prosperous and successful than farm operators without families.

Where the tenant has no family labor from which to increase his margin of return over necessary expenditures he carries an additional handicap in this struggle to become a farm owner.

The same general fact holds true with those who own farms but are compelled to employ all their labor at present prevailing high wages.

EFFICIENCY AND HAPPINESS.

Henry Ford is responsible to a great extent for the "efficiency craze" in manufacturing and distribution. Large corporations have installed salesmanship schools in which every possible argument against the firm's product is discussed until a prospective customer couldn't raise an objection that wouldn't be answered immediately by the glib tongue of the salesman.

Tanneries are equipped to turn out only one kind of leather; cotton mills are reducing the colors from 900 to 44. We used to have 66 styles of paving bricks, now there are 6. Chinaware was made over 700 varieties; now only a third of that number are made. The sizes of blankets are reduced from 76 to 12. Tanks for hot water were made in 250 sizes; hereafter there will be only 50. Bolts were made in over a thousand sizes; these are now standardized for various purposes and reduced in number over 5 per cent. Lumber men have agreed on standard yard-sizes, classification and shipping weights. And so it goes all along the line.

It's not many years since people laughed at the efficiency experts who came forward and demonstrated how to drive a nail with three strokes of the hammer instead of half a dozen or so. Similarly, men were shown how to carry more bricks on a hod.

To meet this competition the farmer must adopt more efficient systems of production and distribution. The loss between the farm and the kitchen each year amounts to more than the sale value of all the product.

We may not be any happier because of efficient methods but certainly it is fan's life has been extended ten years—and that may be doubted. What's the answer.

This new spring coat discloses style points favored by the mode, in its woolly fabric, indistinct stripes, wide fastening, ample collar and cuffs—all contributing the desired sports flavor to the design. Colors include all shades of brown, beige and gray.

PLANT VEGETABLES FOR VITAMINES

That a garden during the summer, and fall is not only a help in cutting down the food bills but a health insurance we cannot afford to overlook is the statement made by Miss Eleanor Enright, foods and nutrition specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The great value of the vegetables according to the specialist lies in their content of vitamins.

"No one who has read the papers during the past several years has escaped hearing about vitamins," says Miss Enright, "but the question naturally arises regarding what the vitamins do and where they may be obtained. Vitamins are essential factors in our food stuffs which stimulate growth, guard our bodies against disease, and promote general good health. We must eat to live and we must know where to obtain the best supply of vitamins. One vitamin occurs largely in all leafy vegetables, in tomatoes and in oranges and lemons. However, as we cannot eat enough of green food to supply all our needs we must plan to include in our diet a generous supply of whole milk because of the growth stimulating vitamin which occurs in butter fat."

"At this time of year when people are thinking of gardens it is well to remember that about the best garden life-insurance is lettuce, and lettuce not only in the early summer, but all through the year for it can be easily taken care of in a frame during the cold weather. Tomatoes are easily grown, easily prepared, easily digested and from the standpoint of vitamins are perhaps our most valuable vegetable."

USE MORE LIME FOR MORE PROFITS

That Kentucky can turn its rocks into profit by grinding the limestone and applying it to the fields to increase the production of crops at a lower cost is the statement of S. C. Jones, soils specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. He points out that whereas only 60,000 tons of limestone were used last year over 500,000 tons should be put on this year and the goal set for the cropping system should be one acre of legumes in each four acres of cultivated land.

Not only does ground limestone alone produce results, but it augments the use of acid phosphate. Results from experiments over a long interval of time show that the net profits obtained by the application of ground limestone alone was $16.80 per acre per rotation while the profits with limestone and acid phosphate were $30.22 per acre per rotation.

On six of the oldest Experiment fields outside of the Bluegrass region in a rotation of corn, soybeans, wheat and clover Mr. Jones shows results which prove the limestone treatment to have increased the yield on corn 6.8 bushels an acre, soybeans 66.2 pounds an acre, wheat nearly 2 bushels, and clover 910 pounds an acre. Thus the beneficial effects of limestone are evident not only on legumes but on grain and cultivated crops as well. These statistics are gathered as an average of 58 corn crops, 53 soybean crops, 42 wheat crops and 41 clover crops. The same experiment almost identical results are obtained by combining ground limestone and acid phosphate. The profit obtained by applying ground limestone to the land treated with acid phosphate was $30.22 per acre per rotation while the profit obtained by applying limestone alone to an ordinary soil was $16.80 per acre per rotation.

More limestone, more legumes, more acid phosphate are the recommendations urged by the soil specialist to help improve the crop-growing capacity of Kentucky soils.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

James O'Malley, of Verona, has been officially accepted by authorities at Fifth Corps Area headquarters, Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio to attend the Citizen's Military Training Camp at Camp Knox, Ky., for one month, beginning July 2.

He has responded to the government's first constructive training to train American youth for better citizenship; teaching the importance of preparedness, of strong physical development of young manhood, inculcating the principles of team work and discipline, and fostering a lofty patriotism and devotion to American ideals.

Considered even from a purely selfish viewpoint, he could not find a more advantageous training of great benefit in improving his mind and body than he will receive without cost at the C. M. T. camp. A boy cannot hope to achieve success without the essential fundamentals of life which are taught each year at Camp Knox, Ky. and for such a vital knowledge, Camp Knox is unsurpassed by any school or summer camp, no matter how expensive and exclusive.

Farmers are mostly occupied with plowing at this time. In passing thru the country one sees large fields already plowed and, in those that are not, numbers of teams may be seen at work. Farmers say the ground is in splendid condition for the time of the year and look forward to an unusually seasonably planting time. There is still some little doubt in the minds of the farmers concerning tobacco acreage, some believing that the less grown the better for the county, but believing that he should grow a little, and farmers say that by the time every farmer, even those who talk of cutting down the crop, grow the little, they think it due them that the amount grown will be approximately what has been the county's average for several years.

An increasing number of farmers are finding five or six good dairy cows as profitable as their tobacco crop was on the average before they made the acquaintance of the dairy cow and the cream can. With many from these cows they are able to make more and better tobacco on the same acreage. Moreover, they never hear such farmers knocking the tobacco association because they have not received their third payment. They have something to sell every week, live on a cash basis, and can get along for a long time without tobacco money.
